The stars rolled up a record score of war bond sales and carried an impelling message for the purchase of extra war bonds to 213 cities, totaling more than 50,000,000 population, and to dozens of smaller towns and suburbs for a new record in territory covered by such tours.

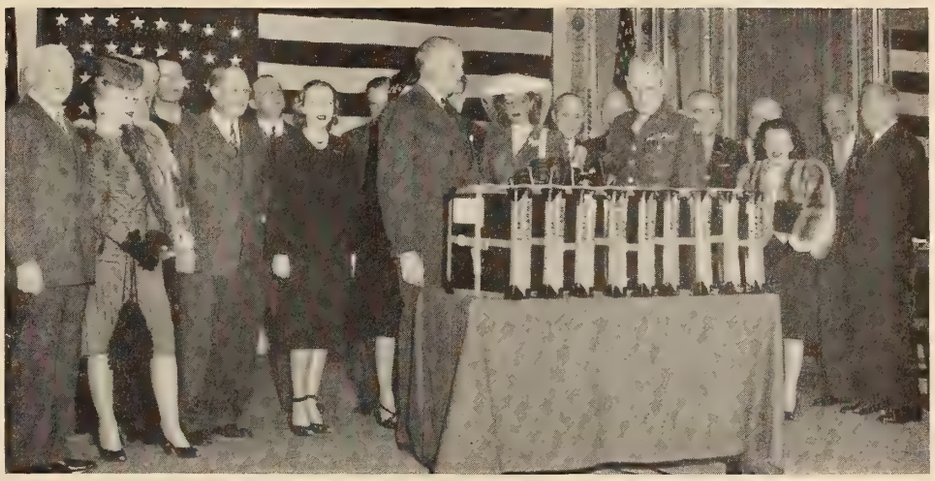
They did a tremendous job, not only in stimulating bond sales in the communities visited, but also in actual sales of individual bonds, according to reports that have reached the industry's national headquarters.

No accurate total figures on bonds sold as a direct result of star visits in various communities is available at present but results by local War Finance groups indicate this to be the most successful star participation since inception of the war loans.

Since January 28 the thirty-four stars, who served as Bondbardiers, and the twenty, who headed Bond Battalions, have appeared individually, by twos and by threes in all the important cities across the United States. They talked to hundreds of thousands of workmen in coastal ship yards, steel mills, munitions factories, industrial plants in the mid-west, factories in the far west and to civic gatherings in every state in the Union. The scope of their bond-selling job surpassed all previous bond selling efforts by film players.

Credit for handling these unprecedented tours goes to Fred Stein, assistant national campaign director, who had over-all charge, Hall Baetz, who directed the Bondbardiers and to Dick Dickson, who had charge of the Bond Battalions, both of whom worked closely with Barry Buchanan, treasury department liaison. All arrangements for players were made through the Hollywood Victory Committee.

Hall Baetz, who had charge of these tours, reports that the cooperation of exhibitors and treasury department officials was most enthusiastic in every city.



While the final figures for the bond sales turned in by the Bondbardiers have not yet been compiled, reports reaching Fred Stein indicate exceptional sales in "E" bonds, in every city visited by the stars.

Nevinson's Bond Auction

War bonds amounting to $25,000 were auctioned off at a bond rally held last week at the Bromley Theatre, Philadeplhia, according to Manager Joe Nevinson. Rally was sponsored by neighborhood merchants who offered 15 prizes, including three pairs of nylon stockings, to the high bidders.

$25,000 War Bond Pledge

The Motion Picture Associates of Philadelphia has pledged $25,000 in war bonds to be purchased by its membership during the 4th Loan drive.

At a special ceremony held last week at the Waldorf-Astoria, George J. Schaefer, War Activities Committee chairman, presented Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Commanding General, Army Service Forces, with the 10,000th gift film for free showing to servicemen stationed in combat areas overseas. Seen in the large group above, besides Schaefer, and Somervell, are Herman Gluckman, Anne Baxter, Fredric March, Ralph Bellamy, W. C. Michel, S. H. Fabian, Vera Zorina, Francis S. Harmon, Phyllis Brooks, N. Peter Rathvon, J. Robert Rubin, Col. Kirk B. Lawton, Barney Balaban, Nancy Walker, Arthur Mayer and Y. Frank Freeman. Also presented were 10 additional films to inaugurate second gift of 10,000.

Kiddies' Bond Premiere, Police Bond Show Among War Loan Activities of Showmen

Reports on interesting, productive activities in connection with the Fourth War Loan drive continued to reach WAC headquarters in New York this week. Some of them follow:

Gloversville, N. Y. Manager Lou Hart of Schine's Glove Theatre is staging a special bond premiere exclusively for children on Lincoln's birthday. Special subjects have been booked for the occasion. First ticket purchaser was a small boy who exchanged 7500 pennies for a hundred-dollar bond. All children who complete their stamp books or buy bonds will receive tickets to the show.

Philadelphia. Newest wrinkle in bond premieres here is a police bond premiere to be held February 15 at the Aldine. All who have bought bonds from the Bureau of Police will be admitted to the show. It is not an uncommon sight these days to see policemen busy making out bond applications rather than parking tickets. The Mayor and high police officials have guaranteed a sell-out of the 1400-seat Aldine.

Buffalo. Harry Yette, Riverside Theatre manager, contacts potential bond buyers via a personal note in which he reminds them that their 3rd War Loan purchase was deeply appreciated . . . then goes on to urge them to do better in the 4th War Loan. Yette got the names from the stubs of the bonds he sold during the last campaign.

Pittsburgh. When the Regent Theatre ran a bond auction, odd articles turned up. Some of the oddest: pre-war pipe, musical cocktail shaker, birdcage, mustard jar, gallon of Simonize fluid, two pairs of nylons, man's hat, case of grapefruit juice, roller skates, one salami.

Harrisburg, Pa. A group of War Mothers here have banded together in a "Blue Star Brigade" and set up their headquarters in the town's leading department store to sell bonds, which are being issued through local theatres.

Oneontah, N. Y. Harold deGraw, manager of Schine's Oneontah Theatre, has an "in" with his local civic organizations. When the Legion, Elks and similar groups ran a 4th War Loan rally for the theatre, they not only put on a big show, but took newspaper ads far in advance.

Yaka Hula Bondsmen

Way out in the Pacific, where Bonds for Bombs has real meaning, folks are snapping up the "E" series like hot cakes.

From Honolulu, War Activities 4th War Loan campaign headquarters has received the "Scintillating Seven" already sold out for bond premieres. They are: The Queen, the Roosevelt, the King, the Palace, the Golden Wall and the International.

Oscar Wins Wager as Loew's Dime Collections Exceed RKO's

During a recent junket in the interest of the theatres' 1944 March of Dimes campaign, Loew's Oscar Doob and RKO's Eddie Alperson engaged in a lot of good-natured kidding concerning the virtues of their respective circuits, which have been traditional rivals. Doob, publicly, bet Alperson $100 that Loew's Theatres would show a greater percentage of increase in collections over 1943 than RKO. The slide-rule boys reveal that Loew's (with $441,348) showed an increase of 108 per cent, while RKO (with $213,598) showed 99.6 per cent. On a seat-for-seat basis, Loew's collected $1.42 per seat, RKO $1.12.

The March of Dimes is the real winner, as pal Oscar has turned over his $100 winnings to the fund.

Almost Twice as Much

March of Dimes collections in Warner Philadelphia area theatres totaled almost twice as much this year as last year, according to Ted Schlanger, zone manager. Warner theatres in this area collected $115,526.71 as against last year's $64,331.01.

The Box Office Slant

The Ghost That Walks Alone

Columbia Mystery-Comedy 61 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 10th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A mystery-comedy that misses fire.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A program offering.

Cast: Arthur Lake, Janis Carter, Lynne Roberts, Frank Sully, Warren Ashe, Arthur Space, Barbara Brown, Matt Willis, Isa Moore, Jack Lee, Paul Hurst, Robert Williams, John Tyrrell. Credits: Directed by Lew Landers. Screenplay by Clarence Upson Young. Based on a novel by Richard Shattuck. Director of photography, L. W. O'Connell. Produced by Jack Fier.

Plot: To get some new ideas to present to their sponsor, the members of a radio "strip" show seek recluse at a mountain lodge. There the sound effects man, just married, becomes involved in the murder. To prevent unsavory resulting publicity, they hide the body and attempt to solve the murder themselves. Detectives, who have been notified of the killing via the receipt of the body in the sound effects box, arrive in time to catch the culprit before another killing occurs.

Comment: Here we have a mystery-comedy with Arthur Lake, without his Penny Singleton of the Blondie series. The result is a program offering of minor strength; one that will need a strong topper. The efforts of the cast, and the director, to overcome a weak script, come to little avail. The laughs, which arise, are brought out through sheer doggedness on the part of everyone involved in making something of what they had. Arthur Lake, Lynn Roberts, Janis Carter and others in the cast are satisfactory in their respective roles. Picture was directed by Lew Landers and produced by Jack Fier.

Passage to Marseille

Warner Brothers War Drama 110 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Thrills, spectacle and realism to hold audience attention from beginning to end.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should duplicate the box-office success of other timely Warner films. Humphrey Bogart, now enjoying strong popularity, and the supporting cast names have definite box-office value.

Cast: Humphrey Bogart, Michele Morgan, Claude Rains, Philip Dorn, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, John Loder, George Tobias, Vladimir Sokoloff, Edward Ciannelli. Konstantin Shayne, Helmut Dantine, Louis Mercier, Monte Blue, Stephen Richards, Hans Conreid, Frederick Brunn, Billy Roy, Charles La Torre. Credits: Produced by Hal B. Wallis. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Screenplay by Casey Robinson and Jack Moffitt. From a novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall. Director of photography, James Wong Howe. Special effects by Edwin DuPar, director, and Jack Cosgrove. Art direction, Carl Jules Weyl. Music by Max Steiner. Technical advisor, Sylvain Robert.

Plot: At a camouflaged airport in England, Claude Rains, liaison officer, tells an American newspaper reporter the story of the Fighting French bomber squadron based there. His story begins at the outbreak of World War II when, as an air corps officer, he was ordered back to France from New Caledonia. Victor Francen, captain of the French Freighter on which Rains sails, is kindly and humane, while Sydney Greenstreet, professional army man, hates the Republic and admires fascism. During the voyage, the freighter picks up five escaped convicts—Humphrey Bogart, Philip Dorn, Peter Lorre, Helmut Dantine and George Tobias—who had escaped from Devil's Island. News of France's surrender provokes a crisis aboard ship; Capt. Francen alters the course so its freight of nickel ore won't fall into Nazi hands. When Greenstreet learns this, he heads a mutiny. During a free-for-all, Bogart and the convicts overpower the mutineers, but not before the ship's position has been radioed to a German bomber which attacks, does great damage, but is finally shot down by Bogart. This ends Rains' story. He concludes by showing the newspaperman how the various Frenchmen are fighting the Nazis now. When Fighting French bombers return from a mission, Bogart is found dead. An undelivered letter to his son is read at his funeral rites. It concludes: "Remember this: France lives. Vive la France!"

Comment: "Passage to Marseille" seems likely to duplicate the box-office success of other timely Warner films such as "Air Force," "Action in the North Atlantic," "Casablanca," "Destination Tokyo," etc. While its emotional appeal, based on French patriotism, may not be completely convincing, its action-packed story will hold any audience's attention. For thrills and spectacle; for realism and action, the Warners have again "shot the works," so that, for example, the theatre itself fairly shakes during the attack of a Nazi bomber on a French freighter. The story is told via flashbacks, with a flashback injected in another flashback; ordinarily, this procedure might be too confusing, but it's so expertly done in this instance, and the tale is so absorbing that the spectator cannot lose the thread of the story. There is romance, between Humphrey Bogart and Michele Morgan, but it takes second place to the film's patriotic theme; whether or not this will lessen the appeal for women, whether or not the picture is too grim and realistic for feminine tastes is a matter of conjecture. From Bogart on down, performances are first-rate, but a touching bit by Vladimir Sokoloff stands out. Apparently no expense has been spared by Producer Hal Wallis to infuse the picture with realness and actuality, and Michael Curtiz' direction succeeds in fulfilling the intrinsic nature of this intention, though faltering slightly in establishing a true emotional understanding between the characters and the audience. With Allied invasion from the west not far in the offing, and with it the liberation of France, "Passage to Marseille" may prove to be another timely Warner scoop. But regardless of developments on world battlefronts, it should find large, responsive audiences and waiting queues in front of most theatres.

The Vigilantes Ride

Columbia Western 55 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 3rd)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Action, and more action for the outdoor fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good western for any spot.

Cast: Russell Hayden, Dub Taylor, Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys, Shirley Patterson, Tristram Coffin, Jack Rockwell, Robert Kortman, Dick Botiller, Jack Kirk, Stanley Brown. Credits: Directed by William Berke. Story and screenplay by Ed Earl Repp. Director of photography, Benjamin Kline. Produced by Leon Barsha.

Plot: An Arizona Ranger and his kid brother are on the trail of a gang of outlaws who have been robbing and killing the citizens of the town and the surrounding territory. When the kid brother is killed during a mine holdup, the Ranger resigns, joins the outlaw gang and then gets enough evidence to see that justice prevails.

Comment: Action, and more action, makes this western a good bet for any spot where the series action films are popular. It also has some good western ballading by Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys and the comedy of Dub "Cannonball" Taylor. Russell Hayden is okay as the Ranger who leaves his troupe to find his kid brother's killer. Plot, though familiar to most sagebrush followers, has enough of what it takes to satisfy these addicts. Picture is kept moving under William Berke's able direction. Shirley Patterson plays the rancher's daughter and Tristram Coffin, the leading heavy with Robert Kortman, his chief assistant. Sell as most westerns.

Up In Arms

(Technicolor)

RKO Radio Musical Comedy 106 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) It's lavish, stunning, full of melody, and—most of all—it's hilarious. A guaranteed cure for any sour-puss.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Sell a new star and get in on the money, not only on this number, but those to come.

Cast: Danny Kaye, Dinah Shore, Dana Andrews, Constance Dowling, Louis Calhern, George Mathews, Benny Baker, Elisha Cook, Jr., Lyle Talbot, Walter Catlett, George Meeker, Richard Powers, Margaret Dumont, Donald Dickson, Sig Arno, Rudolf Friml, Jr., and the Goldwyn Girls. Credits: Producer, Samuel Goldwyn. Assoc. Producer, Don Hartman. Director, Elliott Nugent. Original screenplay by Don Hartman, Allen Boretz, and Robert Pirosh, using the character, "The Nervous Wreck," by Owen Davis. Photography, Ray Rennahan. Technicolor, Natalie Kalmus and Morgan Padelford. Musical numbers by Sylvia Fine and Max Liebman and Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler. Narration, Pete Smith.

Plot: Danny Kaye is an elevator operator in a hospital because he wants to be near doctors. He is a hypochondriac, and soon has the MDs crazy listening to his imagined ailments. He also wants to be near a nurse, Constance Dowling, and another of the nurses, Dinah Shore, wants to be near him. To take it a little further, Danny's roommate, Dana Andrews, wants to be near Constance. Despite Danny's ideas on the subject of health, he is drafted, and soon all four embark for overseas. In a series of farcical situations Constance and Dana fall in love, Danny becomes a hero in the South Pacific, and he and Dinah are finally correctly paired off.

Comment: Danny Kaye is a brand new package of film merchandise, who looks easy to sell, and who will wear well. Make no mistake, this is a Grade A star. Kaye has been a stage star on Broadway for several years and he brings a type of comedy to the screen that really belongs there because he offers something for audiences to SEE as well as hear. He is on the screwball side, but every gesture he makes has a definite meaning, for he is a fine pantomimist. His two special numbers, the satire on the movies and the one on a man being drafted, will be a complete novelty to film audiences. He uses what can possibly be described as double-talk patter plus pantomime, and the audience can understand exactly what he means. Besides this, Danny has an ingratiating personality that registers 100 per cent on the screen. To introduce his new star Sam Goldwyn has supplied a lavish production in Technicolor and a story that carries the film along better than is the case with most musicals. Dinah Shore does her best work to date, and Constance Dowling, Dana Andrews, George Mathews, and Louis Calhern all show up splendidly. The Goldwyn Girls are beautifully photographed; you get the feeling they are moving pin-up girls. Of course, there can be no attempt to make the Army and Navy background legitimate—not with these girls lolling over the deck in pastel play suits —so one character, looking at the girls says: "Boy, the last war was certainly not like this." The other answers: "And neither is this." That's the way the picture is—disarming. A big build-up of Danny Kaye is hereby advised, with one of your eyes cocked on future grosses from coming Kaye releases. Good merchandise is worth good effort; this is it.

Lady In the Dark

Paramount Comedy Drama 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) So big, beautiful and dazzling that your patrons will never forget it—be they rich or poor, intelligent or dumb, or just plain folks.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With the cast names, a known title, Technicolor, and a big production to offer, plus nation-wide exploitation by the distributor, top grosses are virtually a certainty.

Cast: Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Jon Hall, Warner Baxter, Barry Sullivan, Mischa Auer, Mary Philips, Phyllis Brooks, Edward Fielding, Don Loper, Mary Parker, Catherine Craig, Marietta Canty, Virginia Farmer, Fay Helm, Gail Russell, Marian Hall, Kay Linaker, Harvey Stephens. Credits: Executive Producer, B. G. DeSylva. Producer, Dick Blumenthal. Director, Mitchell Leisen. Screenplay by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, from the play by Moss Hart. Music by Kurt Weill. Lyrics by Ira Gershwin. Settings and costumes designed by Raoul Pene du Bois. Art supervision by Hans Dreier.

Plot: Ginger Rogers, editor of a swank fashion magazine, is sent by her family doctor to a psycho-analyst when she is on the verge of a nervous breakdown. The situation is she thinks she is in love with Publisher Warner Baxter, but when the latter's wife agrees to a divorce Ginger finds she doesn't want Warner as a husband. What does she want? And why can't she make up her mind about anything? She tells the psycho-analyst about her dreams and about her childhood, and eventually, after a fling with movie-star Jon Hall, she discovers she's really in love with her advertising manager, Ray Milland, with whom she has been fighting for five years.

Comment: Theoretically, Ginger Rogers is the star of this film, but actually she shares honors with the settings, costumes, and the Technicolor photography. The production certainly makes a strong bid to be called the most beautiful ever made. The office and home sets are unusual in color and arrangement, but the dream sequences run completely riot in imaginative pageantry, with the vivid hues caught perfectly by Technicolor. The lavish production isn't the only thing about the picture, however. Ginger, as usual, gets underneath the role and reflects every mood, and Ray Milland and the rest back her up with Grade A performances. One production number, the famous "Jenny" song, will bring down the house for sure. Besides production, cast, and music values the picture also offers considerable material for the thoughtful part of your audience. In an entertaining way it illustrates most clearly what psycho-analysis is and how it is done. Don't let that scare you. After you see the picture you will say: "if that's psycho-analysis lead me to it!" Dr. Freud should have been included in the credits, for he is partly responsible for a mighty colorful picture. All in all, this is a production that lends itself to showmanship. Chime in with Paramount's exploitation schemes and figure a few yourself. There are all kinds of tieups possible—fashion, dance, music, and the psycho-analysts themselves. The material is there for a box-office bonanza.

Escape To Danger

RKO Radio Drama 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) English war drama that is interesting, if one doesn't mind the strangeness of their speech.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory addition to a bill with a light, escapist top feature.

Cast: Eric Portman, Ann Dvorak, Karel Stepanek, Ronald Ward, Felix Aylmer, David Peel, Ronald Adam, Marjorie Rhodes, May Petrie, Lilly Kann, Charles Victor, George Merritt, Brefni O'Rorke, Frederick Cooper, Anthony Shaw, John Rudduck, A. E. Matthews, Ivor Barnard, Richard George, O'Oyley John, James Pirrie, Ian Fleming, George Woodbridge, Norman Witcomb. Credits: Produced and directed by Victor Hanbury, Lance Comfort, Mutz Greenbaum. Screenplay by Jack Whittingham. Camera operator, Guy Green. From an original story by Patrick Kirwan. Made at Denham & Pinewood Studios, London.

Plot: An English teacher, caught in Denmark when the Nazis came in, has wormed her way into their confidence and is working with the underground. When they can get no information about England's plans, the Nazi leader sends her back to England. She is suspected of being a spy by a drunken newspaperman, who forces himself upon her. In order to prevent his interference, she goes to the English police, only to discover that the newspaperman is also an Intelligence Officer. Together they uncover some of the activities of a few traitorous Englishmen, but when they are caught, she is killed.

Comment: Here's a well-made picture. One of the best of its kind to come to these shores from England. It is intensely interesting with suspense and intrigue so well built up that one forgets the strangeness of their speech, in the absorption of the story. It familiarizes the spectator with some of the intricate work done to carry on this war and gives the minute details required to carry out any simultaneous action. There are authentic scenes of air and naval battles and also a few shots of a ship-building plant. All of the players have been well cast with Ann Dvorak, an American and Eric Portman playing the leading roles. This should be a satisfactory addition to a bill with a light, escapist top feature. Wherever possible sell the name of Ann Dvorak. Attract attention, in advance of opening day, via lobby display about underground activities.

Jeannie

English Films Inc. Comedy-Drama 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A light, diverting and entertaining comedy for everyone, with dialect that is never difficult.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good topper for a double bill in most situations in those class houses where doubles are the vogue. It will give substantial support.

Cast: Barbara Mullen, Wilfred Lawson, Joan Kemp-Welch and Rachel Kempson, Michael Redgrave, Percy Walsh, Philip Godfrey, Albert Lieven, Kay Hammond, Edward Chapman, Helen Bayley, Katie Johnson, Marjorie Fielding, Googie Withers, Brefni O'Rourke, Wally Patch and others. Credits: Directed by Harold French. Screenplay by Anatole de Grenwald and Roland Pertwee. Based on the play by Aimee Stuart. Director of photography, Bernard Knowles. A Marcel Hellman Production.

Plot: A Scotch girl, who has never been anywhere, inherits fifteen hundred dollars on the death of her father. She decides to spend it all on a trip to the continent. While traveling she meets an English fellow who helps her out in many situations, where her inexperience is a handicap. In Vienna she is wooed by a penniless nobleman who thinks she is an heiress. When he discovers his mistake, they part and she goes back to England, with the young English chap following her. He finds her and they are happy thereafter.

Comment: This is a good topper for a double bill in most situations in those class houses where doubles are the vogue. It will give substantial support. For the general audience, this light comedy is diverting and entertaining. Unlike other British pictures on the market, it has a more American comedy flare. Though made in Britain, the dialect is never difficult. The theme of the innocent and naive girl, who manages to get around in a sophisticated world, is one that should appeal not only to metropolitan audiences but to many in the small towns where the plain Janes are most numerous. Direction is good, keeping the story in motion and the continuity flowing evenly. A good vigorous sales campaign should pay well, for the exhibitor can rely on the approving word-of-mouth. For lobby display, have a young girl seated at a table, invite patrons to bring their love problems to her and play up the theme that "love is not only for the beautiful."

The Impostor

Universal Drama 94 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 11th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This one is for those who enjoy an interesting characterization and a story about the war. One of the first about the founding of the Free French.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Strong advance exploitation should attract enough customers to make this a profitable business-getter.

Cast: Jean Gabin, Richard Whorf, Allyn Joslyn, Ellen Drew, Peter Van Eyck, Ralph Morgan, Eddie Quillan, John Qualen, Dennis Moore, Milburn Stone, John Philliber, Charles McGraw, Otho Gaines, John Forrest, Fritz Leiber, Ian Wolfe, William Davidson, Frank Wilcox, Warren Ashe, Peter Cookson, Leigh Whipper, Ernest Whitman, Grandon Rhodes, George Irving. Credits: Produced and directed by Julien Duvivier. Original screenplay by Julien Duvivier. Dialogue adapted from the French by Stephen Longstreet. Additional dialogue by Marc Connelly and Lynn Starling. Director of photography, Paul Ivano.

Plot: A Frenchman destined for the chair because he has been convicted of killing a policeman, escapes during an air raid. He assumes the identity, and uniform, of a dead sergeant and joins the Free French. He distinguishes himself for bravery and is promoted. When unveiled by a soldier who served with the dead man, he is broken and sent to the most dangerous sector of the desert front. There he ignores his own safety and dies wiping out a machinegun nest.

Comment: In this picture Julien Duvivier, producer-director, presents a subject close to his heart—the story of the Frenchman and the confusion that was France after its fall in June, 1940. Being one of the first pictures about the Free French, it attempts to familiarize the American public with the problem, by showing them how lost the men were when fighting suddenly stopped and how impossible it would have been for them to continue because of the lack of proper

Theatres Praised For Aid In War Effort by Newspaper Editorial

That theatres are doing their part in the war effort is pointed out in an editorial which appeared recently in the Marshall, Mo., Democrat News. Showmen are urged to further public recognition of their theatres' war efforts in their respective communities by using the following editorial, re-printed here, as a theme for one inspired by their local editors:

"There is one group of businessmen who have been called on unsparingly to aid in the war effort and who have responded most generously. That group is the motion picture exhibitors. As the newspapers are asked to give space, so the movie theatre owners and operators are asked to give time by almost every government agency that can tie in its work with the war effort.

"It is a rare thing these days to see at the theatre a program that doesn't contain a film which is propaganda for the war. From almost every conceivable angle these films pound propaganda into the ears of the audiences. And the theatre men don't get paid for running them, just as the newspapers don't get paid for the reading space and even the advertising linage they furnish.

"The Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Food Administration, the OPA, the Treasury and other federal agencies ask that this film be shown or that story be run to help their particular phase of war work. The only government branch we know that hasn't hitched its wagon to the war star is the judicial. We can't recollect receiving any propaganda from the courts.

"Not only are the theatre men asked to show films but they are requested to sell war bonds, both as a regular custom and as a special feature when a war loan campaign is on.

"They are asked to give special shows to which only those are admitted who have bought a bond through the theatre. Within a short while, the Auditorium is going to have a show from which every cent in revenue goes to the Army Emergency Relief Fund, neither the producer nor the theatre here getting a penny—not even expenses—from showing the picture.

"The movies are certainly doing their share in contributing their facilities to the war and deserve high commendation. The newspapers are too, and we're not so modest that we won't give ourselves a pat on the back also."

1412 Theatres Report $536,000 Collections

Representing a cross-section of the country, 1412 theatres have reported $536,000 to national headquarters of the 1944 March of Dimes committee. This average of $380 per theatre is an indication that the anticipated $4,000,000 will be reached, thus exceeding by a million dollars the goal set by National Chairman Nicholas M. Schenck.

Collections in Texas, according to Robert J. O'Donnell, state chairman, will exceed $200,000. This sum is nearly three times O'Donnell's pre-drive prediction of $80,000.

Loew's Theatres, nationally, have collected $443,782.57, while RKO Theatres' collections amount to $213,598.

Largest amount in collections by one theatre to date is reported by the Radio City Music Hall. Gus Eyssell, managing director, reports $16,522.04. The Roxy is a close second with $14,126.86. Other Broadway theatre collections: Capitol, $12,733; Paramount, $5,492; Strand, $7,520; Loew's State, $7,134; Astor, $7,819; Criterion, $4,174; Rivoli, $3,640; Loew's Mayfair, $2,249; Rialto, $2,703.

Ticket-Salvage Idea Boon to Paper Drive

An interesting and constructive suggestion to help theatre owners contribute towards the effort of salvaging waste paper in the present paper-saving campaign has been advanced by Max W. Roos, president of the American Ticket Corp.

Stubs of tickets now required by law to be saved by the management for four years may be utilized for this campaign, according to Roos, in the following manner:

Any theatre owner may apply by letter to the District Collector of Internal Revnue for an immediate audit and disposition of these stubs at any time. It is suggested that theatre owners take this measure, and they may be assured that the Bureau will exert every effort, consistent with the personnel at their disposal, to comply with requests, especially in view of the urgency of the present campaign for the collection and salvage of waste paper.

Permission must also be obtained for the destruction of old stocks of unused tickets, and it is deemed advisable to macerate them before turning them over for salvage.

In order to clarify the subject, it should be understood that the destruction of tickets, as accomplished through the regular macerator of ticket boxes in most theatres, is sufficient to satisfy the Internal Revenue Department. Theatres not in possession of a macerator must tear the tickets before dropping them into the box. The remnants thus produced constitute sufficient destruction.

N. Y. Exhibitor Gets a Third of His Community's Blood Donors

In conjunction with the Red Cross mobile blood bank which was due to arrive in Geneva, N. Y., Jerry Fowler of the Geneva Theatre booked the WAC short, "Brothers in Blood" and set up an attractive lobby booth at which Red Cross nurses would register plasma volunteers.

Fowler gave further attention to the important work of the Red Cross by arranging a special stage show featuring the "capping" of Red Cross nurses aides.

Out of the 157 blood donors which were obtained from the city at large, 58 donors were obtained by the Geneva Theatre which is one of the best percentages accomplished by an exhibitor to date.

WAC Will Conduct Drive to Increase Funds of Red Cross

(For latest developments in the motion picture industry's participation in the Red Cross drive, see the news section.)

Following a request from Red Cross national headquarters, the Executive Committee of the WAC Theatres Division has voted to participate in the forthcoming fund-raising campaign for the renowned peace-and-war organization, a statement from S. H. Fabian, Theatres Division chairman, declared.

A poll of the various Red Cross local chairmen around the country, taken by headquarters in Washington, revealed that an overwhelming number of the chairmen felt the need of industry participation if the local quotas were to be met.

This will mark the second time that the industry has marshaled its forces in a move to swell the coffers of the Red Cross, whose need for funds has increased enormously with the war. Functioning in a mop-up position, the industry last year entered the scene after the close of the Red Cross national campaign, and staged a one-week, all-out drive with $4,224,000 turned over to the Red Cross by Barney Balaban, Red Cross chairman for the industry.

The pattern of participation in the campaign to come, Fabian stated, will be similar to that of the previous year, with theatre collections expected to supply the greatest sum. The collections will be held March 23-29.

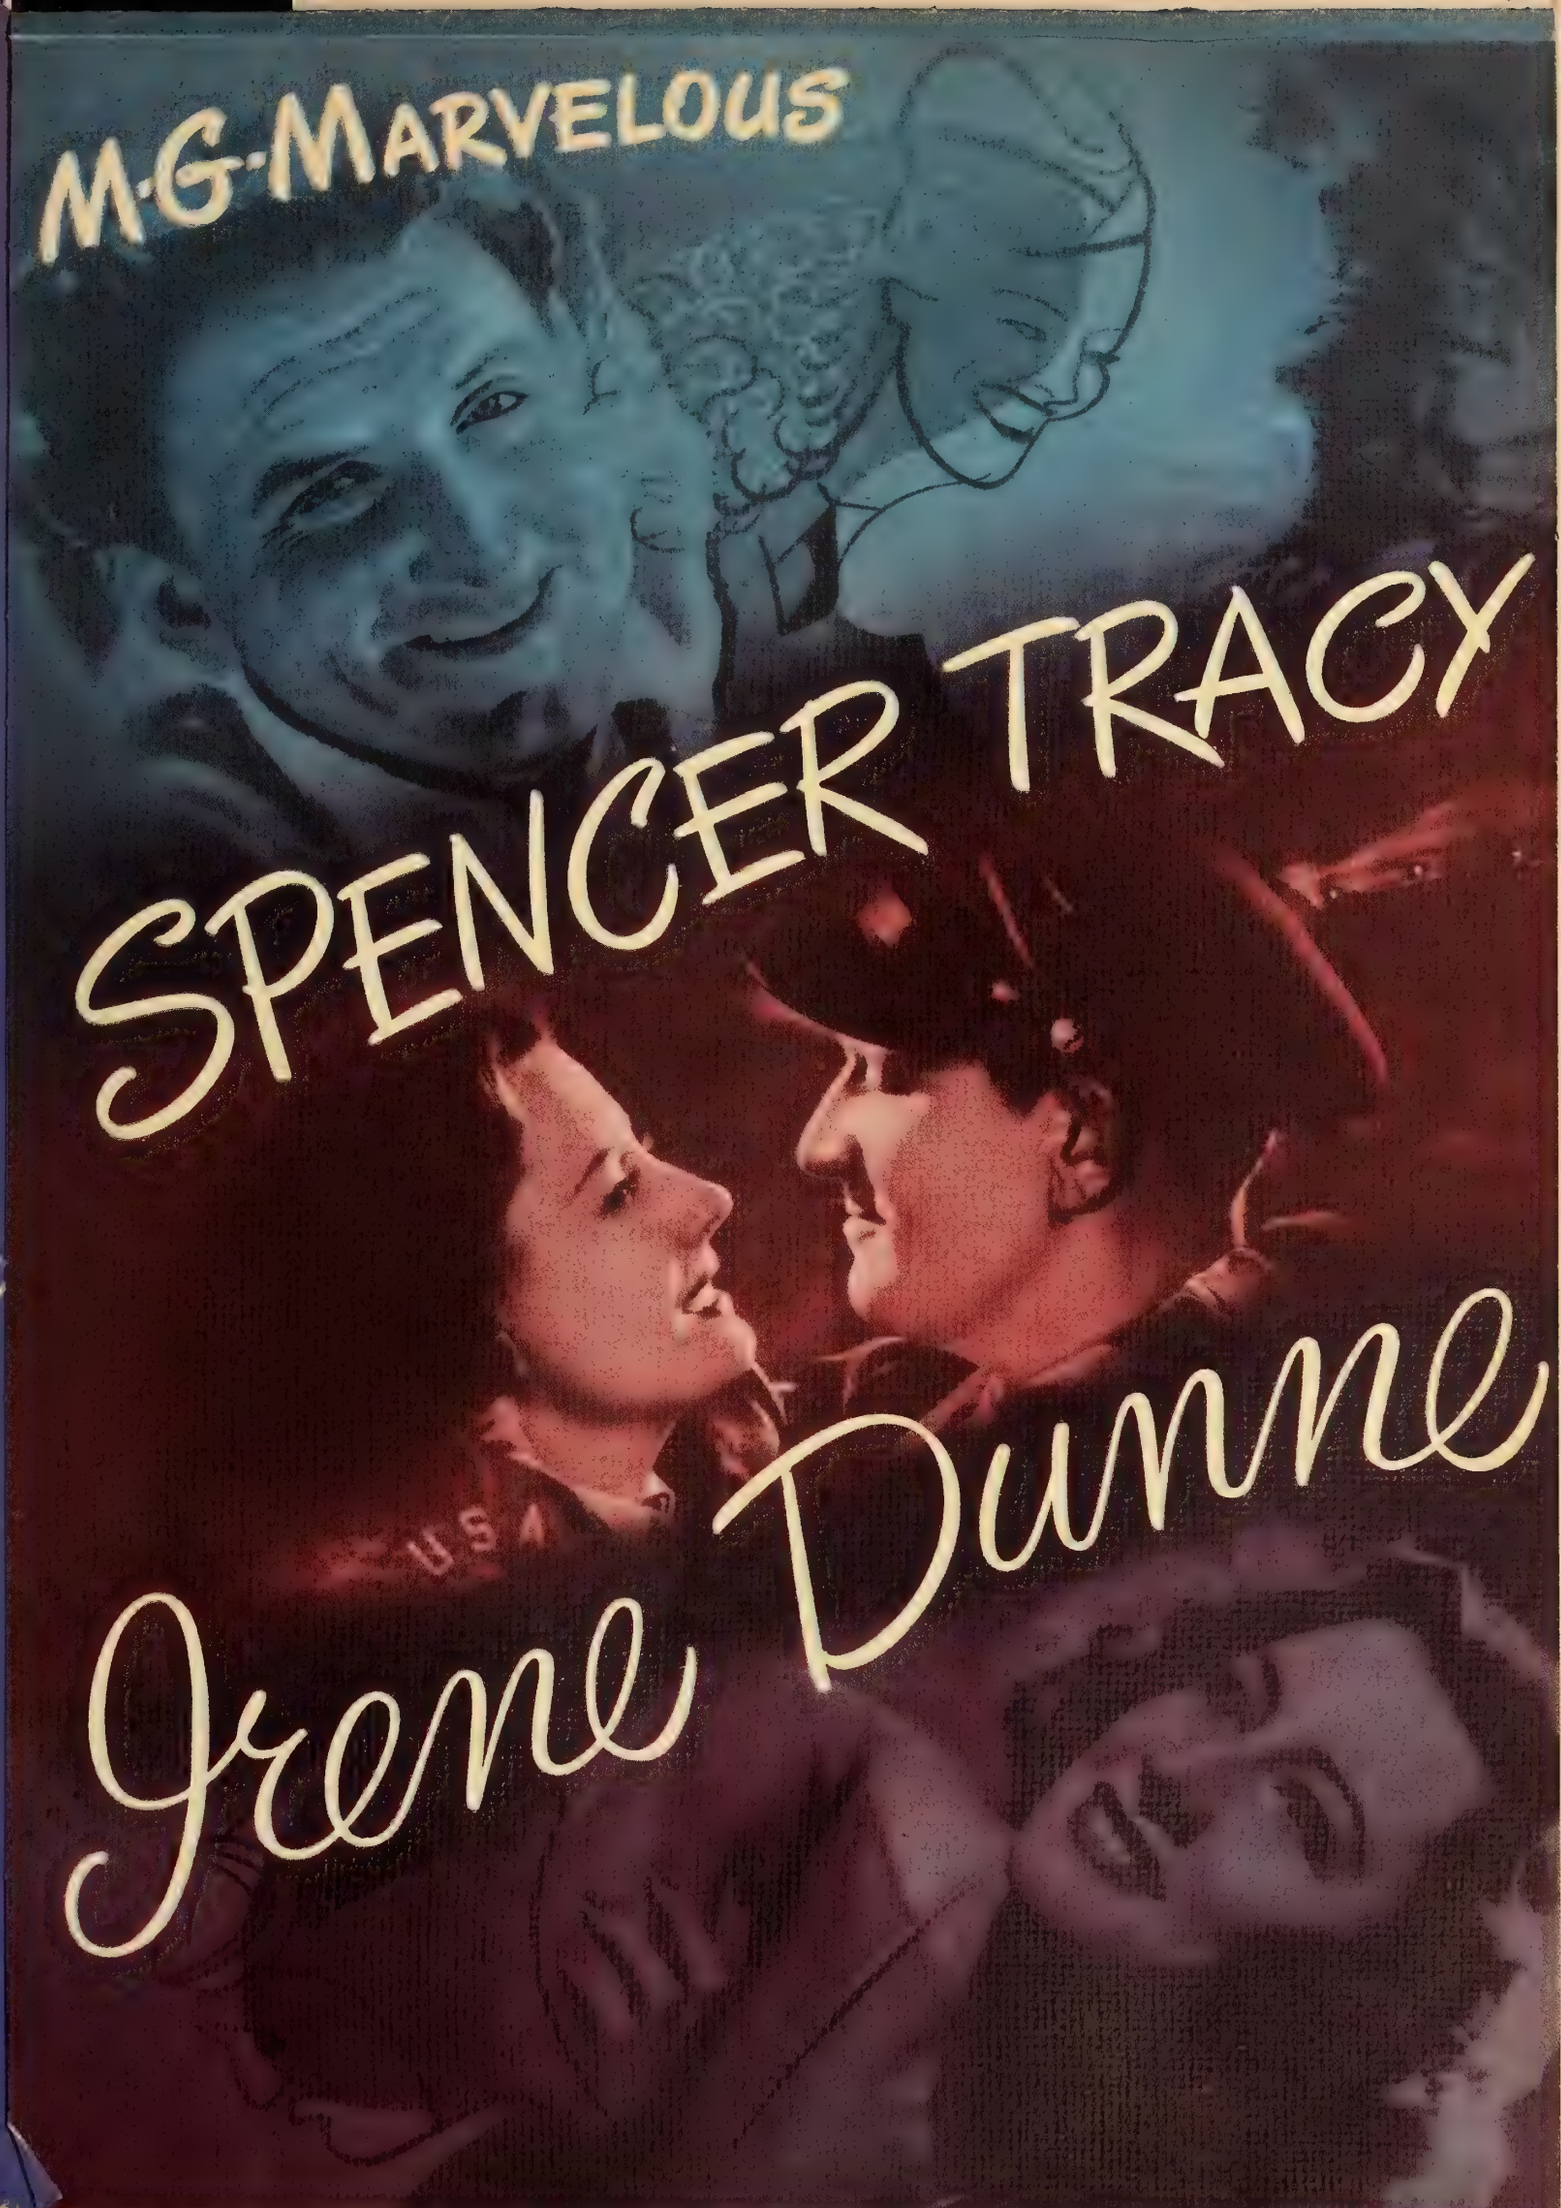
A national staff to head the effort, both for the public and within the industry personal and corporate contributions, would be named soon, Fabian indicated.

Juvenile Bond Rally At Palace in Albany

A novel war bond rally in the form of a morning show for children was scheduled to be held Saturday (12) at the Warner Palace Theatre in Albany. In line with the slogan, "A Bond for Every Seat," purchase of a war bond was a requirement for admission.

Program included a stage show, and the event was given daily advance plugs over the local CBS station, WOKO, as well as in newspapers. An attendance of 3000 juvenile bond-buyers was expected.

Local Fourth War Loan campaign activities also include an evening show at the Palace, with all Albany theatres acting as salesmen. The managers are competing for the title of the city's outstanding bond salesman.



Warner houses throughout the state are displaying "A Bond for Every Seat" boards in lobbies and efforts are being made to have various organizations make the theatres their issuing agent. It is expected that every theatre will achieve a sellout on the "Bond for Every Seat" objective, thus making the Albany zone the first to come through with 100 per cent representation.

Bond Premiere in Seattle

The city-wide bond premiere held in Seattle last week by the Paramount, Palomar, Fifth Avenue, Orpheum and the Music Hall for overflow netted a record total of 12,057 bonds.

RKO Buys $4,000,000 in Bonds

RKO Theatres and RKO Radio Pictures have together purchased $4,000,000 worth of U. S. Treasury Saving Notes, Series C, in connection with the 4th War Loan drive.

Plasma Premiere in Cincinnati Increases List of Blood Donors

An outstanding example of up-to-the-minute showmanship was evidenced by the Plasma Premiere, which ushered in "Three Russian Girls" for its world premiere at Keith's Theatre, Cincinnati. Spearhead of one of the most comprehensive exploitation campaigns ever given any motion picture, the Plasma Premiere received the fullest cooperation from civic and society leaders, as well as by the press and radio. The campaign was handled by Col. Arthur Frudenfeld of Keith's with the assistance of the U. A. field staff.

The opening was held in cooperation with Blood Donor Division of the American Red Cross and proved so successful that long before the film's opening the entire donor list was over-subscribed. Admission to the premiere was by card only, issued to each donor by the Red Cross.

Several days prior to the opening the Plasma Premiere was heralded in all local newspapers. The Enquirer and Times-Star ran daily stories. The Enquirer topped off its outstanding coverage of the premiere with a brilliant full-column editorial, and the Post played up the premiere with daily front-page boxes. Additional newspaper publicity was obtained through a proclamation by Major James Garfield Stewart, who endorsed the premiere and urged complete cooperation from every person in Cincinnati. Pictorial breaks were obtained with two Wacs, who were among the first to receive admission cards for the opening. Three syndicate services, AP, INS and UP, played up the opening with special feature stories. Both society columns and the news section were hit with story angles developed about a local veteran of the Sicily campaign.

In addition to the outstanding publicity cov-

This two-fold window display—to promote war bond sales and the showing of Columbia's "What a Woman!" at the Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia—was promoted by the Boyd's manager, Maurice Gable, and Publicity Man Jules Seltzer. A highlight of the display is the liberal use of scene stills—they go on and on far outside the range of the picture shown above.

'M-A-T-C-A-H'

Taking a cue from Lucky Strike's radio advertising teaser, "L-S-M-F-T," Manager Eddie Selette of the Colonial Theatre, Nashua, N. H., has created much curiosity among Nashuans by using the letters, "M-A-T-C-A-H," in his advertising. To the large number of telephone queries reaching his office Selette replies: "Make Attending the Colonial a Habit."

Heiss Top Winner In 'Comrade' Contest

Winners in RKO Radio's direct mail advertising contest which was held recently in connection with the Ginger Rogers' film, "Tender Comrade," were announced Thursday (10) by Ned E. Depinet.

First prize of $300 went to William L. Heiss, manager of the Markay Theatre, Jackson, Ohio, a unit of the Chakeres Circuit; second prize of $200 was awarded to Blanche F. Livingston, a member of the publicity staff of RKO Theatres; third prize of $100 was won by Allan H. Armstrong of the Wometco Circuit, Miami, Florida; and fourth prize of $50 went to C. J. Appel, director of advertising and publicity of the Odeon Circuit, Toronto, Canada.

Conducted to stimulate ideas for direct mail advertising pieces on "Tender Comrade," the contest, held from December 3rd to January 10th, drew nearly five hundred entries from exhibitors, managers, and publicity workers in the United States and Canada.

Judges were Ned E. Depinet, Si Fabian, and Henry Hoke, publisher of The Reporter of Direct Mail Advertising. Contest was held under the direction of Leon J. Bamberger, RKO Radio's sales promotion manager.

Fields Back From 'Bernadette' Exploitation Talks in Chicago

Jules Fields, of 20th Century-Fox's exploitation department, under Hal Horne, returned this week from Chicago, where he held conferences with members of the field force on campaigns for "The Song of Bernadette."

Meanwhile, Pat Powers home office representative of 20th's exploitation department, left New York to go to Baltimore where will cooperate with Morris Mechanic, of the New Theatre, in the exploitation of "Bernadette," which opens in Baltimore on Washington's birthday.

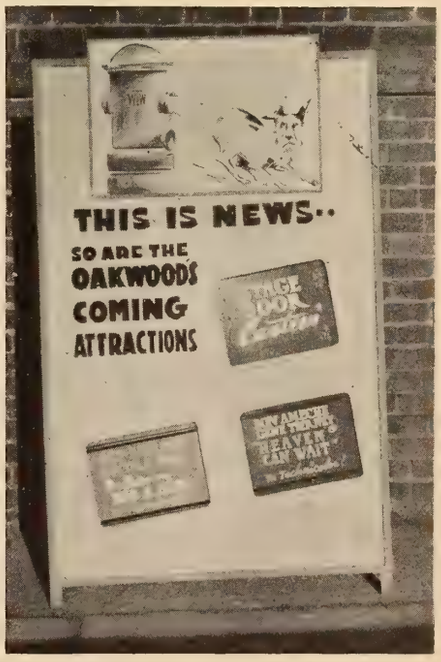
Blue Ribbon to 'Bernadette'

The editors of Scholastic Magazine have awarded its blue ribbon for February to "The Song of Bernadette" as the outstanding picture of the month.

Showman Sam says: It used to be "a penny for your thoughts," but now it goes something like this: "My thoughts are on how to get more pennies."

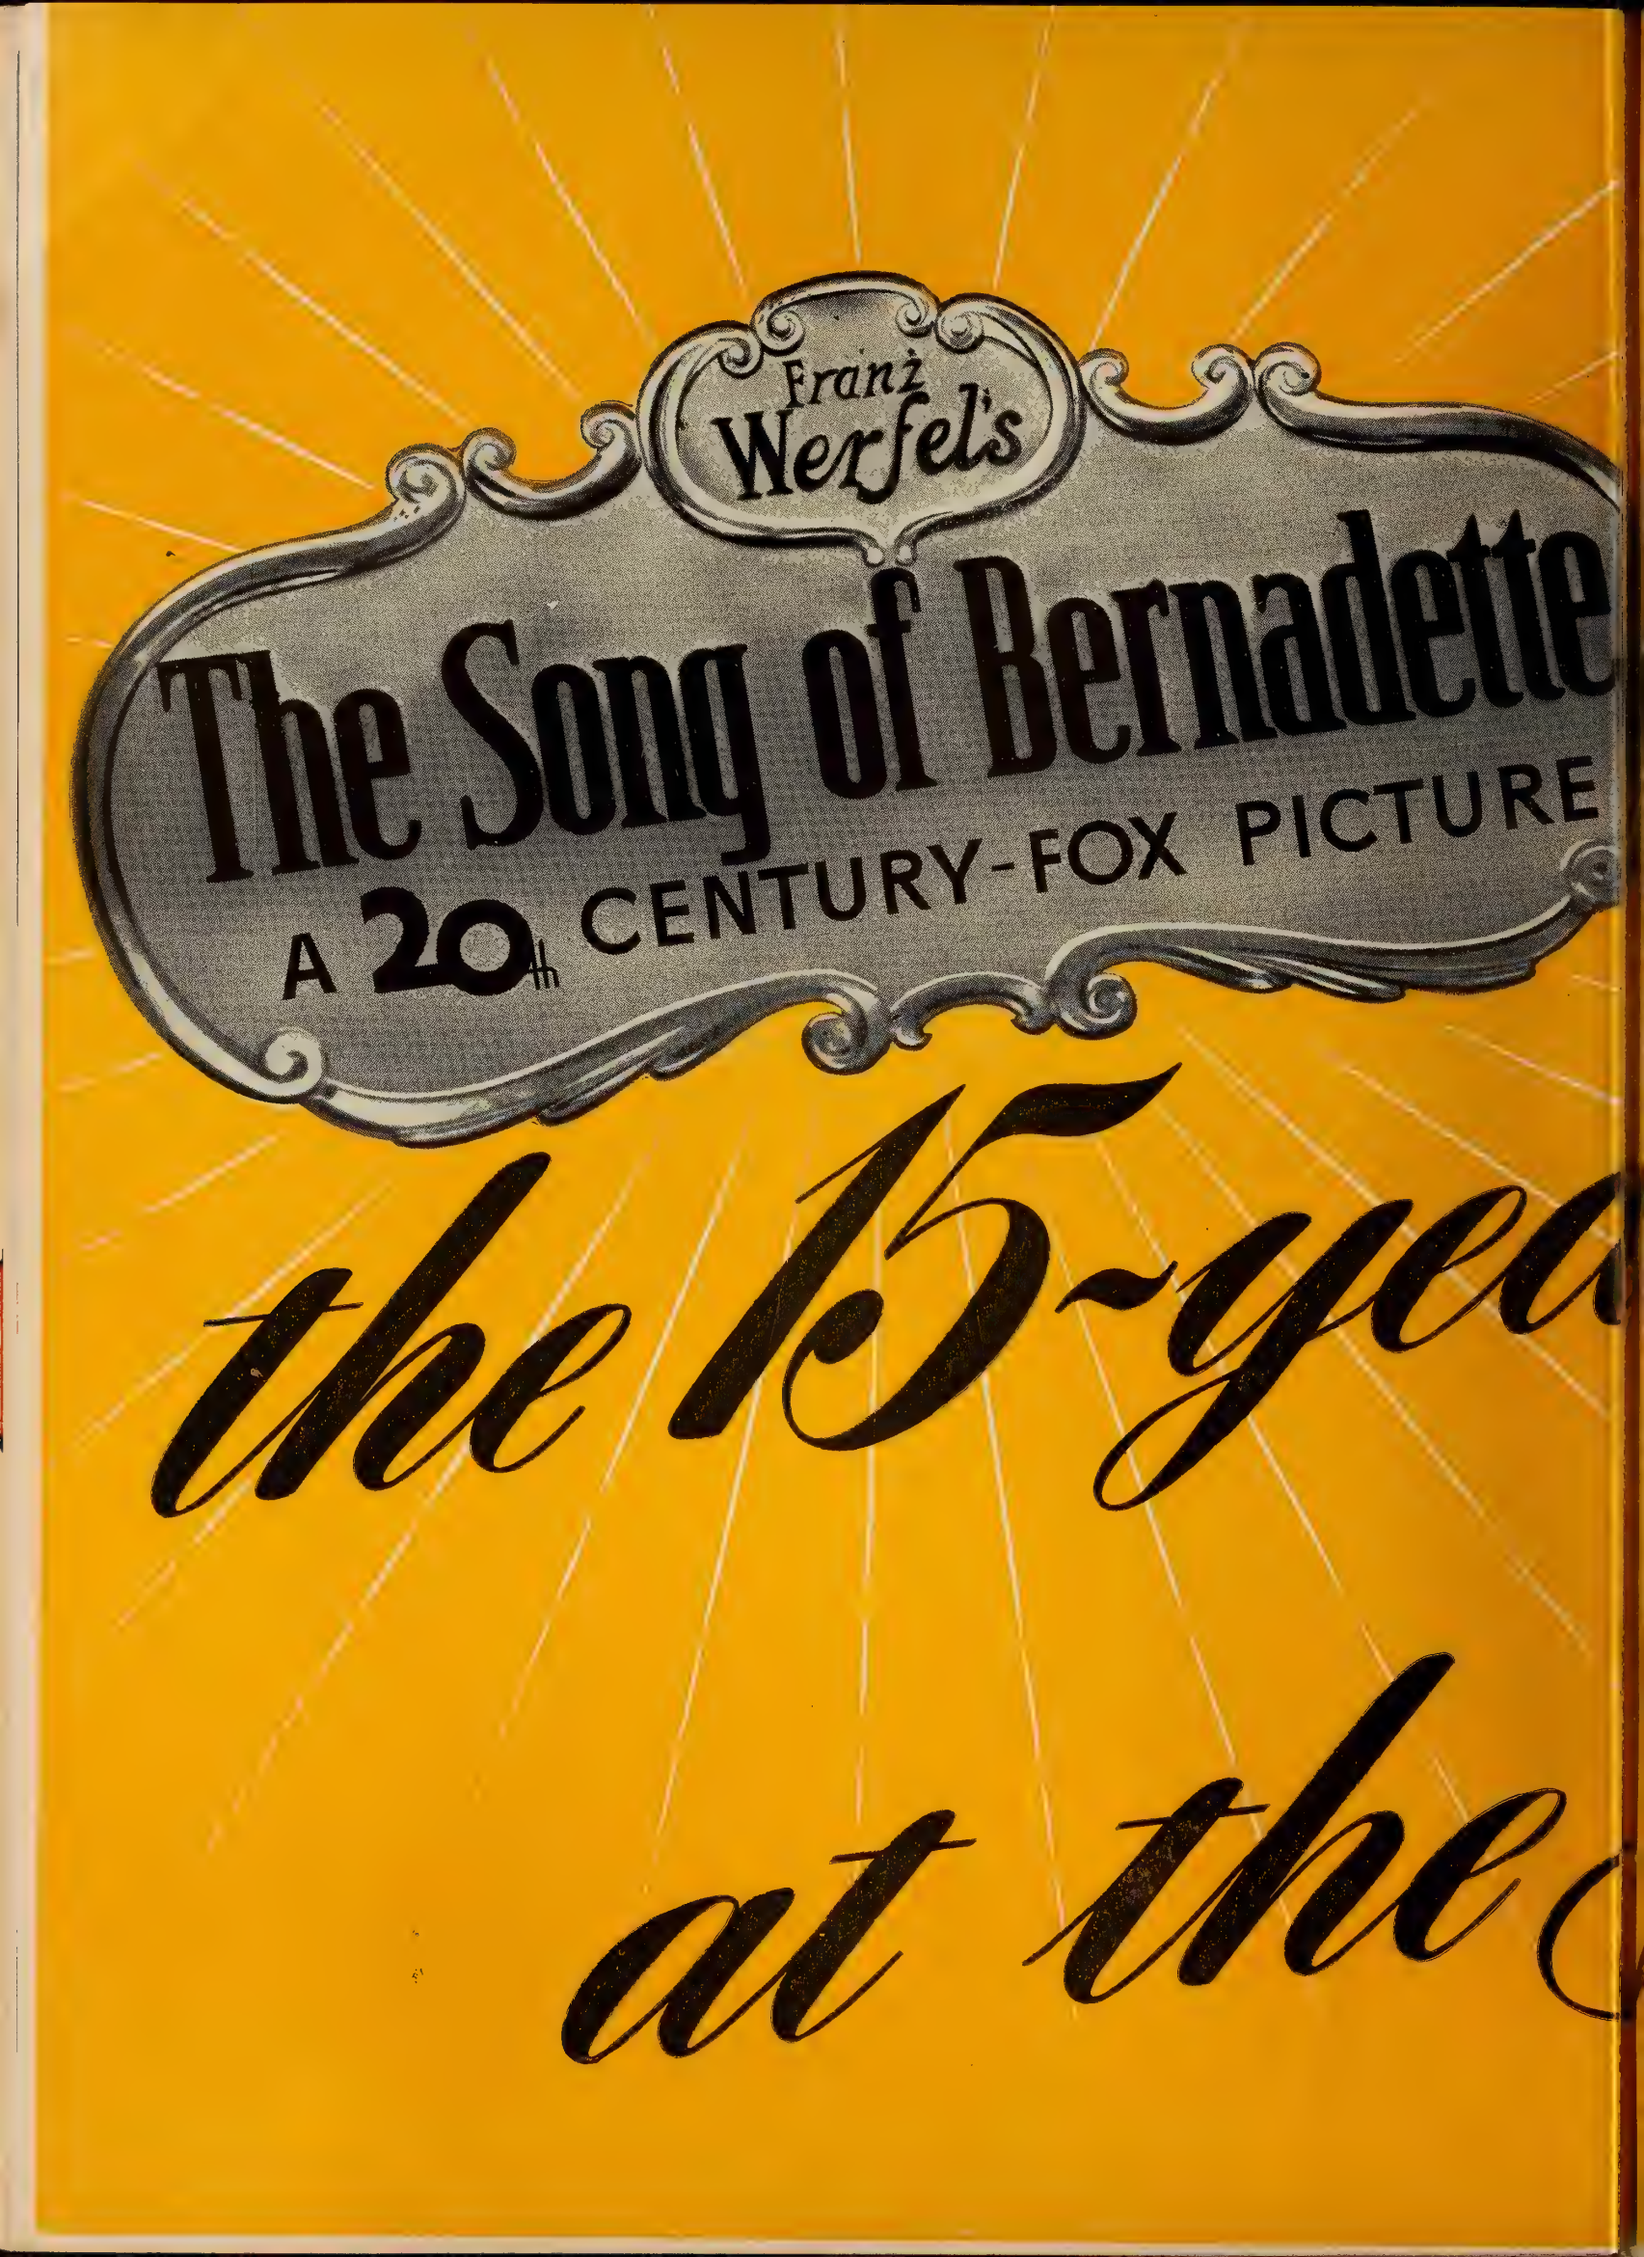
'Lady in the Dark' 'Technicolor' Premiere Is Held in Hollywood

Highlighted by a large assemblage of top-flight stars, featured players, directors and producers, a spectacular world premiere of "Lady in the Dark," Paramount Technicolor musical, was held at the Hollywood Paramount Theatre last Wednesday night. It was Hollywood's first "Technicolor" premiere, with a battery of vari-colored light symbolizing the color and fashions of the picture itself.



The special event was produced by an exceptionally comprehensive pre-selling advertising, publicity, radio and exploitation campaign by George Brown, studio publicity director, and his staff.

Tieing in with current conditions, a feature of the premiere was the appearance of a color guard of the women marines, and the induction of new members on the stage of the theatre by Ginger Rogers, whose husband, Jack Briggs, is a sergeant in the famous fighting organization. In the audience were ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, as well as civic leaders, including Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles.



The record radio exploitation campaign includes 363 spot announcements between February 2 and February 22, guest appearances by Ginger Rogers on the Bob Hope program the night preceding the premiere; and Mischa Auer, from the picture's cast, on the Bing Crosby program the night after its opening. Phyllis Brooks, of the cast, also appeared as guest star on Bob Hope's show a week ago.

KFWB, with Harry Von Zell as master of ceremonies, put on a broadcast of the premiere

4th WAR LOAN DRIVE . . . A BOND FOR EVERY SEAT

Program Exchange

Uses Calendar to Advertise Sale of Jersey Bull Calves; Cathey's Program Discussed

We're peppy and energetic today. The reason? Because the temperature is now at a comfortable level: around ten or twelve degrees above zero. The air is crisp and clean. There is no humidity. The sky is blue, with a billowy white cloud here and there. Only a Texas sky could come near to matching it. Just breathe in a little of that fresh air. Feel it enter your lungs as you expand your chest. Your desire is to take a brisk walk, to tramp through country lanes (stopping occasionally at a farm house to warm your frozen ears and otherwise thaw out). You are lively, alert, bouncing with enthusiasm. That's the way the weather today affects us. And that's why we enter the preparation of this edition of the Program Exchange with optimism, despite the small number of programs that have arrived at our desk.

Among those on hand is a calendar from Jim Owen. For the first time, the calendar is serving as a selling medium for something else besides the attractions at the Owen Theatre in Branson, Mo. Under the heading of "Bull," Jim states that he has given a lot free to his patrons in his programs for the past ten years . . . now he wants to sell 'em something. He continues: "At Owen Acres we have several registered Jersey bull calves. We want them to stay in this territory. We have them priced dirt cheap—and that ain't no bull. Come out and visit our farm . . . see our registered herd . . . look these outstanding youngsters over." Jim's selling appeal makes our mouth water for a large, sizzling steak, but we shall be content with our vegetable steak and rice. There's no personal message on the back of the calendar.

To our program has come a message (see what this weather does to us?). Now we'll try once more. To our desk has come a program from Owen B. Cathey of the Manchester Theatre, Manchester, Mich. We don't know the population of Manchester, but from our last available records the theatre there seats 188 people, so the situation must be an average small town. Cathey probably doesn't have the facilities for printing his program, nor in all likelihood can he expend much for this form of advertising. So a national program-printing firm does the job for him. He puts out a small program that fits easily into one's pocket or handbag. Its decorative scheme is red, while the printing is black on white. Evidently there is no Fourth War Loan campaign going on at the Manchester, for the program carries no mention of it. With only 188 seats, Cathey shouldn't find it difficult to sell "a bond for every seat." We'll be looking forward to hearing from him again, and we hope he'll give us a line on his particular theatre operation, the problems involved, the distribution of programs, etc.

This punch-packed ad selling effectively a three unit screen show was designed by "Hank" Harold, advertising manager of Chackeres Theatres, for the Fairbanks Theatre, Springfield, Ohio. This type of sales message points to the box-office from the quantity angle as well as through the stressing of variety of appeal.

Harry Hobolth's Star Cover

A star cut on the cover of the program for the DeLuxe and Capac theatres operated in Michigan by Harry Hobolth must be Betty Hutton, but it's the sort of glamor photo that belies her status as a comedienne. We were stumped at first, trying to figure out who it could be (and we still may be wrong), but one of the attractions for the week was "Let's Face It," and since Betty is teamed with Bob Hope in that picture, and since there were apparently no blondes in the other attractions, we decided it must be Betty. Gosh, maybe we're still wrong. No mention of the Four War Loan is contained in the program.

An announcement in the Midway program (Hobolth also operates the Midway at Midway, Mich.) states that Clare Bigger, former manager of the house, has been inducted into the Armed Forces, and that his place has been taken by one of the employes, Miss Pat Alexander. We wish the young lady the best of luck in her new post, and we'd be pleased to receive any exploitational or institutional news she might care to send us.

Drace Uses Attractive Art

Bill Drace of the Grand Theatre, Greer, S. C., sends us a recent issue of the Greer Citizen, one page of which is devoted to Grand Screenews, the program which used to be issued separately. Bill fills the greater portion of the page with large cuts on the forthcoming week's attractions—not advertising cuts, but large scene cuts that do much to make the page stand out and attract maximum attention. Only about two full columns of the page are devoted outright to advertising space. We don't know the arrangement between Bill and the local newspaper, but if you can't afford a program, perhaps you could get together with your newspaper editor and cook up something on a similar scale. It wouldn't hurt to try.

Despite the weather, we've lost that pep and energy we had when we began this edition, so we think we shall bring it to a close. Perhaps it's because we're inside, where the heat makes us slow and sluggish. Just as soon as we complete these lines, we shall dash out into the cool air and perambulate with agility up Broadway, meanwhile breathing deeply the frigid ozone. See you next week.

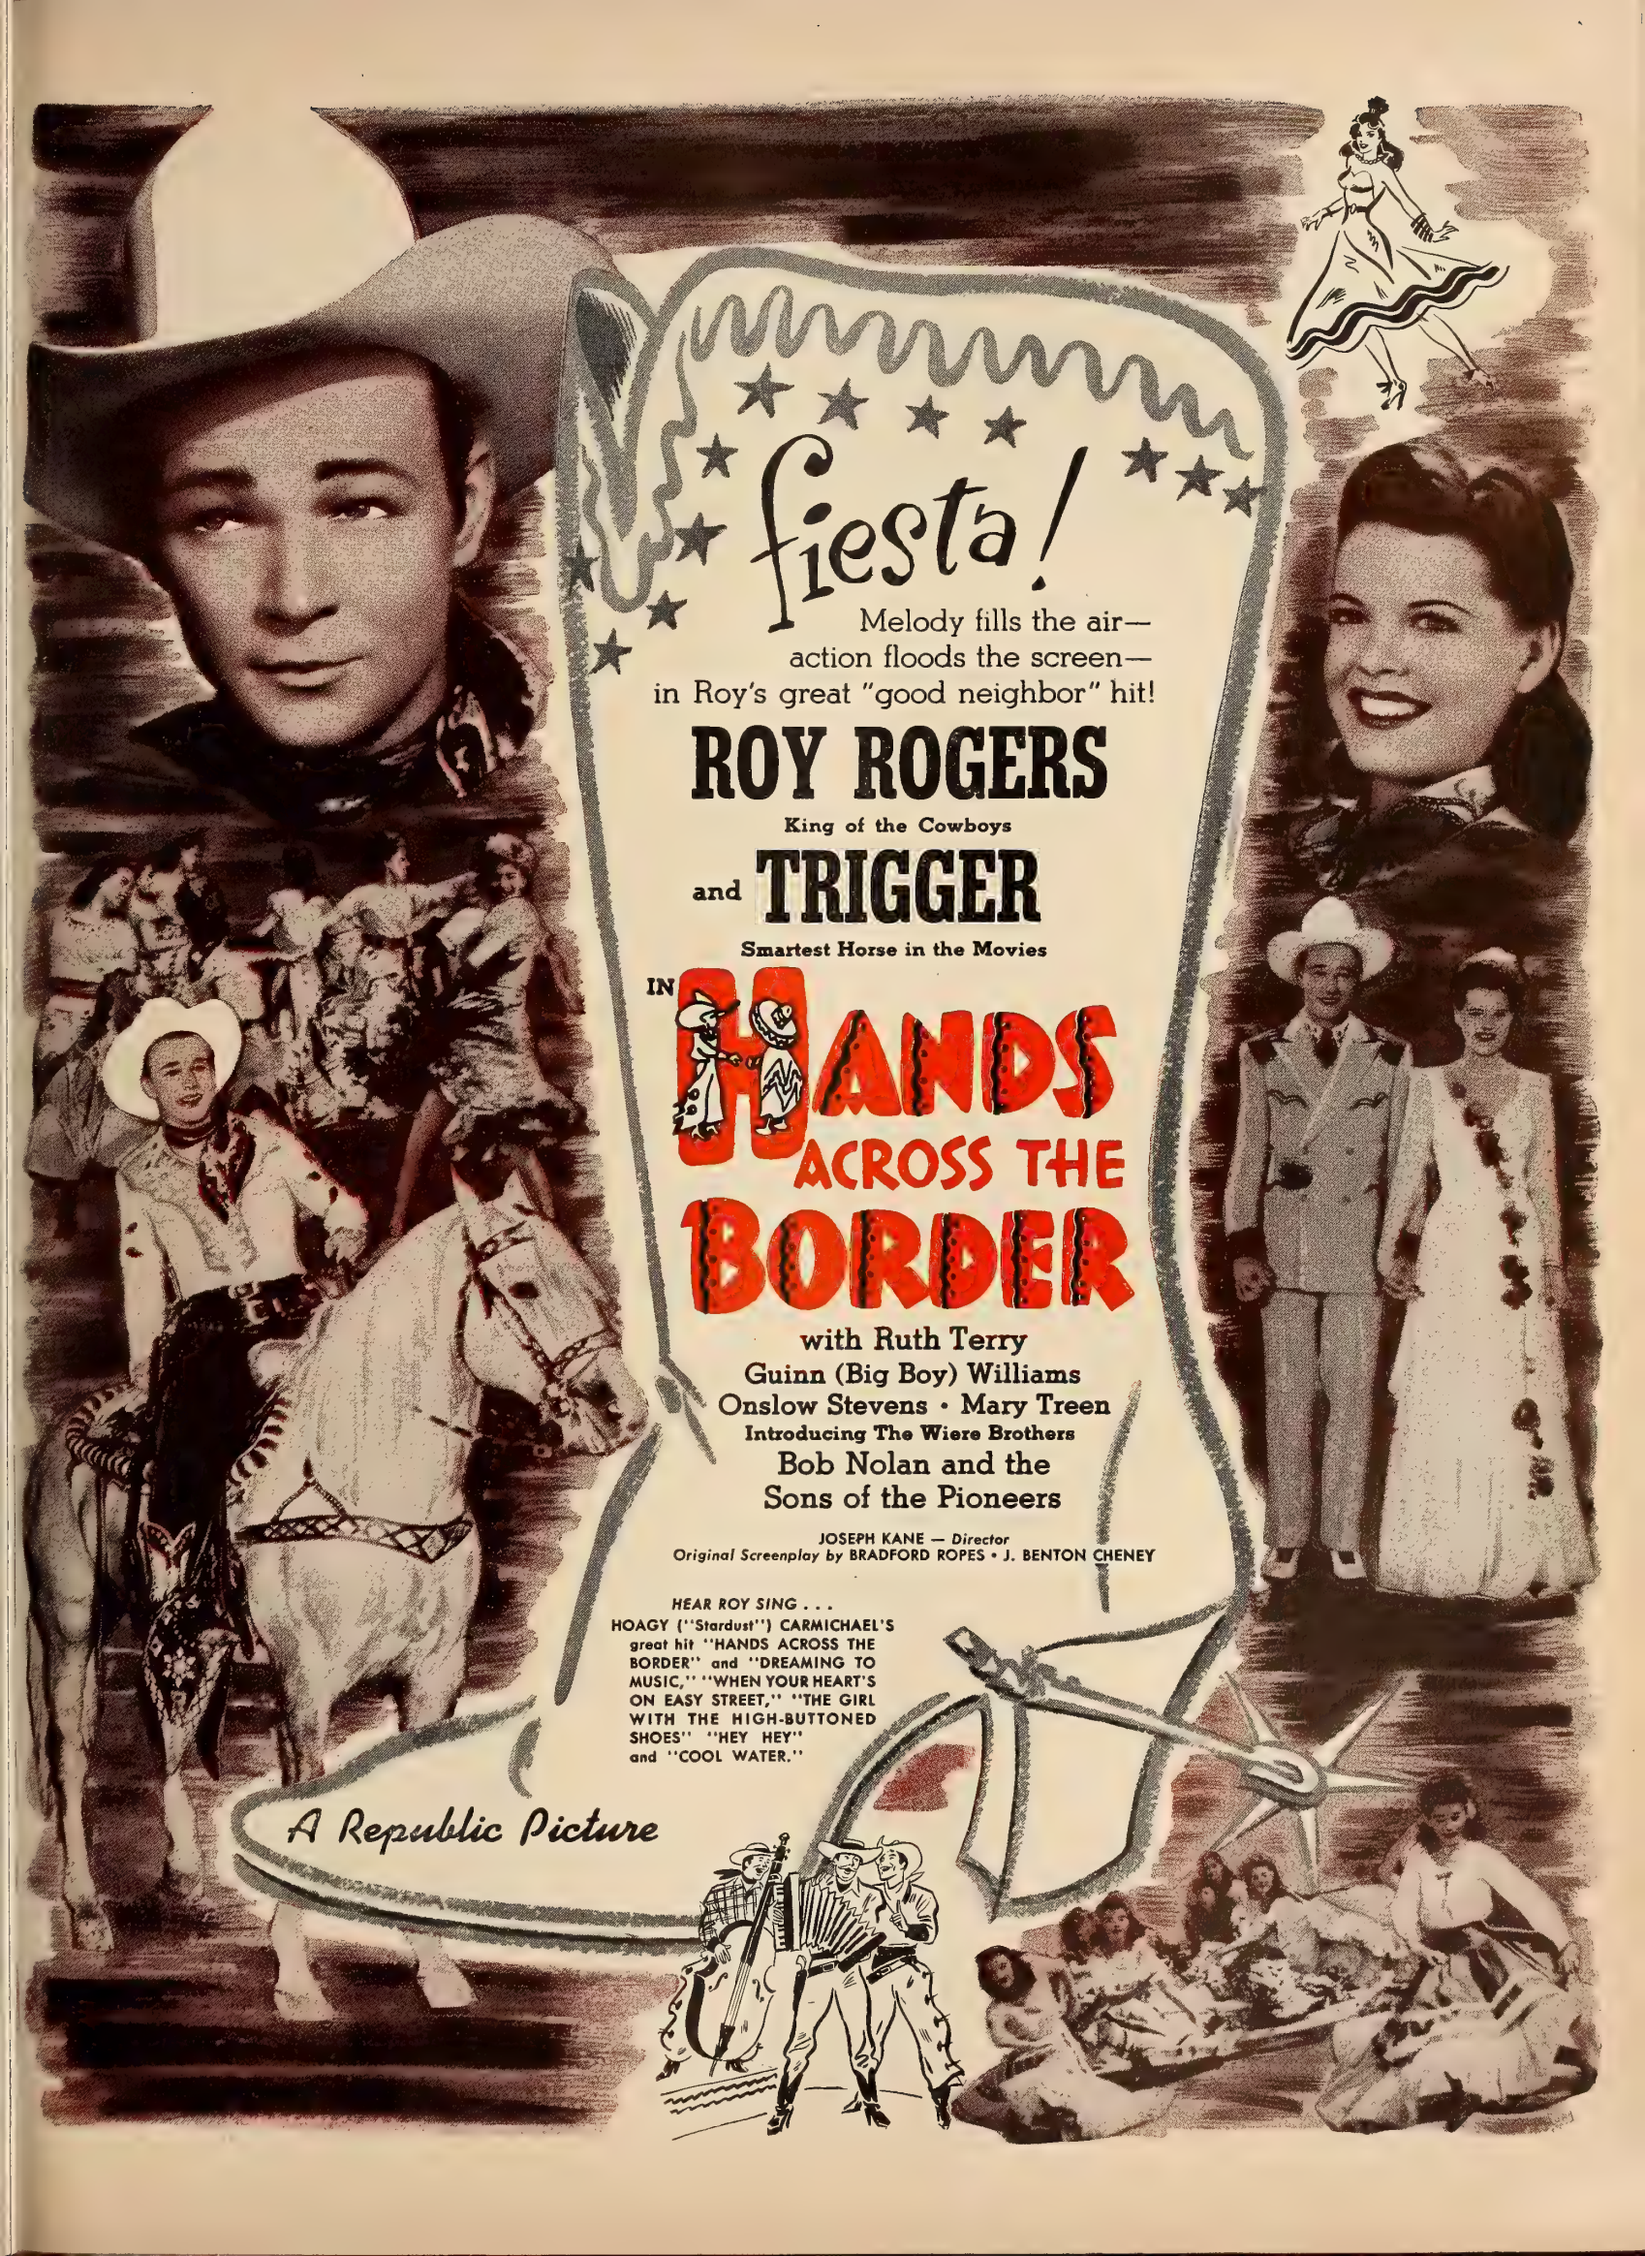
Bill Reisinger, manager of Loew's Theatre in Dayton, Ohio, pushed both the sale of war bonds and the showing of MGM's "Lassie Come Home" in this appealing department store window.

Whittaker 'Bribes' Patrons With 'Sweet'

To call attention to the showing of "Hi Diddle Diddle" at the Grandin Theatre, Roanoke, Va., Manager Otto Whittaker, Jr., distributed cards with lollipops attached and carrying this copy:

"Hi, Pal! We give you this bit o' sweet because we love you—and because we want you to read this. It's a heckuva note when we have to bribe people to read our advertising, but we wanna make sure you hear about our motion picture, 'Hi Diddle Diddle.' It's a crazy gag, get it? 'Hi Diddle Diddle's' crazy, too, and you'll be even crazier if you don't see it three or four times.

"'Hi Diddle Diddle' starts Friday at the Grandin. We don't know when it'll end. We might hold it over two or three months. That's how good it is. Absolutely, the funniest thing you've ever seen. Anyway, Friday as opening day gives you plenty of time to change any other plans you've made. Any smart judge will excuse you from jury duty to see 'Hi Diddle Diddle.' If you're 1-A, or if you're one of us papas they're clamoring over up in the District of Columbia, you might even get your induction postponed until you've seen it. (We said 'might').



"Anyway, we're expecting to see you, and your wife, or you and somebody else's wife, or the boy friend or the girl friend, and all the littluns, out at the Grandin. We absolutely can't make any money if you stay away.

"Here's a little something about this surprise picture. It'll pop your eyes and boil your blood with a new Pola Negri, a Pola slimmed down, streamlined up, with a batting average of 1000. It'll pop your vest buttons with an Adolphe Menjou you knew in the 'The Front Page.' Your jaws will ache from laughing at Martha Scott in her first (but far from last) comedy role, and you'll go completely overboard for Dennis O'Keefe, Billie Burke and June Havoc in the surprise picture of the year. You'll learn why brides bring twins to the wedding, and you'll learn why a new name for love is 'Hi Diddle Diddle.' Brother, you'll learn everything!"

'Lassie' Radio Contest

A radio contest offering guest tickets for the best letters on "Why I'd Like to Own a Dog Like Lassie" was planted by Robert Brown of the Palace Theatre, Tarentum, Pa. Brown also arranged a contest with public schools on "What a Dog Means to a Boy or Girl."

Showman Sam says: It used to be "a penny for your thoughts," but now it goes something like this: "My thoughts are on how to get more pennies."

A Republic Picture

Above: Two stunts that helped increase business for the engagement of MGM's "The Lost Angel" at Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va. Left: A large blank book was placed in the lobby for patrons to vote for Margaret O'Brien as the best juvenile star of 1944. Right: Cut-out letters, four feet high and covered with white flitter, were placed over the orchestra pit covering and spotlighted from the balcony rail.

Peters Builds Child Actress in Campaign on 'The Lost Angel'

Basing his campaign on the angle that the picture was "enjoyable entertainment for young and old," and pointing to Margaret O'Brien as the "sensational young star of 'Journey for Margaret'," Manager George Peters of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., successfully put over the engagement of "The Lost Angel" at that showplace.

Manager Peters was intent on "building up" little Miss O'Brien, and that angle dominated his campaign. For example, he displayed in the lobby (1) a 40x60 "remember" panel utilizing serial stills from "Journey for Margaret" with appropriate copy ("Remember your little favorite in 'Journey for Margaret'? She's back in a cheerful, heart-warming new hit to please everybody!") and (2) a large book with blank pages in which patrons voted for Margaret as the best juvenile star of 1944 (see cut). In all other advertising, the little girl's name was given top prominence. For example, on napkins distributed to downtown soda fountains this copy was imprinted: "You Can't Afford to Miss America's Newest Star, Margaret O'Brien, in 'Lost Angel' at Loew's."

At the rear of the orchestra Peters placed a large display (24-sheet size) using cut-out illuminated title letters and 11x14 enlargements of scene and star stills mounted on photographic salon cards. Cutout letters were also placed over the orchestra pit covering (see cut).

Screening Held for Juveniles

A screening was held for junior school reviewers. Present, in addition to the youngsters, were Edith Lindeman, drama critic of the Times-Dispatch, and Mrs. Alton Williams, drama critic of the News-Leader, to get the reaction of the juvenile reviewers for a drama page story.

The local Coca-Cola distributor bannered trucks, distributed 500 window streamers and 5000 napkins to soda fountains. Through a tieup with the Larus Brothers Tobacco Co., manufacturers of Edgeworth smoking tobacco, the company's trucks were bannered and 300 window streamers and counter cards distributed to all cigar and chain grocery stores. For the Coca-Cola tieup, still No. 4 was used, while for the tobacco tieup Peters used still No. 17.

Let's go back, for a moment, to that screening for the junior reviewers. These youngsters were asked to write "reviews" on a competitive basis, with a $25 war bond and the honor of being the theatre's guest on opening night going to the writer of the best "review." Judges were the aforementioned drama critics and the head of the school English department. Notices were placed on school bulletin boards.

Manager Peters personally addressed a Parent Teachers Group at their regular meeting. Secretaries of women's clubs were contacted by telephone and requested to call their members' attention to the picture.

Utilizing exploitation stills from MGM, special windows on children's fashions were promoted from three department stores.

Newspapers accorded the picture much publicity, concentrating, for the most part, on Margaret O'Brien, and radio coverage was excellent, bringing into play the junior reviewer who wrote the best "review," a song contest based on "Angel" themes by Organist Eddie Weaver, and gratis plugs on the Edgeworth tobacco tieup.

Fox Inter-Mountain Showmen Successfully Exploit 'Air Power'

Third-dimensional sound, along with ballyhoo, tieups, promotions, sensationalism and hard plugging of the multiplane color brought in the bacon for Fox Inter-mountain theatres playing Walt Disney's "Victory Through Air Power."

Managers were warned beforehand by Division Manager Rick Ricketson that the subject would be a real challenge to showmanship and imagination. Following his warning, they determined to prove they could exploit it to the tune of grosses equaling the top hits of any company. They did.

'Where Are Your Children?' Sold by Radio in Memphis

The greatest radio campaign on behalf of a motion picture ever conducted in Memphis was carried on last week by Howard Waugh, manager of Warner Bros. Theatre, in connection with the opening of "Where Are Your Children?".

Concentrating on radio for the engagement, Waugh utilized frequent spot announcements on local stations—four on each station during morning, afternoon and evening hours—for a total of 48 per day. Since the campaign ran for five days, the picture received enough plugs to give it a rousing sendoff.

Patriotic Groups Aid Philadelphia Showing Of 'Battle of Russia'

Engagement of the WAC film, "Battle of Russia," released through 20th Century-Fox, was extensively exploited by the management of the Capitol Theatre, Philadelphia.

Three weeks before the opening, a private screening was held for representatives of these organizations: Civilian Defense Council, American Red Cross, Navy League, Philadelphia Council of American-Soviet Friendship, American Russian Institute, Russian War Relief, Communist Party, International Workers Order. Also on hand were radio commentators, newspaper critics and foreign-language newspaper writers.

Three days prior to public showing, another screening was held, at which time a program of distinguished speakers lent an impressive tone to the occasion. The 500 invited guests were comprised of persons in a position to relate their opinions to their respective groups. Guests included: members of the Board of Education, political leaders, labor union executives, fraternal organizations, social groups. Members of the press in attendance gave this event news space on the second pages of Philadelphia's largest newspapers.

A war exhibit in the theatre lobby displayed captured German war material obtained from the U. S. Army and the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship.

Captured Plane as Ballyhoo

Serving as street ballyhoo was a Messerschmitt fighter plane shot down over Russia, obtained from the U. S. Army (see cut). The plane was mounted on a display truck and driven through Philadelphia streets, creating traffic-blocking crowds of people who wanted to get a view of the unusual sight. Martial music and spot announcements plugging the picture, and war bonds as Christmas gifts, completed this angle.

The American Russian Institute, for the first time in its 23 years in Philadelphia, endorsed "Battle of Russia," and under this endorsement the feature was sold for its cultural and educational value. The Philadelphia Council of American-Soviet Friendship used a similar circular with its own endorsement and approval.

Spot announcements were used on the radio. Display advertising was used in seven foreign-language newspapers. Literature and posters were distributed at Labor Union headquarters, at schools and at meeting places of social organizations.

A German Messerschmitt fighter plane shot down over Russia was obtained by the manager of the Capitol Theatre, Philadelphia, and used as a street ballyhoo for showing of WAC picture, "Battle of Russia," 20th Century-Fox release.

'Crazy House' Gets Premieres Abroad in Army Camp Theatres

Pictures are now being shown in Army theatres abroad at the same time and in many cases before they are exhibited in first-run theatres in this country. Recently prints of current features have been made on 16 mm. film and rushed abroad as soon as they have been processed.

A real "world premiere" took place in Algiers when Olsen and Johnson's "Crazy House" was shown there and at 36 other Army theatres throughout the world. It had all the "fixin's," except the klieg lights which might have attracted enemy aircraft instead of possible customers as such things do in the U. S. A.

In front of the darkened theatre big, heavy, six-by-six trucks rolled up. No dainty star in crinkly taffeta stepped out—instead, hundreds of G.I.'s jumped down, eager and excited. The only autographs collected were those that had been penciled earlier in the day, permitting these men to attend.

Inside the lobby, white columns reflected colored lights. Uniforms from all the United Nations packed the theatre. It was open house, admission free.

A uniformed French guard and a white helmeted M.P. held the huge center doors open. Off to one side of the tremendous lobby a microphone was set up by the American Expeditionary Stations. Men and women, entering and leaving, were being interviewed.

"Every guy and gal in uniform is a celebrity," said Announcer Captain Andre Baruch, former commentator and writer with National Screen Service and Pathe News, now in charge of the stations. About the only professional critic present was Sgt. Dick Bruner of the Stars and Stripes.

"Crazy House," which was simultaneously shown at 36 other post theatres in combat area, was the first attraction at the new jungle theatre on Gatun Dam near the spillway, Panama Canal Zone. Called the Jungle Mudder, which is also the name of the Coast Artillery Command's newspaper there, the house seats 300. It is built of cinder brick. Major Gen. G. Ralph Meyer, Brig. Gen. Randolph G. Pendleton and Brig. Gen. Earl H. Metzger of the Coast Artillery Command invited as guests of honor for the Panama Canal Zone Premiere, Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett and Major Gen. William E. Shedd, commanding General and Deputy Commander, respectively, of the Panama Canal Department. About 300 enlisted men of the command rubbed elbows with the gold braid at this premiere.

In New Guinea, the picture was shown about the same time, according to word received from that island where fighting is now in progress.

At Accra on the gold coast in the middle of the picture, Joel McCrea who was making a personal appearance tour of remote Army posts arrived on the scene. Although his time was limited he insisted that the picture proceed, before he started his part of the entertainment.

Dogs for Defense Tieup

Jess Day and T. J. Jensen of the Rialto Theatre, Fort Dodge, Iowa, landed a newspaper contest on "Lassie Come Home." Theme of the contest: "What Dogs Can Do in the War Effort." A Dogs for Defense tieup was also made, with a booth in the lobby where patrons might enlist dogs for service.

Gardner's Classified Contest

Aaron Gardner of the Fox Theatre, Sedalia, Mo., ran a classified contest asking for a "Girl . . . crazy . . . to see 'Girl Crazy'."

Captain Andre Baruch greets arrivals at the "world premiere" of Universal's "Crazy House" in Algiers. Olsen & Johnson comedy has had showings in 36 other Army theatres in world.

'Destination Tokyo' Benefit Receives Reams of Publicity

On "Old Newsboys" Day in Pittsburgh recently, a benefit showing of "Destination Tokyo" was held for the Children's Hospital. Event was in connection with the world premiere of the film.

Old newsboys of the Pittsburgh Press cooperated with Moe Silver, Warner zone manager; Joe Feldman, assistant zone manager, and James Totman, advertising manager for that territory, in putting over the benefit.

Columns and columns of art breaks and news stories publicized the event in the Press. All in all, the special benefit performance was highly successful.

Here's the smash ad used by Manager Elmer Brennan of the Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., on MGM's "Thousands Cheer." Illustration of theatre, and also of that of bus in lower left-hand corner, were special engravings made up by the theatre. Washington, Walnut and Main Street are the main streets of Green Bay.

Novel Rhyme Cards Spark Campaign on 'Cheer' by Brennan

Manager Elmer Brennan of the Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wisconsin, is guilty!

The evidence he has forwarded us furnishes incontrovertible proof that he is guilty of staging a bang-up campaign on "Thousands Cheer."

Exhibit A—Stop, Look and Listen Cards. Girls in uniform distributed these cards at all stop-and-go signs in the downtown area. Card featured cut of a man in a "listening" stance, while a "balloon" carried this copy: "Stop! Look! Listen! What do you hear? They're all talking about 'Thousands Cheer.' So hurry to the Bay and get a good seat, and enjoy a show that can't be beat."

Exhibit B—Crowd Cards. These cards were distributed by uniformed usherettes on the street and in front of such department stores as Sears-Roebuck, Penney's, Montgomery-Ward, Woolworth's, Kresge's, etc. Photographic illustration showed a crowd of people. Copy: "Going up the street! Going down! The biggest show has come to town. So don't waste time standing here. Go to the Bay to see 'Thousands Cheer'."

Exhibit C—Telephone Cards. These cards were placed in front of every pay telephone in town. Brennan and his assistants obtained a list of the pay stations, then went around to all of them and placed a card in back of the phone so that everyone making a call would be sure to see it. Photographic illustration showed a man talking on the telephone, with other men and women listening on the other end of the wire. Copy: "Rush to the phone before it's too late, and make that all-important date. Just say, 'Hurry, get ready, dear, we're going to see "Thousands Cheer".'"

Exhibit D—Bus Cards. Uniformed usherettes distributed these cards at all downtown bus stops and transfer points. Photographic illustration of bus taking on passengers has been touched up by an artist so that the bus acquires a "face," with these words coming from its "mouth," via a "balloon": "You thousands who ride on the bus each day, get off at Washington and Walnut and go to the Bay. You'll see a show that's the biggest of the year; the name of it is 'Thousands Cheer'."

Exhibitor E—Ad Reprints. Reprints of the Bay's giant six-column newspaper ad (see cut) were made up and stuffed in Sunday newspapers.

Special photographic illustrations used by Brennan for his novelty cards and newspaper ad comprised engravings whose copy was made up by the manager and his staff.

Brennan's clever and unique showmanship resulted in extraordinary business for "Thousands Cheer."

'Address Unknown' Release Parleys

Columbia executives are working on release plans and general campaign for "Address Unknown," which William Cameron Menzies produced and directed independently for Columbia release. With a cast headed by Paul Lukas, Carl Esmond, Peter Van Eyck, Mady Christians, Morris Carnovsky, and introducing K. T. Stevens to the screen as a featured actress, the picture is now being edited, with prospect of release within two months.

Two 'Cover Girl' Trailers

Exhibitors will have their choice of two trailers heralding Columbia's Rita Hayworth-Gene Kelly film, "Cover Girl." One will be the regular version, based on the feature. The other, a teaser, will tell the story behind the girls on covers. With editing completed on both, negatives will go to Technicolor laboratories this week.

HERE'S 'KNOW HOW' FOR A BOX OFFICE BULLSEYE

"A Guy Named Joe"

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture
PRODUCED BY EVERETT RISKIN
DIRECTED BY VICTOR FLEMING
Starring
SPENCER TRACY - IRENE DUNNE

A "different" picture, "A Guy Named Joe" offers the kind of an entertainment your customers are eager to buy if they are informed as to the type of entertainment.

It's a war story— but a 'private' war story with the present conflict employed to supply the background and basis for plot. If you are in a situation where war pictures are unpopular you will find it prudent to shy away from the war angle by stressing the wise-cracking romantic 'private war' side of this film. If yours is an action house then give it a bomber run over the target. The picture has enough action and romance to make any average audience happy. The fact that it is an air corps story should make the big difference with action seekers. In brief it has the stuff to gild the cuff without even starting to shout about the cast assigned to this film. In all your advertising you will not want to miss the box-office draw of this 'money' cast.

TEASERS

With size of the teasers determined by your budget, get a good border mat either from the press book or your local newspaper's mat service. Have a number of casts made of this mat so that the same border can be used on a number of different pages. Plant one on the sports page, classified page, womans' page, page three, news page, radio page and opposite the funnies, etc. Use the script lettering which heads this Showmanalysis which is available in several sizes of mats in the press book ads. Take it from. . . .
"A Guy Named Joe"
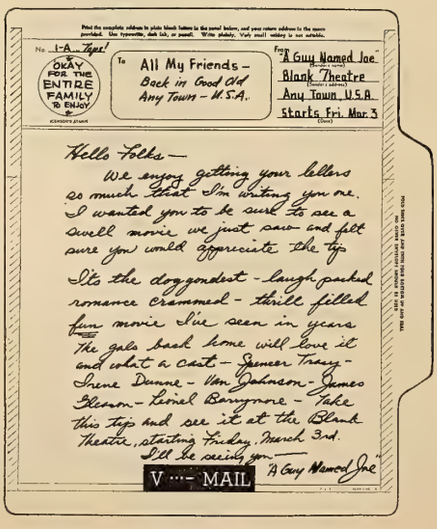
Here's just the movie to make you do it!

Similar copy ideas can be slanted toward the war, action or spectacle approach for action houses. Here the objective is to build reader interest around the title.

ADVERTISING COPY



To play down the war angle of this picture, why not stress words like; Entertainment, Fun, Laughs, Romance, Joyous, etc., by underlining or capitalizing them in your catch phrases. Here are several suggestions for copy which may give you ideas for ads that can be built around press book art.

You'll throw your hat in the air . . . and your HEART will go with it!

YOU can hardly tell there's a war going on! What a guy. . . . What a gal. . . .

What an ENTERTAINMENT!

The most fascinating little "private war" a swell guy and a grand gal ever tangled in. You'll split your sides LAUGHING . . . and feel a tug at your HEART, too.

TO THE GUYS. . . .
Hey Buddy—Got a match . . . for this Laugh jammed—Love crammed—Thrill packed show of shows?
TO THE GALS. . . .
Lookout Sweetie—Hang onto your heart. Here's a romance that's gay as a breeze and as joyous as spring.

These copy angles, of course, are aimed to take out the war "poison." We need not say more about the cast; sell those names big.

LOBBY DISPLAY

The old peep-show gag can be dusted off for this one. Build a deep shadow box with a small slot in the front. Make a blowup of the still in which Spencer Tracy is shown with Barry Nelson walking across the clouds and use this for the back of the box. On the front have the art shop letter this copy; "Want to see a pair of regular guys walking on clouds? Look through here! On the photo inside use copy . . . "Ever Been to Heaven?" Come on up with "A Guy Named Joe" for the happiest, funniest entertainment experience in years! This same effect can be produced by promoting store window in a busy location, with the copy painted on the window and then the entire window painted out leaving just a thin open line across through which the inquisitive may peep.

WINDOW TIEUPS

Beauty Parlors, Ladies' shops can be garnered for displays, using the copy slant: "Look your best for 'A Guy Named Joe.'" Men's stores of all kinds can be attracted with: "Just the Hats, Gloves, Suits, Shirts, etc. . . . for 'A Guy Named Joe'." If there's a big merchant or advertiser in your town who capitalizes on the "Joe" monicker, i.e., "Joe the Motorists Friend" —the sky's the limit—Sick 'em.

SPECIAL HERALDS

Every showman, awake to the value of direct mail, seeks to find some new slant to command reader interest. The following, while only a new adaptation of the old 'postcard mailed from New York' gag, will get results simply because it hasn't been done to death. Our proposal (as illustrated on this page) is to use the standard V Mail form for a message to mailing itself from the lobby of the theatre, and Erskine Johnson's coast-wide program featured guest appearances of Director Mitchell Leisen, Barry Sullivan, Mischa Auer, Warner Baxter and Catherine Craig on five successive nights in advance of the opening.

In addition, contests with tickets to the premiere as prizes were put on over Tom Hanlon's KNX program, the Old Gold program and the Al Jarvis program. The song, Suddenly It's Spring, written for the picture by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, has been plugged extensively on Ginny Simms' show, Eddie Cantor's program and the Abbott and Costello show.

Window displays, stressing the fashion keynote of the picture, were an outstanding phase of the campaign. J. J. Haggerty, Los Angeles women's shop, expended more than $25,000 to dress 20 windows with gowns used in the picture. Other deluxe window displays were used by such leading Los Angeles and Hollywood department stores as May Co., Silverwoods', Barker Bros., The Broadway, Coulter's and Roos Bros.

An innovation, the slide projector, showing some 50 color scenes from "Lady in the Dark," was installed at Haggerty's and Coulter's, and the stores clocked 14,785 spectators in a single day. At Haggerty's a police escort was summoned to clear the sidewalk of the mob surging to see it.

Street car banners, window cards and a heavy poster campaign rounded out the campaign.

Among the galaxy of stars, prominent players, directors and producers invited to the premiere were Ginger Rogers, Jon Hall, Warner Baxter, Mischa Auer, Barry Sullivan from the cast, as well as Director Mitchell Leisen, Ingrid Bergman, Claudette Colbert, William Bendix, Alan Ladd, Walter Abel, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Edward Arnold, Barbara Jo Allen, Gary Cooper, Fay Bainter, Binnie Barnes, Edgar Bergen, Cecil B. De Mille, Eddie Bracken, Walter Brennan, Fanny Brice, Barbara Britton, Billie Burke, Hillary Brooke, Charles Butterworth, Lynn Bari, James Brown, Judy Canova, Harry Carey, Mimi Chandler, James Craig, Nancy Coleman, Jerry Colonna, Joseph Cotten, Catherine Craig, Laird Cregar, Donald Crisp, Irving Cummings, David Butler, Alan Curtis, Lon Chaney, Jr., B. G. De Sylva, Harry Cohn, Marlene Dietrich, Helmut Dantine, Joan Davis, Laraine Day, Arturo de Cordova, William Demarest, Irene Dunne, Faye Emerson, Carl Esmond, Bill Edwards, Gracie Fields, Y. Frank Freeman, Henry Ginsberg, Reginald Gardiner, John Garfield, Judy Garland, Frances Gifford, Bonita Granville, Sydney Greenstreet, Samuel Goldwyn, Moss Hart, Rita Hayworth, Jean Heather, David Hempstead, Mark Hellinger, Hugh Herbert.

Also Paul Henreid, Alan Hale, Signe Hasso, Alfred Hitchcock, Hedda Hopper, Arthur Hornblow, Kim Hunter, Ruth Hussey, Walter Huston, Betty Hutton, George Jessel, Johnnie Johnston, Natalie M. Kalmus, Gene Kelly, Cecil Kellaway, Evelyn Keyes, Charles W. Koerner, Otto Kruger, Veronica Lake, Hedy Lamarr, Dorothy Lamour, Don Loper, Diana Lynn, Ida Lupino, Carole Landis, Fred MacMurray, Margo, Herbert Marshall, Victor McLaglen, Ann Miller, Carmen Miranda, Constance Moore, Victor Moore, George Murphy, Dorothy McGuire, Irene Manning, Virginia O'Brien, Gordon Oliver, Mabel Paige, Jean Parker, Katina Paxinou, Mary Pickford, William Powell, Marjorie Reynolds, Edward G. Robinson, Roy Rogers, Rosalind Russell, Ann Rutherford, Mark Sandrich, Joseph M. Schenck, Red Skelton, Alexis Smith, Preston Sturges, Akim Tamiroff, Shirley Temple, Carol Thurston, Sonny Tufts, Rudy Vallee, Hal B. Wallis, Harry M. Warner, Hal Walker, Commander Corydon M. Wassell, Billy Wilder, Victor Young, Loretta Young, Adolph Zukor and Lieut. Commander Eugene Zukor.

arms. The plot was originally conceived and written by Duvivier at that time, and when Jean Gabin, whom he directed in France, became available for the title role, Duvivier put the picture in work. Its reception will depend on proper advance exploitation, for there is entertainment in it for those patrons who enjoy an interesting characterization and a story about the war. The choice of Jean Gabin for the title role was an ideal one, for he is outstanding in his portrayal of "The Impostor," making him a believable personality, arousing the sympathy of the spectator at all times. Strong support is given him by Richard Whorf, John Qualen, Allyn Joslyn, Eddie Quillan and Peter Van Eyck. Ellen Drew hasn't much to do in the only feminine part. The picture is tops in every department. This being Gabin's second American film, try selling his name to your patrons. If you can get some captured German equipment for lobby display, use these in advance of opening date to attract attention. Contests for the most accurate story about the fall of France, should be run, with free tickets the prizes.

erage, the picture was given cooperative ads in all local merchant advertising. These ads, playing up the Plasma Premiere for "Three Russian Girls," broke in all newspapers and resulted in space from three-quarters of a page to two columns. Among the merchants who gave cooperative ads to the Plasma Premiere were: The Big Store, Klines, Rollman's, Fair Store, McAlpins, Sears Roebuck, Jenny Store, Pogue's, Giddings, Lawton Company and the Henry Harris Co. Many of the above merchants also arranged attractive window displays in which "Three Russian Girls" was given full credit.

All local trolleys carried special street car cards plugging the opening. Special 60x80 signs and 20x30 cards were displayed by the local Red Cross in all chapters and in prominent office buildings throughout the city.

Radio station WKRC devoted a number of five-minute broadcasts to the opening, and generous time via station WSAI for the Plasma Premiere was obtained through the Ibol Cigar and Model Laundry programs.

The front of the theatre was decorated with banners and special lobby pieces. Out front, prominently displayed were 40x60 blowups of the mayor's proclamation. Local Red Cross volunteers were active in front of the theatre and cooperated in the success of this unusual premiere.

With newspapers rationing space, this 11x12 car card became important item in 20th Century-Fox's Philadelphia campaign on "The Gang's All Here." Car cards are fast proving excellent ad medium.

Hints on Exploiting 'A Guy Named Joe'

lists. Theatres with a very limited advertising budget can purchase several hundred V Mail forms at the five and dime store, have the letter mimeographed and hand addressed to a very concentrated list at little expense.

Where money is no object and a large list is to be reached the standard V Mail form can be reproduced in quantity and the message printed on the form even to the point of including a cut of 'Joe' and his gal (Tracy and Dunne). This stunt can be used as a program covering a number of attractions where a theatre changes shows several times weekly. The copy we will leave up to you. Just tell the prospect what a swell show is coming to your theatre, when it's coming, and sign it "A Guy Named Joe." If you want to have it mailed from some other city the publicity man for MGM in your territory will no doubt be able to arrange it. As long as the form is not changed and proper address and postage is affixed the stunt is okay with postal authorities. We checked it to be sure.

ADD LOBBY DISPLAY

If there is a local hero overseas by the name of Joe, have the art shop reproduce a giant replica of the V Mail form with a congratulatory message to be signed by your customers. Put this in your lobby for signatures as an advance build up and then photograph the display and mail the reproduction to the service man.

OPENING NIGHT

Honor relatives of local GI Joes on opening night by inviting them to be your guests. Plan a special stage ceremony to make an event of the stunt. You might stage a Blood Donor Premiere for this show with the angle, "Give a pint of blood that 'A Guy Named Joe' may live."

EXPLOITATION

A teaser front can be used to good advantage. Build ten or fifteen foot letters of the word Joe. Start several weeks in advance by placing the giant 'J' on the front of the theatre. After a week add the 'O' and just before the opening add the 'E.' To complete the display stretch a banner above the letters with the balance of the title, "A Guy Named" and a banner below with the "now showing" copy.

Local 'Joes' can be listed for guest tickets in the classified columns of your local papers and not only should you be able to promote the space free but you should be able to talk the Classified Manager into using a display ad calling attention to the names as a promotional stunt for the paper.

Candy kisses could be distributed by a good looking gal with the imprint on the bag reading: A romantic kiss from "A Guy Named Joe."

The biggest and best promotion we can think of on this picture for theatres that can spend some money on a sure-fire stunt would be an adaptation of the old "Lady for a Dav" stunt. Have a local Joe who is either a service man or outstanding war plant worker take the most popular war plant femme for a one day holiday as the guest of "A Guy Named Joe." The gal can be selected by vote of her fellow workers in advance and the holiday could include a dinner as the guest of some prominent club such as Kiwanis or Rotary, an airplane ride, a shopping tour with merchant presents promoted for both, guests of the theatre to see the show and wind up with a radio interview with a prominent announcer getting their comments on the picture for the radio audience. News photographers could have a field day and the publicity should be socko. (One thing to remember is that your insurance should cover all activities of this kind.) Keep the feminine appeal of the picture foremost in your mind and in your campaign. Make everything about JOE romantic and you should enjoy a land office business.

Ruben Frels, vice-president, and H. S. Leon, director in Allied of Texas, accompanied Col. H. A. Cole, president, to the National Allied conclave in Chicago.

Interstate's booking office felt the effects of the draft in late weeks in the loss of Debs Reynolds (Navy), replacement Howard Baskins, former booker, for Oscar Korn, Jean Gregg (Navy) replaced by J. Armstrong from the warehouse, and Jimmie Braswell (Marines) replaced by Virginia Lyons, formerly shorts booker for Columbia.

Subscribed to originally at the December gathering of the members of Allied of Texas for a fund to get a Christmas present for Col. H. A. Cole, but held open to allow others not present to participate, it now is reported by the Allied office that the sum has reached $1115 and has been put into bonds until the market can open for an automobile. The list of subscribers includes: Don Dickson, Lonnie Legg, Phil Isley, Ruben Frels, B. R. McLendon, Jack Lilly, P. V. Williams, Walter Knoche, L. C. Tidball, H. R. Bisby, Dale Willson, Hans Smith, Ed Dorbrandt, Ray Bell, Raymond Cornes, Mrs. E. Jones, E. H. Rockett, D. B. Leverett, and Forest White.

DENVER

More than 60,000 bonds were sold up to last week-end by Colorado theatres, leaving around 40,000 to go to make the quota of a bond for every seat. The Rocky Mountain News, Denver morning paper, is cooperating fully in the theatre drive. A huge bulletin board has been erected in front of the News office, where the total bonds bought in theatres is posted daily, and on a platform a show is put on nearly every day. Denver and the state are about 75 per cent sold on their total quota, with theatremen doing all in their power to make the drive a success for other lines as well as their own.

Alberta Pike, formerly dramatic critic for the Rocky Mountain News, more recently in advertising and publicity, has been named publicity director for the Fox Denver theatres. She succeeds Herbert R. Hillman, who resigned to enter private business.

Ed Bluck, former theatreman of this area, was brought home by plane after spending 12 weeks in a hospital in California, where he was in war work. He was brought home by his son, Arthur, also a former Denver theatreman, who is on Army duty in Hawaii. The trip was made possible through the cooperation of the Red Cross and the Army. Another son, Ross, office manager for Metro in Denver, had been forbidden by his doctor to make the trip. Ross has had several serious operations recently.

Margaret Goyette, Denham publicity director, won third place and $250 in war bonds in the contest for the best campaigns on "So Proudly We Hail." The bonds were bought at the Denham bond booth by Harry Haas, Paramount district manager.

The State at North Platte, Neb., will be closed for several months due to the caving in of the roof during the heaviest snow of winter.

The Loveland, Loveland, Colo., closed by fire a few weeks ago, will reopen about March 1.

J. T. Sheffield, Republic franchise holder, spent a few days at his Denver exchange from his Seattle headquarters. He left for Salt Lake to inspect his exchange there.

Frank Sheffield, of the Merchant Marine, formerly a Republic salesman, came home on a furlough, and left a few days later to visit his parents in North Carolina. Jimmy Ecker, Republic booker, who succeeded Sheffield in the salesman job, left this week for California where he will enter the Merchant Marines.

DES MOINES

A total of 100 theatres in the Tri-States and Central-States theatre circuits issued a total of $1,335,627 in war bonds up to last week-end in the Fourth War Loan Drive, A. H. Blank, head of the two companies, announced. In addition the 100 houses have been credited with sales totaling $2,234,605 which resulted through premieres held in the theatres but sales made through retail merchants or other bond selling agencies. Heading the list of the two circuits in actual bonds issued is the Rivoli Theatre at Falls City, Neb., with a total of $140,300 and close behind is the Regent at Cedar Falls, Ia., with $126,500. Other theatres credited with large sales include: Majestic, Centerville, $87,000; Des Moines, Des Moines, $94,684; Capitol, Sioux City, $92,443; Call Theatre, Algona, $80,575; Granada, Norfolk, Neb., $42,550; Grand, Estherville, $46,725; and Englert Theatre at Iowa City, $30,575.

Collections received from two-thirds of the theatres in Iowa and Nebraska in the March of Dimes campaign total $73,000 as compared with total collections of $41,000 a year ago, A. H. Blank, Iowa-Nebraska chairman, reported. The reports include collections from over 300 of the 524 theatres and final reports are expected to shove the total over the $100,000 mark, Blank said.

The Stacyville Theatre has been reopened by a group of Stacyville business men headed by Burt Tyler. The house was closed last year because of business conditions.

Tri-States has postponed the holding of a second school for training women theatre managers until later this summer, due to the pressure of other business at the present time. Previously the circuit had planned to hold a school during January or February. The first school was held last summer with six women graduating into managerial positions.

Universal exchange in Des Moines has added two new employes, Mrs. Mabel Magnusson as a biller and Bill Kappler as assistant booker. Kappler, who formerly was assistant shipper at RKO, replaces Laurence Dunn who left Universal last fall. Paramount exchange has added Gweniviere Gustad as a biller.

Harry Hamburg, manager of the Paramount exchange in Des Moines, lost his mother who passed away following a long illness.

R. D. Goldberg, owner of the Arbor Theatre, was arrested by City Welfare Inspector Tom Knapp on a warrant charging exhibition of "immoderate moving pictures and advertising." Goldberg appeared at police headquarters, was booked and released on his own bond. Knapp said he had received complaints on the pictures when it was shown earlier at a Goldberg theatre downtown and had warned the operator then. He said the advertising on the Arbor Theatre billboards was "suggestive" and that "adults only" were to be admitted at the showing. The inspector charged that when he investigated he found the theatre packed with "kids from knee-high up" and added "the show was lousy." The show was advertised as "two sensational features," "Teen-age" and "Guilty Parents." The pictures were withdrawn from the Arbor Theatre but were returned to the Town Theatre, which advertised that they were brought back "by popular request."

DETROIT

Louella Parsons' all-star autographed copy of her book "Gay Illiterate" was auctioned off in Detroit, with the Fox Theatre winning the copy through the purchase of a $100,000 bond by David M. Idzal.

Harry K. McWilliams' Detroit friends were glad to hear about his appointment to assistant exploitation manager of Columbia Pictures. McWilliams formerly was associated with United Detroit Theatres, Inc. Before entering the show business he was a newspaperman.

Kay Briehan, platinum-blond manager of the Cinderella Theatre has something that ought to draw women to her theatre's War Bond Auction February 15. She has obtained a pair of non-black market Nylon hose as one of the prizes. Her ushers have cooked up the slogan—"Buy a Bond—from Our Platinum Blond."

RKO Uptown Theatre in Highland Park staged a War Bond Show on Thursday, with admission the purchase of a bond. A $50 bond entitled the holder to a main floor seat and a $25 bond to a balcony seat.

A poll of woman patrons at the Michigan Theatre after they had seen Ginger Rogers in "Tender Comrade" seems to have definitely settled the issue as to whether the picture's ending would be unsatisfactory. Another ending had been prepared in case the public reaction against the first proved too strong. But the pollsters at the Michigan Theatre say they failed to find a single departing woman who thought the ending should be changed. It seems the guy who called the picture a "four-handkerchief hit" knew his women customers.

RKO and the Michigan Theatre conducted a special essay contest in connection with the promotion of "Tender Comrade." Entries were offered War Bond prizes totaling $175 for the best discussions of 200 words or under on the question "Should a girl whose sweetheart is overseas accept dates?"

The Detroit Free Press carried a three-column shot last week of Barkerettes Arvid Kantor and Mrs. David Flayer selling a $500 bond to Harry Gilbert at the Film Exchange. That particular sale sent their bond sales record to $30,000 in the current drive.

Mrs. Alice Gorham, of United Detroit Theatres, who is leading the theatre section of the bond drive in Detroit, has come up with an idea in bond selling that is going over big in the churches. Mrs. Gorham's idea was simply that church members buy bonds to turn over to their churches for postwar church projects. Frank N. Isbey, in charge of the Michigan drive, reports that church people in general have responded to the suggestion warmly.

United Detroit Theatres will present the Midwest premiere of "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek," as that group's all-out effort to put the Detroit Fourth War Loan Drive over the top. The premiere will be given at the Broadway Capitol Theatre on February 15. Seats will go to buyers of E bonds. Other United Detroit houses helping to put over this phase of the campaign by selling tickets are the United Artists, Michigan, Palms-State, Madison, all downtown; the Riviera, Fisher, Royal, Cinderella, Varsity, Vogue, Ramona, Norwest, Annex, Alger, Regent, Rosedale, Birmingham, Bloomfield and Melvindale.

INDIANAPOLIS

Miss Reba Cornet, Universal exchange chief accountant, has resigned to be sworn into the Marine corps.

Henry Reiss, who operates the Tower and Ideal theatres in Louisville, is spending several weeks touring the south.

Carl Kemp, who has been absent from his desk at Paramount exchange on account of illness, is back on the job.

Peter F. Rosian, Universal district manager, was a visitor at the local exchange during the week.

Alberta Weinstein, of the Marcus Enterprises office staff has resigned and will join her husband stationed at a naval base in Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Crouch, who operate the Palace Theatre, Fairmount, Ind., have returned from a visit to their son, stationed in a southern military camp.

The wife of V. E. Burkle, who operates the Rialto Theatre, Fortville, Ind., is reported recovering from a severe attack of influenza.

N. R. Garland is the new addition to the RKO booking department. He succeeds Norma Rennegard, who will assume her former duties as secretary to Otto Ebert, office manager.

PRC has closed a deal for the season's product with Indianapolis Co-operative Theatres.

Chick Callaway, booker for the Indianapolis Co-operative Theatres, injured in an auto accident last week, is on the mend.

Tony Grabowy, Universal assistant manager, made a flying trip to Chicago to visit with his brother on furlough from the U. S. Army.

Sam Abrams, who has been interested with Joe Bohn in the PRC franchise for Indiana territory, has disposed of his holdings to Bohn. He will continue as sales manager for the company. Bohn, accompanied by Mrs. Bohn, will attend the PRC franchise holders meeting in New York, February 11-14.

Patricia McKean, daughter of Clyde McKean, Warners manager here, and Lieut. Jack R. Ingram, were married February 5, in the post chapel at Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

Committees have been chosen for Indianapolis Variety Club, Tent No. 10, by L. J. McGinley, the chief barker. The committees were: Heart fund, William Brennan and Claude McKean; membership, Mr. McGinley L. Hancock, first assistant and Al Taylor, second; sick committee, Earl Penrod, Sam Abrams, A. C. Zaring and William Watnough; house, Irving Fendrick, Mannie Marcus, Foster Gauker and Joe Smith, and Entertainment, Marc Wolf, Carl Niesse and Kenneth Collins.

MEMPHIS

Some 20 Memphis theatre managers and film exchange managers who met at the Variety Club last week decided on purchasing an additional $150,000 worth of War Savings Bonds. As all had already bought to the limit of their ready cash, they met Monday at the Union and Planters Bank to work out a deferred payment plan to buy bonds, it was announced by M. A. Lightman, who also reported employes of all film exchanges held meetings last week to increase their efforts to fill the Malco and Palace theatres Wednesday night.

It has been estimated, though the tabulation is not complete, that the loop theatres' March of Dimes contributions ran between $12,000 and $15,000 the largest amount ever collected for this cause.

Tommy Baldridge, former newspaperman, and lately publicity director with United Artists, is now a salesman with MGM exchange.

Louis Ingram, branch manager of MGM exchange, is offering a prize to the employe who sells the most bonds during the Fourth War Loan.

W. T. Branch, veteran operator with Loew's theatres, died last week. He had been with the company for more than 20 years.

Visiting film row last week were: Ed Rowley, Jr., of Robb-Rowley theatres, Little Rock, Ark.; W. R. Lee, of the Gem Theatre, Heber Spring, Ark.; Forest Dunlap, of the Ford Theatre, St. Smith, Ark., was visiting film row, and his son who is stationed at the Naval Training School, Millington, Tenn., near Memphis.

Manager Bays, of the Grenada Theatre, Grenada, Miss., was also a visitor on film row.

MIAMI

A Double War Bond Premiere staged at the Lincoln and Paramount theatres netted $2,600,000 for Uncle Sam here February 2. The Lincoln, in Miami Beach, previewed "Lifeboat" with the Army Air Forces radio show "Contact" and guest appearances of Choo Choo Johnson and Yvette, and the Paramount, in Miami, presented the first local showing of "Thousands Cheer" with another all-Army stage show, "Air Corps Caperers."

The March of Dimes campaign in Greater Miami was a great success, with $31,758 collected by the combined efforts of Paramount and Wometco theatres. Paramount collected $17,436, and Wometco $14,322 during the week of the drive.

The Beach Theatre, Paramount first-run house, staged a "Million Dollar Bond Show" on Tuesday, February 8. Forty stars and headline acts from local night clubs participated, including the entire Latin Quarter show, Sally Rand, Sharon de Vreis, Charley Farrell, Joey Adams and Tony Canzoneri.

Another Miami bond activity, staged the same night as the Beach affair, was the War Bond Preview at the Rosetta, under the guidance of Leslie Swaebe, Rosetta manager and head of Wometco's bond sales campaign. A stage show and showing of "Gung Ho!" was included in the fete, which was sponsored by the Miami Shores Post of the American Legion.

The Colony Theatre, Paramount house in Miami Beach, has gone back to a matinee policy. The theatre has been used afternoons by the Army Air Forces for classroom purposes.

A big campaign is being set up here for the initial showing of "Madam Curie" at the Sheridan, Paramount and Beach theatres.

Several managerial changes were made at Wometco Theatres this week. Floyd Peters, formerly assistant booker, has been made assistant at the Capitol. George West moved to the Miami as assistant, Lawrence Tinkham to the assistantship of the Plaza, and Jimmy Draughn to a similar post at the Rosetta. Earl Potter has been re-assigned the duties of relief manager for the neighborhood theatres, and William Hirschensohn has joined the company as the Cameo assistant. In two other changes, Jack Kernel was promoted to manager of the Parkway, and Joe Battersby transferred from the Parkway to the Mayfair.

Robert Ross of Wometco's accounting department has been accepted by the Army.

Jack Baker has resigned as assistant manager of the Paramount theatre. John Drinkhouse has been named to the post.

The Rex Theatre, Miami downtown house, has been moved up in run. Formerly a fifth run house, the Rex now plays mid-week pictures following the Sheridan and Beach.

NEW YORK

Free Movie Day for New York and New Jersey had the theatremen and exchange personnel up on their toes for long hours preceding the event which was given "the works" as never before in the history of a cooperative activity.

Plaudits should go individually to more personalities than there's room to list, but the type of initiative and showmanship New York film men and theatre operators are giving to the War Bond sales may be indicated by a sketch of what Century's Circuit's Sunnyside Theatre, across the bridge in Queens, will do for a Bond Premiere to be held February 14. The stage show will present Milton Berle; Johnny Long and his orchestra; Dick Stabile, Mildred Bailey; Roy Rogers; Zero Mostel and many others. Admission, of course, is by bond purchases only.

Joe E. Brown is scheduled to arrive in town Monday from Italy, completing a 150,000 mile travel for USO Campshows to all theatres of war as an entertainer of Soldiers, Sailors and Marines right on the fighting lines.

George Dindas, manager of the Strand under managing director Zeb Epstein for the past years and associated with the New York Warner house for 15 years, passed his physical Tuesday and reports for service early in April. Dindas is married and has one child.

Ben Kalmenson, Warner general sales manager, and Jules Lapidus, eastern division manager returned to their homeoffice headquarters Wednesday from a tour of the central district. Roy Haines, the company's southern and western manager, also came back from a 10-day trip to the southwest.

Approximately 100 Paramount employes in the metropolitan area have donated to the Red Cross Blood Bank in the third appeal sponsored by Paramount Pep Club. The record shows that every appointment to give with the fluid for plasma has been kept.

And speaking of donations to the blood banks, that was a neat slogan and inspiring idea that Walter E. Green, president of National-Simplex-Bloodworth, sent forth to all members of his organization. Said Green: "Let's give a pint of blood for every National man in the Armed Forces!" The response, was immediate and heart warming.

On the eve of his induction into the Army David A. Lipton, Columbia's director of advertising, publicity and exploitation was guest of honor on Monday at a luncheon given by more than forty members of his department.

Universal home office executives took the spotlight as the week's most frequent hosts—luncheon Tuesday for Julien Duvivier, director and author of "The Impostor," and on Wednesday a luncheon for Walter Wanger, producer of "Gung Ho!" which picture in addition to running up top grosses for theatres is proving a top-flight bond salesman on the record of sales in theatre lobbies.

OMAHA

All the $25 and $50 war bond tickets for Omaha's second war bond premiere have been sold.

Universal exchange has added Faustine McCormick to its inspection department.

Teeth extractions had Republic Branch Manager Harry Lefholtz on the shelf for several days.

Florence Brush, MGM utility girl, injured recently while riding in a taxi, is now back at work.

Eugene Dougherty, 15, Omaha school boy, wrote Bill Grady, MGM talent scout, about a job, received so much encouragement he is trying to raise money for a trip to Hollywood.

Omaha theatres contributed nearly $12,000 toward the $15,000 infantile paralysis goal through their March of Dimes program. William Miskell, state exhibitor chairman, reported this was three to four times better than last year. He said scattered reports from outstate also indicated receipts would be at least tripled. Ted Emerson headed the theatre division.

William Mack, manager of the Admiral Theatre, has entered the Navy.

Norman Neilson, office manager for RKO, has returned from the hospital and is recovering from an appendicitis operation.

Esther Moberg, United Artists cashier, is down with the mumps.

RKO held a big sales meeting here to start its Ned E. Depinet drive, which will run until May 18. Present were Walter Branson of New York, western division manager; Harry Gittleson, N. Y., his assistant; Charles Boasberg, New York, drive captain; and Ray Nolan, Prairie district manager from St. Louis. Following the meeting the RKO exchange members attended a screening of a talk by Depinet.

Council Bluffs, Ia., had a sell-out on its bond premiere which featured the appearance of Paul Kelly and Marjorie Woodworth at the Broadway Theatre, owned by Earl Kerr and managed by Dick Essancy. "Lassie Come Home" was the feature.

Mrs. Harold Johnson, wife of the Universal manager, has left for Los Angeles for a visit.

The 90-year-old father of Universal Salesman Phil Monsky and Mayer Monsky of Denver, district manager, recently broke his wrist and now is under nurse's care.

A bond premiere in Lincoln's Stewart Theatre boosted war bond sales $378,285. The March of Dimes fund also benefitted by $300.

Ike Rubin, Paramount salesman, received a birthday cake from Mrs. Mary Grooper, owner of the Empress Theatre at Wausa, Neb., with a note on it saying, "Do not open until ground hog day."

George Dilley, Paramount shipper who broke his leg recently, has left the hospital.

Highlight of Omaha's "Destination Tokyo" premiere at the Paramount will be the auctioning of an Arkansas calf, donated by Governor Dwight Griswold. The calf was won by the governor from Arkansas in a wager on bond sales during the Third War Loan drive. Whitey Ford, NBC comedian from Nashville, Tenn., will auction the calf from the stage.

Ralph Falkenberg, Jr., has left his job as manager of the Majestic Theatre in Lexington, Neb. His father is an exhibitor there.

William Miskell, Tri-States theatre district manager, made front page news with the suggestion that war bonds be purchased this year as Valentines.

Boy Scouts of Troop No. 97 helped out in the polio fund drive by taking up a collection in the Brandeis Theatre.

The Brandeis Theatre gave into the manpower shortage last week and switched to ushers. It was the last downtown house to change.

TEXAS MARINE. Georgia Chenault, of the Dallas Universal exchange, is the first woman recruit from that city's film forces for the Marines. Here she is in uniform. Exchange Manager Dutch Oldsmith says that his loss is the Marines' gain.

PHILADELPHIA

Ted Krasner, booker for the Easton Theatre in Easton, has been inducted into the Army. He will be replaced by E. Schisler.

Dick Brown, former Vitagraph checker and advertising poster sales manager now in the Army, was a Vine St. visitor this week.

Mark Rubinsky of the Circuit which bears his name spent the early part of last week visiting the exchanges.

Harold Hirshberg, manager of the Palace, Bethlehem, after a strict diet has brought his weight down from 230 pounds to a mere 160.

James Floyd, manager of the Orient Theatre, is in the hospital for checkup.

Miss Jackie Burt, assistant to Willie Cohen, office manager at 20th Century-Fox, is leaving to take a Government job in Washington.

Miss Viola Honig at Universal has been promoted to district reserve print booker.

Jerry Meyers, manager of the Bell Theatre, has been inducted into the Army.

Herman Rubin, veteran Paramount salesman, celebrated the Bar Mitzvah of his son with a party.

Saul Krugman of United Artists was partied by the Motion Picture Associates at a luncheon at the Warwick Hotel on Monday before going into the Navy.

Anita Colby, Columbia starlet, grabbed plenty of newspaper space for herself when she came into town to act as a press agent for the new Columbia picture, "Cover Girl." Ed Rosenbaum, Columbia exploiteer, piloted her around to the newspapers but the effort must have been too much for him, for he spent the balance of the week in bed after she left town.

Phil Gerson, son of Morris Gerson of the Colonial-Haverford-Overbrook-Hamilton goes up for his phvsical this week.

Irving Phillips, manager of the Cedar and 56th St. theatres, goes into the Navy this week. His place will be taken by Bill Winokur.

Charlie Ramb, manager of the Capitol, was in the hospital to determine whether he would have to have his appendix removed.

May Struss, Jack Greenberg's secretary, is back at work after a two month's vacation with her husband, Sgt. Harold Azine, one of the returned heroes from Bougainville Island.

At the Egyptian Theatre in Bala-Cynwyd, Joe Conway presented the Trapp Singers in a concert. Joe has also arranged to have a huge birthday party at the theatre to have the community help him celebrate his birthday early in April.

Ted Schlanger, head of the Warner Circuit, was lauded in the editorial columns of the Philadelphia Daily News for his efforts in turning over a dozen or more theatres in the Warner Circuit for the purpose of holding War Bond Premieres. In just two theatres, the Aldine and Boyd, the War Bond sales totaled almost $7,000,000.

Leslie Brooks and Edgar Buchanan, Columbia's featured players, did so well on their bond tours in upper Pennsylvania, that the War Finance Committee retained them to do additional stops in the City of Philadelphia.

The doctors decided not to operate on Edgar

The Best Man Won...

The most natural wedding in the world. He, always a good provider. She, filled with those golden qualities that only his loving ministrations can bring out. The Groom, faithful, dependable, hard-working. The Bride, amiable, receptive, quick to respond to good treatment. When he brings a few friends home to dinner (a box office line reaching around the block) she will not be put out. She will be delighted. She loves to have people around her (with cash in their hands). A shotgun wedding? Perish the thought—although if the truth must be told—she married him strictly for money.

Short Subject Reviews

Baa Baa Black Sheep (Excellent)

WB (9504) Sports Parade 10 mins.

While this Technicolor film is an excellent subject, it is hard to conceive its designation as a sports reel. Logically, it is a travel reel. The audience is transported via the screen to the sheep land of the West, with some of the most beautiful pastoral scenes providing a treat for the eye. It is the story of the raw wool industry showing the grazing lands, the corrals, the shearing, packing and shipping of wool, the branding with paint, the sheep dogs at work and the return to pasture. This is an interesting subject, beautifully covered and will be a welcome addition to any bill.

U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Band (Excellent)

WB (9605) Melody Masters 10 mins.

The story of what makes a military band tick is musically told with the able assistance of Lt. (jg.) Ted Weems, bandmaster of the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Band. Subject offers a real insight into the varied duties of our peacetime musicians, now in the service of our country. From "taps" to "reveille" the boys are hard at work on their musical chores. The numbers played against the authentic training background include: Heave Ho, Please Go 'Way and Let Me Sleep, Song of the Marines, Life on the Ocean Wave, Corrina, Girl Behind the Counter, Men of the Merchant Marine. Produced in co-operation with the Training Organization, War Shipping Administration, this is a made-to-order subject for showing with any type feature, one that will hold the interest and provide excellent entertainment.

What's Cookin', Doc? (Excellent)

WB (8726) Merrie Melodies 7 mins.

Bugs Bunny, riding the wave of popularity, provides another bang-up Technicolor cartoon treat for his host of fans. This time Bugs attends the Academy Award Banquet expecting to receive the "Oscar" for the best screen performance of the year. Outraged over his failure to get the award he appeals to the audience with a screening of a short clip from a previous film. "Should I get it?" asks Bugs. "Should we give it to him?" asks a member of the audience and then Bugs gets it: a deluge of over-ripe vegetables. Produced by Leon Schlesinger from a story by Warren Foster, this one is right up there with the best of the harebrained hare's efforts.

WB (9109) Santa Fe Western 20 mins.

While this short will stir up some action for the western fans it misses the boat for average audiences due to the overworked plot upon which it is forced to rely. Directed by D. Ross Lederman and starring Robert Shayne, Lupita Tovar, Pedro de Cordova, Harry Woods and Anita Camargo, the film deals with crooked officials who imposed exhorbitant taxes upon the original land grant holders in southern California. The plot involves Don Diego, owner of a large ranch, his lovely niece, Dolores, and Steve Randall, his ranch manager. A judge, in league with racketeers, imposes the taxes on Don Diego who, unable to pay in cash, has Steve deliver 1000 head of cattle. In a fight with the tax collector, Steve determines to fix the crooks by stampeding the cattle into the town. Harkness, the collector, swears revenge, attempts to steal the deed to Diego's land, sell the cattle and pocket the works. Diego is killed by Harkness and Steve gets the goods on the gang.

Who's Hugh (Slapstick)

Col. (5410) All-Star Comedy 16 mins.

Tycoon Hugh Herbert is too busy for his wife, so she goes to Palm Springs for a vacation. He pursues her, becomes involved with jealous husbands. For not-too-critical audiences there are several good laughs in the slapstick situations in this comedy. Hugh Herbert fans will enjoy it tremendously; those who have an indifferent attitude toward him will not be pleased. The subject was produced by Hugh McCollum and directed by Harry Edwards.

'Occupations' Subject Done on 'Global Basis'

Jerry Fairbanks, who produces the "Unusual Occupations" series for Paramount release, disclosed that the material for his next issue has been shot and assembled on "a global basis."

Contents of the reel includes a Chinese sequence; a picturesque occupation filmed in Brazil; a presentation of Jose Herrera from Durango, Mexico, and a sequence shot on the home front.

Operation of the Chinese Telephone System in San Francisco is said to be as attractive as it is novel, with all the pretty "hello-girls" bilingually capable of listening in Chinese and speaking in English—and vice versa.

The Traveling Goat Dairies of Brazil with headquarters at Sao Paulo constitutes one of the most picturesque and interesting sequences thus far filmed by James Shackelford, the roving cameraman for Scientific Films.

The "home-front" production will star Joan Davis and Jack Haley in their NBC radio comedy sparkle, with their musical director, Edward Paul, waving the baton; while two hitherto unseen but often heard young women will present their unusual occupations as sound-effects creators.

Waves Aid Campaign

Campaign on "Chief Neeley Reports to the Nation" staged by Charles Russell of the Ellanay Theatre, El Paso, Texas, received excellent support from local Wave recruiting stations.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Moss Hart Starts Work on 'Winged Victory' Screenplay; Mystery Film Slated for Durbin; Second Sinatra Picture

Alan Dinehart and Joan Woodbury have been signed for important roles in "The Whistler," Columbia mystery chiller based on popular radio serial. Leads are Richard Dix, J. Carrol Naish and Gloria Stuart. Picture is in production with Rudy Flothow producing and William Castle directing.

Will Walls, star right-end of the New York Giants, will desert professional football for a motion picture career. He was signed to a long-term contract by MGM and will play a featured role in "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," air drama to be directed by Mervyn LeRoy with Sam Zimbalist as the producer. The cast to date includes Van Johnson, Phyllis Thaxter, Robert Walker and Dorothy Morris.

J. Carrol Naish, mentioned prominetly as a leading candidate for the supporting player nomination in the current Academy Awards, was signed for the title role in PRC's "The Devil's Apprentice," Sigmund Neufeld production. Also set for the film, which will be directed by Sam Newfield, were Ralph Morgan, Wanda McKay and Tala Birell.

Jean Parker has been assigned the leading feminine role of "Detective Kitty O'Day," the Monogram comedy-drama which went before the cameras this week. Others signed for roles are Edward Gargan, Veda Ann Borg, Tim Ryan, Douglas Fowley and Peter Cookson. William Beaudine directs for producer Lindsley Parsons.

Eddie Bracken, who sang in Broadway musicals, will play a singing role and Betty Hutton will be the leader of a girl band in "Out of This World," forthcoming Paramount musical, which Sam Coslow will produce.

Republic has signed Curt Siodmak to write the screenplay for "The Death March," story of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines, which will be produced by Eddy White. Picture is expected to get under way by Washington's birthday with Anthony Mann at the director's helm.

Continuing to build the laugh-power in the new Frank Sinatra film, Director Tim Whelan added Eugene Pallette to the rapidly expanding list of comedians with which The Voice is surrounded at RKO. The heavyweight humorist joins a cast which includes George Murphy, Walter Slezak, Wally Brown and Alan Carney, Gloria de Haven, Adolphe Menjou and Anne Jeffreys. Robert Fellows produces.

Making his debut as a screen writer, Arthur Miller, New York playwright, has been engaged by Lester Cowan to adapt Ernie Pyle's best seller "Here Is Your War," which the producer is making for United Artists release.

Hunt Stromberg, producer, and Lewis Milestone, director, plans a series of important films together. The first will be "Guest in the House" starring Anne Baxter. Starting date for this picture has been set for March.

Noah Beery, Jr. and Martha O'Driscoll have been set by Associate Producer Warren Wilson to play the romantic leads in Universal's "Slick Chick" which started this week with Edward Lilley directing. This is the second time Beery and O'Driscoll have been teamed.

Delmer Daves has been assigned by Warners to direct "The Very Thought of You," starring Ida Lupino. This will be Dave's second directorial effort, first being the current "Destination Tokyo." Jerry Wald, producer of "Tokyo," will produce the new story, which starts the early part of March.

Seven-year-old Margaret O'Brien and six-year-old Jackie Jenkins will be teamed by MGM in a picturization of the novel of Wisconsin country life, "For Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." Roy Rowland will direct, Robert Sisk will produce.

"I Was a Prisoner of Japan" has been purchased by King Bros., producers, and will be filmed for release by Monogram under the highest budget yet set by the King company. Story, which gives actual inside facts regarding Japanese treatment of prisoners, is an original by John Darrow.

Osa Massen and Jonathan Hale were added to the cast of "Mission Thirty-Six," Columbia thriller slated to roll at once with Lew Landers directing. Leads are John Carradine, Larry Parks and Jeanne Bates. Jack Fier is producer.

"Keys of the Kingdom," 20th-Fox's three-million dollar production, got the "go" signal this week with Joseph Mankiewicz at the production helm. Leading role is played by Gregory Peck, and John Stahl directs.

Marjorie Reynolds starts work in "Bring on the Girls," Paramount's Technicolor musical in which she stars with Veronica Lake and Sonny Tufts. Picture is being directed by Sidney Lanfield with Fred Kohlmar as associate producer.

Universal has arranged for Leslie Charteris, author of the "Saint" novels, to write the screenplay of his original mystery story, "Lady On a Train," which he penned for Deanna Durbin. Felix Jackson will produce.

Paul Henreid again will be opposite Ida Lupino following their co-starring roles in "In Our Time." Actor was set for the leading male role in "Made in Heaven," romantic comedy which has been assigned to William Jacobs to produce. Teaming will mark third union of pair who also worked together in "Devotion."

Eddie Paul, musical director for Jules Levey's "The Hairy Ape," co-starring William Bendix and Susan Hayward, has engaged Michel Michelet to score the picture.

Moss Hart has reported to 20th Century-Fox to begin work on the screenplay of his show "Winged Victory." This is the picture that Darryl Zanuck will give his personal supervision.

Monogram has signed Arthur Caesar to write the screenplay for "Three of a Kind," from an original story.

Dick Haymes, Kay Francis, Martha Raye and Carole Landis enjoy a few "off-set" moments fondling and admiring a puppy dog. The quartet, and maybe the dog too, have been working in 20th-Fox's film, "Four Jills in a Jeep."

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

We're going over to the Selznick Studios today, on the chance that we might get to see one or two of the many stars working in "Since You Went Away." Such stars as Claudette Colbert, Joseph Cotten, Jennifer Jones, Shirley Temple and Monty Woolley.

Illness has taken its toll, so that when we arrive the only one we find working is Monty Woolley . . . and a children's chorus. We bump into him at the door; he's leaving the set because the children's singing of the Christmas Carols has so moved him that it left him in tears.

As we continue going in, the first thing we note is that we should have brought our galoshes, for the set is the outside of the home around which the story revolves. The house and grounds are covered with real snow, most of which is made by grinding ice through a machine . . . but in spots it's just white corn flakes.

We approach the house and hear the finishing bars of Silent Night. We get up close to the window to peek in and see what's going on. Inside, Director John Cromwell and the technicians and camera have just finished recording the scene which forced Woolley to leave.

Then we walk towards the front of the house. On the front porch we see two uniformed men waiting for their cue. With the ringing of the door bell they start their scene, and as the door opens in response, they enter into the festivities and also into the range of the camera.

When the singing is over, Director Cromwell gives the order for the two men to go ahead. While this is being done, we get some idea of what it's all about. After Jennifer's father enlisted, leaving his family in the capable hands of his wife, Claudette Colbert, they all pitched in to do their share . . . and this is one of those times: a Hangar Dance (in which over eight hundred extras were used) for the men, to which Jennifer is being escorted.

We are also told what Jennifer wears. It's a black fitted jumper with epaulet shoulders and a sky blue chiffon blouse with long flowing sleeves. The high neck is gathered and there's a black silk crepe jabot in front. Her hair is worn in page boy bangs, long in back, with a black velvet bow on each side.

With the shooting of this scene over, there's a lull, for the next one takes place in the kitchen of the home, and they must set up for it. So being short on time, we decide to leave.

Until next week.

Deanna Durbin Signs New Pact With Universal; To Run 6 Years

Signing of Deanna Durbin to a new and exclusive contract to run for the next six years was announced by Universal last week. The announcement comes at the completion of Miss Durbin's first seven-year contract with the company, and extends to thirteen years the period in which the singing star and the studio have been associated in a series of successful motion pictures.

The association between star and studio during the first seven years of her career has been unique in that Miss Durbin became a star overnight with her first full-length picture, "Three Smart Girls." In the seven years that followed, Miss Durbin appeared in thirteen pictures, each one tailored particularly to her talents and intended to carry her through adolescence to maturity.

Contract was signed just as Miss Durbin was completing her fourteenth picture, an adaptation of Somerset Maugham's story, "Christmas Holiday," under the guidance of Felix Jackson, who currently has in preparation her next film, "Caroline," to be filmed in Technicolor with music by Jerome Kern.

'Storm' to be Big-Budget Film

Producers William Pine and William Thomas have set the first week in June as the starting date for "Storm," their high-budget special for Paramount, which they have had in preparation for more than six months. The screenplay for the picturization of George Stewart's best-selling novel has been completed by Writers Lewis R. Foster and Isabel Dawn. Original locales of the book will be used in the filming of the picture.

Charlie Chan Films to Continue

Monogram has taken up its option with Krasne-Burkett Productions for a continuation of the Charlie Chan series starring Sidney Toler, and two new pictures will appear on the 1944-45 program. The two Chan films on the current season's schedule, both completed, are "Charlie Chan in the Secret Service" and "Murder in the Fun House."

Headline Provides Film Theme

News headline of Nazi prisoners holding "kangaroo court" trials of fellow prisoners have documented the story premise of Columbia's "A Nazi in the U.S.A.," which Sam White is preparing for production. Writer is Charles Kenyon, with Robert Willmot collaborating. Picture, as conceived before news story broke, parallels real-life fact that prisoners condemn one of their number to death for alleged disloyalty to Nazi cause.

Small to Film 'Cristo' Sequel

"Edmund Dantes," the novel which Alexandre Dumas wrote as a sequel to his famous "Count of Monte Cristo," was announced by Producer Edward Small as an important addition to his 1944 production schedule. The colorful story is now being adapted for the screen by Scenarist John Kafka. It will be filmed on the same lavish scale that distinguished Small's production of "The Count of Monte Cristo."

To Do Animated Sequence

Leon Schlesinger will do an animated sequence illustrating Cab Calloway jive talk for Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1944." The new deal stems from the success of an animated cartoon sequence which Schlesinger did in "Hi Diddle Diddle."

Selznick to Make Film Anthology, 'Tales of Passion and Romance'

David O. Selznick has announced plans for a film anthology called "Tales of Passion and Romance" in which virtually all the Selznick stars will appear. The project which has been in preparation for more than two years, is scheduled for summer or early fall production. There will be sequences for Joan Fontaine, Ingrid Bergman, Jennifer Jones, Dorothy McGuire and Shirley Temple, and appearing with them will be Joseph Cotten, Alan Marshal and Gregory Peck.

Selznick also plans to have his missing star, Vivien Leigh, make a sequence in England, and has discussed with Alexander Korda a plan to have Korda film it there. Alfred Hitchcock and William Dieterle, under contract to Selznick, and other directors from outside will direct the several sequences. The full picture is expected to run from three to three and one-half hours.

Signed for New Sinatra Film

Anne Jeffreys, blonde Powers model who was on her way to career in grand opera when films lured her westward, gets the second feminine lead in the new Frank Sinatra picture at RKO Radio. Miss Jeffreys takes the role of a New York musical comedy queen whose "sugar daddy" backs a show which George Murphy produces and in which Frank Sinatra sings. She falls in love with The Voice in the picture, and is heroine Gloria de Haven's rival. Picture is being directed by Tim Whelan and produced by Robert Fellows.

'Heavenly Days' to Start Soon

Howard Estabrook has turned in the final script for the RKO picture "Heavenly Days," and Producer Robert Fellows has set February 17 as the starting date for this new Fibber McGee and Molly feature. Estabrook also will direct the picture.

To Film Story of Variety

Arrangements have been completed for Warner Bros. to film the story of Variety and its founder, the late Sime Silverman, as a cavalcade of American show business. The film will be called "Mister Broadway."

As indicated by the theme, symphonic music will have an important part in the picture, which Joseph Pasternak will produce and Henry Koster will direct.

Discovers Photogenic Paint

Use of Technicolor being restricted until after the war, a specially prepared gray paint said to have photogenic qualities exceeded only by Technicolor, is being introduced in Rene Clair's "It Happened Tomorrow." Arnold Pressburger, producer of the picture, had every set dressed for his approval, then all furniture removed to paint the set gray. Then all furniture was painted gray, and when the scene was finished, the furniture was refinished in its original state.

Advance Dope (SR)

SEVEN DAYS ASHORE (RKO) Comedy-With-Music. Principals: Gordon Oliver, Wally Brown, Alan Carney, Elaine Shepard, Alan Dinehart. Director, John H. Auer. Plot: A Merchant Marine trio on leave, have their desire to find pretty girls fulfilled by their leader who knows all the players in an all-girl band. Owing to a mix-up of messages from the ship, he is met at the pier by three girls, one of whom is his fiancee. His pals join the two lovelies from the band, but each of them files a breach of promise suit against him. He finally extricates himself, arranging affairs so that his pals get the girls.

BLOCK BUSTERS (Mono.) Drama. Principals: East Side Kids, Harry Langdon, Roberta Smith, Noah Beery, Sr. Director, Wallace Fox. Plot: A wealthy dowager brings her grandson of American-European parentage and education to live on the lower East Side. There he gets mixed up with the East Side Kids. He swipes one of their girls and also joins their baseball team—and it begins to look like trouble ahead. They all relent, however, when they see that he has really become one of the gang.

SAGEBRUSH HEROES (Col.) Western. Principals: Charles Starrett, Dub Taylor, Constance Worth, Jimmy Wakely and His Saddle Pals. Director, Benjamin Kline. Plot: A reporter on a small town newspaper asks the members of a radio troupe to entertain the children in a Boys' Home. One of the boys contrives to let the top man of the troupe know about the crookedness going on—which causes considerable trouble for him. By playing the part of a mysterious masked rider, just like his radio impersonation, this man discovers the information about their rustling activities. After they have convicted themselves the home is turned over to an honest man to run.

THREE MEN IN WHITE (MGM) Drama. Principals: Lionel Barrymore, Van Johnson, Keye Luke, Marilyn Maxwell. Director, Willis Goldbeck. Plot: The great diagnostician has been training two young doctors, one of which is to be his permanent assistant. He gives each one a difficult case promising the job to the one handling his the best. One gets a young child with a glandular or dietary ailment and the other a young girl with a very ill mother. Both men solve their problems, but the diagnostician manages to retain them both on one pretext or another.

LADIES OF WASHINGTON (20th-Fox) Drama. Principals: Lois Andrews, Judy Marshall, Doris Merrick, Sheila Ryan. Director, Lewis King. Plot: A young surgeon in wartime Washington becomes involved in a murder due to his infatuation for a beautiful opportunist. This girl had inveigled her way into the home of a cooperative group of youngsters. When the other girls learn of the surgeon's predicament, they gang up and start an investigation of their own. In this way they make her confess her dealings with a saboteur and tell the truth about the occurrence.

MAKE YOUR OWN BED (WB) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Jack Carson, Jane Wyman, Irene Manning, Alan Hale, George Tobias. Director, Peter Godfrey. Plot: A wealthy cosmetic manufacturer in need of household servants, gets together with a detective and his fiancee, and by telling him about spies, etc., gets them to act as servants. At first, this is only a hoax, but eventually things really happen and the detective is on the job at the opportune time.

Glory for Many

Typical of the constructive processes which characterized the whole administration of the industry's Fourth War Loan campaign were the utterances of Chairman Charlie Skouras to representatives of the trade press this week.

In giving an account of his stewardship of the campaign, hard-hitting and energetic Skouras emphasized the good work done by all branches of the industry and the wholesome effect accruing to the motion picture business, while playing down his own contributions to the industry's handsome performance on behalf of the Treasury's bond sales efforts.

The rewards, as Skouras pointed out, are great indeed. Motion picture people and the industry as a whole have won deserved increase of respect and admiration for a willingness to serve unselfishly in the interests of the Government. The summary detailing the number of various types of bond-selling events that were put on by theatres and other branches of the business (which will be found elsewhere in this issue) is a mere sketch and not at all revealing of the hard work, the enthusiastic spirit and intelligent enterprise with which showmen backed the campaign.

Little wonder that Charlie Skouras and his aides are impressed with the fine respect with which Government officials and business and professional men serving on the War Loan field staffs regard motion picture people as a result of first-hand knowledge of what members and representatives of this industry did in connection with the Fourth War Loan.

Skouras and those able men who worked with him on the campaign deserve all the credit an appreciative industry can express in an unanimous vote of thanks followed by three long, lusty cheers for a grand job well done.

Learn the Lesson Now!

The film industry has no such representation in the legislative halls that should be maintained at all times—both in the state and the nation.

This is no brief for a "lobby." For no such technique is desired or desirable. It is a reminder, we hope, that the man whose investment of time or money, or both, in motion picture theatre business must never lose sight of the fact that he owes it to his own selfish interests to keep his story before the people of his community and his rights to fair treatment before those parties who represent his community, his congressional district and his state in law-making bodies from town council right on up to the national legislature.

It has been said before, is being said now, and probably will be said here again, that there will never be really fair treatment for the theatres in matters of taxes and other legislation until the vast majority of theatremen, working on their own initiative, as well through good exhibitor organizations, make it a point to have their representative in Congress hear from the folks back home on matters affecting the theatre. With the opportunities for acquainting people, via screen and other mediums of publicity, as to the costs increased admission taxes would mean to the individual theatregoer, the solons who enacted the legislation should have heard plenty from the folks back home. Organization representation worked hard and, we think, well, in that fight—but to be effective, the spokesmen in this case, as in every other such instance before and to come, must have the backing of a "convincer" to the law-makers in the form of word from the people he directly represents.

Theatremen Please Note!

The headline stories in newspapers and magazines are not always on the side of detraction for the motion picture industry. And it would be a good idea for the theatreman to keep his eye out for those stories which tell about some of the realities in order that he may either quote or give circulation to them in his own community.

Paul Hunter, the publisher of Liberty, has done well to circulate an attractive reprint of the article by Gretta Palmer, veteran columnist and reporter, which was published in the February 19th issue of Liberty.

The truth behind the Gretta Palmer story is that this able reporter went to Hollywood for an absolute "low-down" on the film personalities and the whole setup of the movie capital. She was prepared to call the shots as she saw them at first-hand investigation. Being a good reporter, she did call the shots, but they were not of that kind which makes a "sensational" story of scandalous treasure for the smear and mud-tossing fraternity which specializes in attacking the movies.

The investigation made and reported by Gretta Palmer is summed up in a sentence toward the conclusion of her story:

"Hollywood is doing a job of which every American should be immensely proud."

Schnitzer On Leave

Edward Schnitzer, United Artists western division sales manager, left New York Wednesday for an extended vacation in Florida due to his health.

Schnitzer's duties at the U. A. home office have been taken over by J. J. Unger, who recently joined the company, it was announced by Carl Leserman, general sales manager.

Upon his return from Florida, Schnitzer will take over new duties at the home office which will be announced following his return.

Lou B. Metzger Dead; Active in Loan Drive

Lou B. Metzger, who had been in ill health for some months, died on Monday at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood. The West Coast theatre owner was 49. Metzger was active in the Fourth War Loan campaign as associate of Si Fabian, chairman of the WAC Theatres Division, and was forced to delay beginning his duties at the start of the drive when he suffered a heart attack en route to the East. At that time he was hospitalized in Kansas City for several weeks. Subsequently he fulfilled his role in the campaign.

A member of the 81st Field Artillery in the first World War, Metzger has been associated with the Stage Women's War Relief and other activities of a philanthropic nature. A native of Kansas City, he first entered the film industry in Portland, Ore., where he started as an inspector in his uncle's exchange. Then came a few years as a salesman. After the war Metzger worked in Kansas City and New York exchanges. Entering the field of exploitation, he represented Universal, and went back to sales in 1925 when he was made Western division director.

The next step came a year later when Carl Laemmle made him general sales manager in the U. S. and Canada. In 1928 he became general manager for Universal. During these years he had acquired theaters in California, and after a year with Columbia as sales manager, he operated the theatres himself. He later represented British International Pictures in this country, while remaining active in the theatre field.

DFC for Lt. Bernhard

Lt. Jack Bernhard, U. S. Army Air Forces, a former Universal producer and the son of Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Bros. Theatres, has been awarded his third decoration for valor, the Distinguished Flying Cross, according to word received in New York this week.

WB Made 31 Government Shorts

At the behest of various Washington agencies, including the OWI, WPB, and Army and Navy headquarters, 31 special short subjects were made by Warner Bros. in the past year, it is revealed by Jack L. Warner.

Seller's Market for Exhibs and Distribs

That the current "sellers' market," the greatest in film industry history, is working two ways—for exhibitor and distributor—is pointed up by announcements of distributor sales as well as the reports of theatre attendance in practically all sections of the country.

The box-office reports on key runs continue to hold to high marks, with new records a common condition. Announcement this week by Neil Agnew, Paramount general sales manager, that the company's third block of features has run up a total of 4703 contracts in five weeks, illustrates the exhibitor demand for product as well as indicates a high degree of quality pictures currently coming from the studios. According to Agnew's statement, the selling on the block comprised of "Miracle of Morgan's Creek," "Standing Room Only," "The Uninvited," "Henry Aldrich, Boy Scout" and "Timber Queen," is running neck and neck with Block Six of last year, which was the fastest selling group the company has offered since the start of decree selling.

Pictures currently in the limelight on the basis of attendance figures for key situations include: "Passage to Marseille," "Old Acquaintance," "Miracle of Morgan's Creek," "Lady in the Dark," "Standing Room Only," "Gung Ho," "Ali Baba," "Madame Curie," "Song of Russia," "Tender Comrade," "Higher and Higher," "What a Woman," "Fighting Seabees," "The Lodger," "Lifeboat," "Jane Eyre."

Allied Committee to Urge Industry Stand on Taxation

The trend of cooperation between different independent exhibitor organizations to put up a solid front to meet taxation problems was brought further along this week when Allied's taxation committee, made up of representatives from Ohio, New Jersey and Connecticut, were to meet in New York on Friday. Coordination of the industry was to be the subject of the conference, and it is expected that a definite report will be ready soon to send each Allied state unit for approval.

The MPTOA is also surveying the question by mail to its members, and it is understood replies so far received have signified a willingness to enter a cooperative agreement on the taxation question. Such a coordinating group is said also to have the approval of unattached exhibitor organizations.

Tarawa Film Is Ready; Universal Distributing

"With the Marines at Tarawa," two-reel Technicolor film of the bloodiest engagement in Marine history, has been approved for release by the WAC, with Universal handling the distribution.

The film, which was cut, scored and assembled by Warner Bros., will begin national circulation on March 2. Rentals charged will be based upon the cost of prints, press book and advertising accessories. Universal is contributing its distribution facilities.

"With the Marines at Tarawa" is, in the opinion of WAC and Universal officials, probably the most vivid and exciting combat film report to come out of the war thus far. The Marine Corps photographic unit that landed on the island, headed by former-actor Captain Louis Hayward, was at times a distance of only 20 yards from the enemy. Scenes of close fighting in the film show this.

Warners 40 Years Ago

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., got a tremendous kick out of clipping received this week from Youngstown Daily Vindicator, his home town. It read: "40 Years Ago Today: Second in series of bowling matches between the Manson brothers and the Warner brothers gives H. and R. Manson 949 and A. and H. Warner 926."

To Outline Red Cross Drive Plans on Feb. 24

Plans for the conduct of the 1944 Red Cross campaign by the industry will be outlined at a breakfast meeting in New York on February 24, it was announced Wednesday by Joseph Bernhard, national chairman of the M. P. Division. Precise details of conducting the drive as a whole as well as by theatres in particular will be explained. In view of the importance of the theatre activity, the WAC is making efforts to assure an attendance of all local theatre managers, exchange personnel and home office advertising and publicity members.

The committee set up to handle the breakfast includes: Sam Rinzler, chairman; Max A. Cohen, co-chairman; Dave Weinstock, arrangements and treasurer; Sam Rinzler, Sol Schwartz, Dave Weinstock, Edward Alperson, tickets; Fred Schwartz, Leo Brecher, program; Charles MacDonald, Don Jacocks, Harry Lowenstein, reception; Myron Siegel, secretary.

Bergman to Discuss Theatre Advertising at AMPA Meet

Maurice Bergman, Eastern advertising and publicity director of Universal, will address the AMPA luncheon to be held in New York on February 23, on the subject of "What Has Happened to Advertising in the Theatres?".

Joseph Bernhard

(The Man on the Cover)

General Manager of Warner Bros. Theatres who is serving as Chairman of the industry's Motion Picture Theatres Red Cross Drive to be conducted during the week of March 23 to March 29, inclusive, and which has set a quota more than tripling the total raised for the cause in 1943, with the theatres set to collect $10,000,000 during the week. Mr. Bernhard last year took a leave of absence from his company post to serve in a special capacity with the Navy. His son, Lt. Jack Bernhard, USAAF, a former Universal producer, was in the news again this week with the report that he had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, his third citation for distinguished service in the European theatre.

Rank to Set Up Own Exchanges in U. S.

American expansion plans of J. Arthur Rank's British film organization now call for the immediate establishment of exchanges in 31 key cities and the making in Hollywood of eight pictures in partnership with American producers, it was revealed this week by Arthur W. Kelly, managing director for Rank in the United States. In forming his company Rank used the name Eagle-Lion Films, Ltd. Now in building up an American branch he has used the same name, with the usual change from Ltd. to Inc., under U. S. laws. Thus the companies are legally separate, although under one management.

Arthur Kelly

Eagle-Lion is to distribute 15 or 16 top-budget pictures in this country, Kelly said, with only the best of the British product being shown here. The process of building up the 31 exchanges is already in motion, although it is not thought they will be complete by the time the first of the Eagle-Lion product finds its way to American screens.

Kelly said the first of the pictures, "The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp," will be distributed immediately on the strength of offers from two major companies to handle the physical distribution in centers where the Rank outfit has not yet set up offices. Kelly also announced six other films lined up for release here. They are: "Canterbury Tales," produced by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger; "Caesar and Cleopatra," produced by Gabriel Pascal, starring Vivien Leigh and Claude Rains; "Henry V," in Technicolor; "The Way Ahead"; and Noel Coward's "This Happy Breed" and "Blythe Spirit." All but 'Blythe Spirit" and "The Way Ahead" have been completed.

The eight films to be made in Hollywood will be through deals with American producers, probably independents in most cases. Rank signified that he would finance certain productions here some time ago, and this is the logical outcome of his overall plan for world distribution and production.

Eagle-Lion has opened offices at 522 Fifth Avenue. Kelly has with him thus far his secretary, Mary Ramsey, and Dave "Skip" Weshner, who will be publicity and advertising director.

Edward Dodds Becomes Executive Producer at Universal Studio

Edward Dodds, first assistant to Martin Murphy, Universal studio manager, was this week raised to the status of production executive. He will work with Associate Producers Edward Lilley and Frank Gross. The promotion of Dodds moves Morris Weiner and Henry Spitz up also. The latter two now become first and second assistants, respectively, to Murphy.

Dodds is a veteran of Universal. He is starting his twenty-fifth year on the lot, eighteen of them as first assistant to Murphy. Weiner has spent twenty years in the production spot, and Spitz five. All men moved into their new jobs and assumed their new duties on Monday.

'Hitler Gang' Tradeshow March 24

Paramount will trade show "The Hitler Gang" in all exchange centers on March 24. The picture will be in Paramount's fourth block.

Industry Lauded for Loan Campaign

The motion picture industry can be very proud of its achievements and efforts in the Fourth War Loan, Theodore Gamble, chairman of the War Finance Division of the U. S. Treasury Department, declared in a telegram to Charles P. Skouras, chairman of the industry campaign, last Wednesday.

Text of Mr. Gamble's message, perhaps the most important received by the industry committee from the Treasury Department, follows:

"If present averages are maintained through the end of the Drive then we will go over the top on 'E' Bonds. You and all those associated with you can be very proud of this as it reaches a new milestone in wartime financing. I earnestly urge that you relay it to all your county and city chairman.

"You will be interested to know we are announcing in tomorrow morning's papers that total sales of 14 billion 191 million dollars have been achieved. It will not be possible for us to know the final outcome of 'E' Bond sales around which your campaign was largely built until close of reporting on February 29. There is, however, at this moment evidence that your campaign has been invaluable in helping us roll up unprecedented 'E' Bond sales. The 'E' Bond sales in small communities have been especially gratifying and it is hoped that these sales will continue unceasingly until the final day of your campaign. The Secretary and members of the War Finance Division have asked me to express sincere appreciation to you, to your associates and to all of the patriotic men and women in your industry who have aided in this important home front task.

"It is of vital importance that all theatres see that every sale made until the last day of reporting on February 29 is turned in to banks, postoffices, etc., and subsequently to the Federal Reserve Banks. Every stub of every bond in the Federal Reserve Banks as of midnight February 29 will be counted in the Drive. Like a late closing box-office all activities until the last minute will be helpful. I know we all realize the importance of the next two weeks in the sale of 'E' Bonds."

Paramount Announces Trade Showings for Fourth Block

Paramount's fourth block of features was announced this week. The pictures are "The Hour Before Dawn," "The Navy Way," "Going My Way," and "You Can't Ration Love." Trade showings of "The Hour Before Dawn" and "The Navy Way" are set for the February 24, while the other pair will be seen the 25th. All showings will be in the Paramount exchanges except New York and Los Angeles—where the Ambassador Theatre will be used—and Albany, where the 20th Century-Fox projection room is used.

The schedule for New York follows: February 24, "You Can't Ration Love," 10:15 a.m.; "The Navy Way," 11:30 a.m.; "The Hour Before the Dawn," 2:15 p.m., all at the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange, 345 West 44th Street; February 25, 10:30 a.m., "Going My Way," at the Normandie Theatre.

Zanuck's 'The Purple Heart' To Be Tradeshown on Feb. 23

Tradeshowings of "The Purple Heart," Darryl Zanuck production, will be held on February 23, it was announced this week by 20th Century-Fox. Screenings will all be held in the company's exchanges, with the exception of Portland, Ore., and St. Louis, where outside projection rooms will be used.

"The Purple Heart" is a March release and is one of two films comprising block number eight. The other in the group is "Four Jills in a Jeep," for which trade show dates have not as yet been set. Lewis Milestone directed "The Purple Heart," and it has a cast that includes Dana Andrews, Richard Conte, Farley Granger, Kevin O'Shea, Donald Barry, Trudy Marshall and Sam Levene.

'Lady in Dark' Tradeshown Feb. 28

"Lady in the Dark" will be tradeshown by Paramount in 29 cities on Monday, February 28. All showings will be held in theatres, rather than projection rooms, and in Washington, D. C., the screening will be held in the U. S. Department of Interior auditorium in the evening. Boston and Philadelphia showings will also be in the evening.

Richmond New Columbia Producer

Ted Richmond, former independent producer, has been signed by Columbia to a term contract to produce under the executive supervision of Irving Briskin.

Hopalong Westerns Out For Duration—Sherman

There will be no more Hopalong Cassidy westerns for the duration. Instead, Producer Harry Sherman plans two to four big budget pictures a year. The war demise of Hopalong was revealed last week by Mr. Sherman who had been in New York to discuss various deals and returned Friday (11th) to Hollywood.

The producer already has a top budget feature completed in "Buffalo Bill," which is slated for 20th Century-Fox release in the near future, and he has several story properties at hand, including two recent novels, "Ramrod," a Saturday Evening Post serial, and Ed Doherty's "Rockabye Brady."

The most unsettled matter is that concerning release. The Cassidys have been released by United Artists, and Sherman is at present discussing release of the big pictures with that company. It is known, however, that several other distributors have made overtures to Sherman. He declares that nothing certain can be settled until the UA discussions have been completed.

Oscar Morgan Off on Coast Trip To Line-up 1944-45 Para. Shorts

Oscar A. Morgan, general sales manager of Paramount shorts, left last week-end for Hollywood on the first lap of an extended trip in the interests of Paramount shorts and news. While on the Coast, Morgan will meet with the various short subject producers to discuss preliminary plans in the preparation of Paramount's short subject program for 1944-45. He will confer with Jerry Fairbanks, producer of "Popular Science," "Unusual Occupations" and "Speaking of Animals"; George Pal, producer of the "Madcap Models" Puppetoons, and Y. Frank Freeman, Walter MacEwen and Louis Harris at the Paramount studios on the Musical Parade series.

Pvt. Matty Fox Safe in London

Pvt. Matty Fox has arrived safely in London, officials of Universal Pictures in California were notified this week. Fox is a former vice-president of Universal.

A & C Film Starts in March

Production of the new Abbott and Costello picture, as yet untitled, will start at the MGM studios at the end of March with Charles F. Riesner directing and George Haight producing.

Films Vital To Combat Troops

Declaring "motion pictures rate with food and mail from home as vital elements to morale in combat areas," Humphrey Bogart returned to Hollywood Wednesday with Mrs. Bogart (Mayo Methot) from a 35,000-mile three-month entertainment tour to Italy and North Africa, arranged by Hollywood Victory Committee and USO-Camp Shows.

"In Italy, we played most shows within three or four miles of the front." Bogart reported, "there we found soldiers seeing 16-mm movies during brief rest periods when relieved from active fighting. Every Special Service Officer we talked to stressed the vital function movies play in maintaining morale. They also stressed the importance of men in forward areas getting best pictures and latest ones."

Bogart reported "Action in the North Atlantic" and "Sahara" had both played Italian circuit when he was there, and that one question asked everywhere was whether he had found "Rick's Cafe" on his way through Casablanca.

The North African area, he said, appeared to be amply supplied with new, first-class films. That, he said, is strictly a first-run territory.

Independents Propose Separate Deals for Percentage Pictures

As the time draws near when some definite decision on the consent decree is inevitable, matters this week still moved slowly on the Washington and distributor fronts, but the independents, as the result of their Chicago conference, came up with eight proposals designed to correct certain alleged faults or shortcomings in the brief presented by the distributors to Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Of the proposals—or recommendations—made by the independents, perhaps the most important affecting the individual theatre owner was the suggestion that distributors be required to sell all percentage pictures under separate contract. That is, that no exhibitor be forced to play a certain number of percentage pictures in order to obtain a flat rental group. This echoes complaints heard on every side and is also reflected in exhibitor comments as printed in STR's Leaders of the Industry number of last December 25.

As for selling generally, the independents recommended that distributors offer their product in four blocks a year, with westerns and reissues left out of the groups. Blind-pricing would be eliminated, according to the proposals, since designations of prices would apply to those made when the contracts are signed, unless a separate agreement is made. A straight 20 per cent cancellation privilege was asked. Provision was also made to include a clause to prevent forcing of features, a consideration that was dropped in the distributors' brochure.

Arbitration received broader treatment in the independent's proposals than has yet been the case. The theatre men would give the complainant exhibitor his choice between jurisdiction by one or by three arbitrators, chosen from the regular panels of the American Arbitration Association in each city containing exchanges. However, the independents would agree in this situation that if the complainant chose to present his case to the three-man board he could not appeal the decision, whereas he could file an appeal if the case was reviewed by only one arbitrator.

Another dissenting opinion by the independents was that they recommended a new decree —if any—should run for only three years instead of the ten proposed by the distributors.

Some parts of the distributor brief were left unchanged. These included sections on licensing in different districts, some run, cancelling immoral pictures, withholding prints, and sections 12 through 19.

Comment on the Chicago resolutions thus far has not been extensive, but William F. Crockett, representing the Virginia MPTO, declared there was only a slight difference of opinion between his organization and the proposals produced from the Chicago conference on the stand to be taken, and they were "different in emphasis rather than substance." What the Virginian MPTOA wanted, said Mr. Crockett, was adequate provision for dealing with circuit expansion, clearance, and tradeshowing.

Thumbs Down on War Films Overseas, Says Joe E. Brown

War pictures are absolutely out as entertainment for troops overseas, said Joe E. Brown this week after he had returned from his long tour of the war fronts. The soldiers want musicals and action films first, Brown declared, with all the entertainment kept clean.

On the whole, the comedian found the film situation abroad in good order and improving all the time. Only in China are conditions bad. There the boys get the films last, and the stock often arrives in poor condition due to shipping difficulties. It is also difficult to bring in projection equipment. Brown said the servicemen in China are most in need of entertainment because they are farthest from home and more or less segregated from the activities of other fronts. Brown is leaving this week-end for the Coast, where he will resume picture-making and also appear in a radio show originating from Hollywood.

Warner Stockholders Re-elect Directors for 2 Year Term

The six directors of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., were unanimously re-elected for a term of two years at the annual meeting of stockholders this week at Wilmington, Del. The six are: Harry M. Warner, Major Albert Warner, Jack L. Warner, Joseph Bernhard Robert W. Perkins, and Waddill Catchings.

The only other matter of importance at the meeting was the adoption of an amendment to the Certificate of Incorporation designed to eliminate every reference to preferred stock. This course was taken because the company had redeemed and retired all its preferred stock last year.

Harmon Speeches in Book Form

A compilation of speeches by Francis S. Harmon executive vice-chairman of the WAC, was published this week in book form under the title, "The Command Is Forward." The book contains 66 pages devoted to excerpts from addresses on the film industry in war and peace. The publisher is Richard R. Smith.

PRODUCER-STAR. Constance Bennett signed a contract in New York this week under which she will produce and star in pictures for PRC, whose Vice-President In Charge Of Production Leon Fromkess is seen in the photo above with Miss Bennett as she signs a pact under which she will produce and play the star in two pictures for the 1944-45 season and providing options for more pictures in following years.

Philadelphia Educators Take Up Films As Aide

For the first time in a history of fluctuating relations with the film industry, the Philadelphia Board of Education has announced a specific plan to use motion pictures as a means of furthering the knowledge of high school youngsters. A Film Critics Club for young people is the method developed to this end, and it is being organized jointly by the Division of Education of the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Division of Visual Education of the Philadelphia Board of Public Education.

The club has been designed to "explore the use of the film for the purpose of creating better understanding among the peoples of the world, and to serve also as a forum for the discussion of topics relating to the film, and later, perhaps, as a student workshop for the production of films."

More than 100 youngsters drawn from every senior high school will meet at the Art Museum alternate Saturdays beginning February 26. E. M. Benson and Paul E. Long, representing the Museum and the Board, are directing activities, with the help of local newspaper critics and executives from film producing companies. The Museum runs a series of free motion pictures, and through arrangement with Warner Bros. Theatres, a few students will be selected each week to screen new films and report back their findings.

Columbia 'Dates to Win' Drive Dedicated to Sales Personnel

As a tribute to its sales manpower and the part it has played in cementing exhibitor friendship and goodwill for the company, Columbia has dedicated its annual campaign, "Dates to Win," to its sales force, A. Montague, general sales manager, announced Tuesday. The drive which is already under way terminates June 22.

Doty Leaves UA, Minneapolis

Leo J. Doty, branch sales manager for United Artists at Minneapolis, resigned last week after 23 years with the organization, to accept a responsible post-war project position in Minneapolis. Norwood Hall, northern Minnesota salesman, has been transferred to succeed Doty. Starting as assistant branch sales manager at Kansas City, Doty has continued with the company in many capacities during his 23 years.

'Seabees' Visit Jimmy

When a kid is Official Mascot of the Seabees and is at the same time a lame shut-in it means he can have a film premiere all of his own. Jimmy Carrick of Pittsburgh is the youngster who enjoyed such a premiere—no doubt to the envy of the other kids—when Republic set up equipment at the seven-year-old's home and held a press preview of "The Fighting Seabees" so he could watch his heroes in action. Jimmy was also presented with a silver ring bearing a Seabee seal, and there was cake and ice cream for all.

Chicago Theatre Men Prepare for New Tax

Circuits and independent theatre owners of Chicago are preparing ways and means to apply the new admission taxes, even though there is a possibility that President Roosevelt may veto the tax bill when it reaches his desk. Chief consideration is to plan ticket prices that will be of even figures wherever possible, avoiding the use of pennies, and thus helping to relieve the penny shortage.

The Revenue Department has announced it will allow the use of old tickets already printed after March 1 in the event the President does sign the bill or permits it to become law without his signature. In this case the tickets will mostly not have the correct new price. According to word received from a leading Chicago printer, only two requirements will be necessary. The theatre owner or manager must post the new prices in a conspicuous spot at the box-office and the first number of the ticket roll must be recorded at 10 a.m. on March 1 for proper inspection by the revenue officers. They must also obtain tickets printed with the correct new price within thirty days.

30 P.C. of 20th-Fox Employes In Service Are Now Overseas

Twentieth Century-Fox and subsidiaries, including National Theatres Corporation, now have a total of 3249 men and women in the armed services, 30 per cent of whom are known to be overseas at battlefronts and bases in North Africa, the South Pacific, Europe and other theatres of war.

National Theatres, a subsidiary of 20th-Fox, leads manpower contributions to the various services with a total of 1300; the studio follows with a total of 545, and the Home Office with approximately 191. Exchanges in New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Kansas City, Detroit, Boston, St. Louis, New Orleans and Dallas are far up on the honor roll. Every exchange throughout America and Canada is represented in serving the allied cause.

English Films Gets B.I. Picture

English Films, Inc. announced this week that it has acquired distribution rights for the United States and Latin America of "Secret Mission," Marcel Hellman production dealing with the British Intelligence in its collaboration with the French underground. The picture will be released shortly.

Aircraft to Pictures

Cliff Lewis, for the last two years publicity director for Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp., has joined the MGM studios as assistant to Frank Whitbeck, head of the advertising and exploitation department. Lewis was formerly with Paramount for 18 years. He will work on MGM's 20th anniversary campaign.

Monogram Doubling Accounts This Year, Broidy Tells Meet

An increase of 1500 new theatre accounts, the addition to the organization's sales and production forces of well known men in their respective fields, and predictions that the season ahead will mark even greater expansion than was registered during the past year, were among the announcements made to Monogram franchise holders and exchange representatives at the company's two-day sales meeting which concluded last Sunday.

W. Ray Johnston

W. Ray Johnston, president, presided at the meetings, and in an address to the assemblage declared that the formula which is being followed by Monogram has been proved in the strides made and has won the unqualified endorsement of all executives associated with the company.

Steve Broidy

Steve Broidy, vice-president and general sales manager, said that "Up to this time we have added 1,500 new accounts," and he added that Monogram expects "to close the season with a 100 per cent increase in the number of accounts on the company's books." He announced that for the coming season the number of "A" pictures would be increased from six to eight, with each production to cost approximately a half million dollars.

Harry Thomas, Eastern sales manager, and Ed More, New York office executive, announced plans for a "Fifty Years of Service" drive honoring Johnston and Broidy.

The appointment of Arthur Greenblatt, former general sales manager of PRC, as a home office special representative was announced by Broidy.

Max Fellerman,, who recently left RKO, is another newcomer to the Monogram setup through his association as partner and associate with Ben Batzman and Jack Dietz in the production of several pictures under the Banner Productions organization, which recently signed a new contract to produce for Monogram distribution.

In attendance at the sales meeting were:

Harry Berkson, Buffalo; Robert Adler, Albany; Arthur C. Bromberg, Atlanta; Herman Rifkin and Ben Abrams, Boston; Sam Hinson, Charlotte; Nate Schultz, Cleveland; Ed Blumenthal and John Franconi, Dallas; B. Pritchard, Memphis; Henry Glover, New Orleans; Joe Felder and Nate Furst, New York; Sam Rosen, Philadelphia; Harry Brown, Washington; Ben Welansky and Mark Goldman, Pittsburgh, together with their salesmen and bookers. Steve Broidy, vice-president and general sales manager, Lloyd Lind, assistant to Mr. Broidy in the East, also John S. Harrington and J. P. Friedhoff from the home office will attend. Representing the Canadian offices will be Oscar Hanson, franchise holder, and Harry Kaufman, general manager.

FILM TRAVEL LOG

Tess Michael, United Artists fan publications contact, went to Hollywood this week for a two-week confab with company representatives and coast editors.

Oscar A. Doob, Loew advertising and publicity head, back from Florida after a three-week vacation.

Norman H. Moray, Warner short subject sales manager, who just returned from a southern trip, set out again Wednesday for midwest key cities.

George A. Smith, Paramount western division manager, in Los Angeles this week, goes on to San Francisco, and then to Portland and Seattle, returning to New York via Salt Lake City and Denver.

Paul Scofield, of the Warner studio publicity department, is on his way back to the coast from New York. Paramount exodus to the coast: John Krimsky, Roy Winkler, and John Hertz, Jr.

Sam Jaffe, 20th Century-Fox producer, left New York this week for California. Irving Rubine, his press representative, accompanied him.

Eight Films in Monogram's New Block for Current Year

Monogram this week announced eight features to comprise the second block for the current season.

The makeup of the second group is as follows: "Where Are Your Children?" currently playing engagements in several key cities; "Hot Rhythm," musical; "Million Dollar Kid," East Side Kids comedy-drama; "Voodoo Man," starring Bela Lugosi; 'Detective Kitty O'Day," Jean Parker starring; "Murder in the Fun House," Charlie Chan detective play; "Follow the Leader," East Side Kids starring, and "Trail of the Yukon."

Monogram Withdrawing Prints Of 'Jane Eyre' Filmed in 1934

Branch offices of Monogram have been instructed to withdraw from circulation all prints of "Jane Eyre," produced in 1934 with Virginia Bruce in the name role, it was announced in New York this week. The announcement from the New York offices of the company said that requests for reissue of the picture have come in from various territories, but that the company feels it would be unethical to do so at this time while 20th-Fox is currently presenting a new production of the Charlotte Bronte novel.

All-Woman Staff at 20th-Fox Exchange in Oklahoma City

With the departure this week of Jack Whelihan, office manager, for the Naval Training Station at San Diego, Cal., 20th Century-Fox's Oklahoma City Exchange has become the first all-girl film exchange office in the U. S.

In the past few weeks the Oklahoma City staff has lost Whelihan, Booker Byrd and Salesman Friedel to the armed forces.

The only males associated with the Oklahoma City branch are the salesmen and Branch Manager M. W. Osborne.

Gottlieb Acquires 'Charm' Show

Arthur Gottlieb, head of Du-Art Film Laboratories, who is entering the ranks of independent producers, has acquired the film rights and title to the radio show, "The Hour of Charm," with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra, who will appear in the film.

Film Industry's War Loan Participation Has Won Tremendous Goodwill, Asserts Skouras

The film industry has gained tremendous goodwill for its role in the grand scheme of putting over the Fourth War Loan. This was the keynote of a conference on Tuesday between members of the famous Flying Bondsmen and the trade press that marked the official end of the campaign for the Bondsmen. Sparked by National Chairman Charles P. Skouras, and integrated by such members of the group as B. V. Sturdivant, "Rick" Ricketson, Andy Krappman, Seymour Peiser, and Sam Shain, the discussion made it evident that the industry had won the confidence of former doubters through the relations between the WAC and the War Finance Committees all over the country, and the cooperation of 190,000 film workers.

It was pointed out that before the campaign started the local War Finance groups, made up of bankers and the most conservative individuals in each area, were inclined to hold off when requested by the Treasury Department to work with the WAC. However, during the actual drive the cooperation that developed between the two led to most amicable relations and a new judgment of the motion picture industry. Twelve of the War Finance chairmen entirely of their own will have widely expressed enthusiastic appreciation of our work in the drive, and the Treasury Department has for the first time put on a nation-wide radio program to honor the film personnel.

Will Benefit Next Drive

This, suggested Sturdivant, meant not only satisfaction for the outcome of the Fourth War Loan drive, but indicated how much the next loan campaign will gain from the good relations worked up between the WAC and the War Finance Committees.

The satisfaction of the WAC in the cooperation from exhibitors was described by Chairman Skouras when he pointed out that he felt the industry had not only done a fine job for the Fourth Loan, but that the campaign had given the members of the Bondsmen "plenty of ideas for the fifth, sixth or any other campaigns that may be necessary."

"One thing that was not done before," said Skouras, "was to get the small exhibitors to go out and sell bonds. You'd be surprised how theatres all over the country have joined in selling bonds. For instance, 17,000 of the seating charts were sent out, and we almost immediately had many requests for duplicate sets. All of the 190,000 workers in motion pictures cooperated. That means managers, doormen, everybody.

"Dick Walsh of the IATSE sent letters personally to all operators in the U. S. asking every one to sell bonds. Nobody in any branch turned us down. The film salesmen did a great job in selling the idea to exhibitors. Herman Robbins of National Screen put his entire organization at the disposal of the War Activities Committee.

"We started from nothing and had only three weeks to get things going. Our part in the grand campaign was to supply showmanship, and we tried to put everything we know about show business into the job. We are delighted with the results."

To Use Honored 100 Ideas

Mr. Skouras and the other members of the Bondsmen revealed that the Honored 100 contest was going to develop into a springboard for the next campaign. After the Honored 100 are selected, it was explained, they are going to be asked to submit brochures on what they did to win their honors, what ideas they put in motion that worked out so well. From these ideas the Fifth Loan drive will be laid down.

"We'd have been very glad in this campaign to have the ideas of the winning exhibitors to use, and that's why we think the next one will be even better," declared the Bondsmen almost in unison.

Asked if any figures were yet available on the total—or near total—bond sales in theatres, Mr. Sturdivant explained that it was decided to have such figures released only by the Treasury Department.

In the course of the press meeting a comprehensive resume of activities undertaken during the campaign was released. These were the exploitation features that brought about the admiration of the Government and the public:

- 3300 bond premieres.
- 4000 Free Movie Days and millions of free theatre tickets given to bond purchasers.
- Special War Loan films every week on every screen, seen by 285,000,000 moviegoers.
- Newsreels every week on every screen seen by 570,000,000 patrons—95,000,000 per week.
- Nation-wide tours of war hero and Hollywood personality Bond Battalions.
- 480 appearances of Hollywood star Bondbardiers in key-city rallies.
- The Flying Bondsmen.
- 10,000 theatre managers entered in "Honored Hundred" bond-selling competition.
- More than 15,000 theatre bond booths and box-offices taking war bond orders.
- 61,440 outdoor bond-selling events by showmen.
- Swing-shift bond premieres.
- Hollywood star broadcasts.
- Thousands of theatre bond auctions.
- Newspaper-radio-retailer-bank-outdoor advertiser-theatre cooperation and coordination.
- Junior Commando-American Legion honor medal.
- Sponsoring of the Liberty ship, S.S. Carole Lombard.
- 14,000 theatre front displays.
- Motion picture industry state bond proclamations.
- Mobile bond-selling units.
- Theatre-staff neighborhood bond canvass.
- 6000 authorized theatre bond-issuing agents.

A Bond-Minded Staff

All ten employes of the Hoo Hoo Theatre, Gurdon, Ark., have worked diligently in the Fourth War Loan drive, and their efforts have met with success.

Shortly after the drive opened, Manager Ben A. Dyer summoned the members of his staff, explained his plans to sell "a bond for every seat," sent his boys and girls out to make their sales. During the first week, employes reported sales totaling $500. This figure, together with Dyer's own sales at the theatre, brought the Hoo Hoo above its goal. A $25 bond has been sold for every 55-cent seat, and sales are still going strong.

Result: Hoo Hoo employes are proud, and rightfully so. They have proved themselves dependable and reliable bond salesmen. Not the least proud: Manager Dyer himself.

'100' Results in March

The Honored 100 winners of the Fourth War Loan Drive will be announced shortly after March 15, it was revealed this week by the Flying Bondsmen group of the WAC. The 10,000 competing exhibitors will have until the last day of February to report their totals, thus in effect extending the drive for these theatres. The state exhibitor chairmen will then have until March 15 to get these final figures to the Treasury Department, with the announcement of the winners coming, it is thought, five days to a week later.

Goldberg Red Cross Campaign Manager

Joseph Bernhard, industry chairman for the Motion Picture Theatres Red Cross Drive, announced Tuesday the appointment of Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Theaters, as campaign manager for the 1944 Drive, which runs from March 23 through March 29.

Lou Brager, also of the Warner Theatre department, has been appointed to work with Mr. Goldberg as assistant campaign director. Charles A. Smakwitz, assistant zone manager and advertising head of Warner Theatres in New York State, was appointed publicity director.

Another luncheon meeting was held Wednesday in the Nimrod Room of the Hotel Astor. Those attending, besides Mr. Bernhard, included Ned Depinet, Leon J. Bamberger, S. H. Fabian, Francis S. Harmon, Mort Blumenstock, Harry Goldberg Charles A. Smakwitz, Lou Brager, Herman Robbins, Charles P. Skouras, B. V. Sturdivant and Rick Ricketson. At this luncheon a working plan to organize the entire country was set up.

Utopia First in New York State To Triple Its Bond Quota

First motion picture theatre in New York State to triple its sales of a war bond for every seat in the motion picture industry's Fourth War Loan drive is the independently operated Utopia in Flushing-Hillcrest, Long Island.

Paul Raisler, owner and manager of the Utopia, announces that 12,094 individual "E" bonds, amounting to $168,875, plus bonds in other series totaling $46,648, were purchased at the theatre up to the third week of the theatre's participation in the drive. He believes it possible that sales would amount to 4 bonds per seat before the drive was completed.

Denver Distributor Chairman Plans Screening Room 'Bond Premiere'

Len Gruenberg, distributor chairman in the Denver exchange area for the Fourth War Loan Drive, likes bond premieres so much he's holding one of his own.

Gruenberg sold out the entire seating capacity of the local Paramount exchange, 50 seats, for a premiere on February 29.

4 for Every Seat

One of the outstanding bond-selling jobs in the east during the Fourth War Loan campaign has been accomplished by Joe Samartano, manager of the Palace Theatre at Meridan, Connecticut, Harry F. Shaw reports. Samartano has already sold to date three and one-half times the capacity of his theatre. A special High School War Bond Show scheduled for the Palace Monday night was expected to carry him "over the top" once again to make his total four bonds for every seat.

'U Day' Concludes Drive in Oklahoma

To personalize the Fourth War Loan drive and tell each and every person in the state that "you must do your part . . . you must be a bond seller as well as a bond buyer," all Oklahoma celebrated "U Day" on Tuesday.

Plan was to make everyone in the state conscious of "U Day" through all radio programs, newspapers, screens, stage announcements, window displays, etc. Starting with the break of dawn all radio programs "pitched in" and all newspapers carried E bond applications as well as reproducing in full the Governor's proclamation on "U Day."

Each theatre in the state had two-minute stage speakers and transcribed bond announcements. Many theatres, even though they had previously had Free Movie Days, duplicated this activity on "U Day."

Schools were dismissed for the day, with all children participating in the bond-selling efforts as salesman. In the evening, a special "U Day" broadcast reported bond results for the day, county by county, as in an election returns broadcast. Every county chairman wired results direct to the Governor's mansion which were relayed on the radio over the state.

Advises Patrons of Dividend With Every Bond Purchase

Manager Bill Levee of the Liberty Theatre, Freehold, N. J., advised patrons via a sign in his lobby that bonds purchased during the Fourth War Loan would invite the purchasers to see the show free.

Levee also took space in the newspaper to let the people know that bonds are sold night and day at the Liberty; that the theatre has sold more than $50,000 worth of bonds to Freeholders; and that a free show goes with the purchase of every bond.

Double-Truck Cooperative Ad Hails St. Paul, Neb., Bond Show

Merchants of St. Paul, Nebraska, co-operated with the Riviera Theatre in staging a Howard County War Bond Holiday and Bond Premiere recently.

The fifteen merchants took space in a double-truck co-operative ad which appeared in both the St. Paul Phonograph and the Howard County Herald. Photographs of local men in service, including those killed and missing in action, added to the impressiveness of the layout.

Foxe Hits 2-for-Seat Record

Jack Foxe, manager of Loew's Columbia Theatre, Washington, D. C., who was the first manager in the District of Columbia to sell a bond for every seat, had this week achieved the record of selling two bonds for every seat. A total of 2353 individual bonds have been sold in ratio to a seating capacity of 1174.—Wa.

Industry Leaders to Be Feted by Skouras

In appreciation of the excellent co-operation which they have provided in the interest of the Fourth War Loan campaign of the Motion Picture Industry, distribution chieftains of all the film companies, officials of the War Activities Committee and the 12 Flying Bondsmen will be paid tribute Monday evening February 21 at a testimonial dinner to be tendered by Charles P. Skouras, National Chairman of the Fourth War Loan campaign committee.

At this dinner will be those industry leaders who served with Ned E. Depinet, chairman of the Distribution Committee in the campaign, the officials of the War Activities Committee and the 12 top executives who by their voluntary work in carrying out their assigned tasks contributed what is termed by Skouras "among the most valuable contributions to the success of the Fourth War Loan campaign."

Those who are expected to attend include:

Abe Montague, Leo McCarthy, Ed Morey, Neil Agnew, Charles Reagan, Ben Kalmenson, A. W. Schwalberg, Herman Robbins, George Dembow, Tom Connors, Wm. Kupper, Wm. Michels, Gradwell Sears, Carl Lesserman, Paul Lazarus, Sr., Wm. Rodgers, Maxwell Gillis, Wm. Scully, Ed Gomersall, Ned Depinet, Leon Bamberger, Robt. Mochrie, Dan Michalove, E. L. Alperson, Harry Brandt, Francis Harmon, Si Fabian, Arthur Mayer, Geo. Schaefer, Ed Schreiber, J. R. Vogel, Maj. L. E. Thompson, Leonard Goldenson, Oscar Doob, Harry Kalmine, Herman Wobber, John H. Harris, Jos. Bernhard, J. R. Grainger, Steve Broidy.

Small Hoosier Town Praised For Helping Further War Effort

Nationwide attention has been focused upon Gas City, Indiana, for the manner in which it has devoted itself to furthering the war effort.

Recently the small community was commended by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, for the public's response to the call for volunteers in a local war plant: the Owens-Illinois Glass Company.

Manager Ted Parvu of the tiny Arcade Theatre, the local high school principal, two clergymen, a coal merchant, and all of the high school seniors, are working full- or part-time in the glass plant.

Recently, Leslie Lewis, the school principal, was brought to Washington where he was interviewed on the Owens-Illinois radio program, "Broadway Matinee."

Gas City is a community with a population of less than 4000, but more than 1150 people are on the payroll of the Owens-Illinois plant.—Ch.

Making available four pictures from which to choose, the RKO Orpheum Theatre, Denver, held a contest in which bonds were offered for the best 50-word statements on why the contestant chose any one of the four films for the Orpheum's war bond premiere held on Tuesday night.

Dimes Total Builds

Over 2000 theatres, located in various sections of the country have reported $688,414.97 to date in the 1944 March of Dimes campaign.

Miller, Donaldson and Co., certified public accountants, have again volunteered their services in auditing the March of Dimes accounts.

According to figures made available by Walter Vincent, national treasurer of the theatres' committee, circuit collections in metropolitan New York ran, in nearly all cases, 100 per cent ahead of 1943. Following are circuit reports: Century $26,242 ($13,934 in '43); Skouras $42,256 ($29,583 in '43); Randforce $25,216 ($9,138 in '43); Loew's $443,782 ($212,142 in '43); RKO Theatres $227,500 ($116,249 in '43); Fabian $22,979 ($16,703 in '43); Cinema $7,887 ($3,535 in '43); Brandt $40,000 (approx.) ($16,000 in '43); Walter Reade $13,076 ($7,178 in '43); Rugoff and Becker $6,893 ($2,323 in '43).

Five WAC Shorts For March Release

During March, five war information films will be distributed under the auspices of the War Activities Committee—Motion Picture Industry. Three are 10-minute subjects and two are the briefer "Film Bulletins." These were produced by the film industry in cooperation with the Office of War Information.

"The Why of Wartime Taxes," No. 89 in the WAC release schedule, is set for March 9th. It was made by Columbia, and will be distributed through that company's exchanges. It explains in simple terms what happens to the $6 a week deducted from Mr. Average American's paycheck.

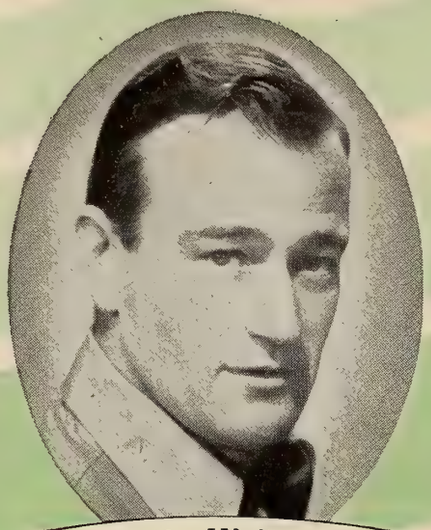
For the 16th, "Prices Unlimited," produced and to be distributed by Universal and No. 90 in the WAC series, illustrates how rationing works as a price control measure.

"America's Hidden Weapon," No. 91 in the series, was produced and will be distributed by Warner Bros., beginning the 30th. It "exposes" food as the hidden weapon and shows how farmers pooled their resources to turn out the greatest crop in the nation's history.

"Film Bulletins" 12 and 13, which are attached to the newsreels of all five companies and later are given supplementary distribution to theatres which do not play newsreels, deal with the conservation of tires and waste paper, respectively. Number 12 is scheduled for release on the 2nd, while No. 13 is penciled in for March 23rd.

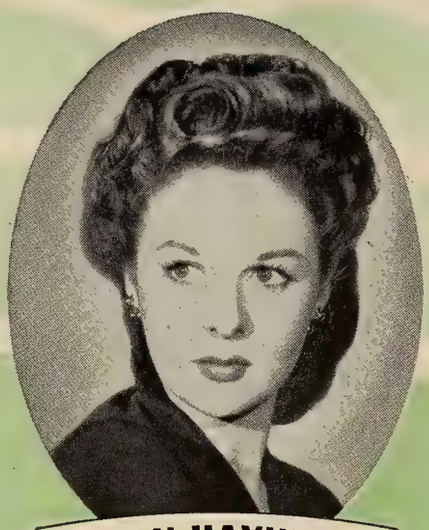
Rochester Theatres Participate in Red Cross Drive for Plasma

Three Rochester motion picture theatres have been participating in the Red Cross blood plasma program with a special recruitment campaign.



The drive, under direction of the WAC, and headed locally by Jay Gordon, opened at Loew's Rochester, moved to the RKO Palace and then to the Century Theatre.

Facilities for registering recruitments were set up in the theatre lobbies, with a Red Cross worker in attendance.



Century Sells $3,459,000 Bonds

Early this week, a total of $3,459,000 in bonds had been sold at theatres of the Century Circuit. Houses selling a bond for every seat included the Elm, Nostrand, Kingsway, College, Quentin and Valley Stream.

VAST POPULAR APPEAL

Republic has shot the works to insure wide public support of initial film of SeaBees' exploits. For this is a picture of vast popular appeal—one that has what it takes to roll up the biggest grosses of any footage to come out of the Republic studios. Exhibitors will be the benefactors of Republic's wisdom in producing the first picture extolling the heroic accomplishments of our naval construction battalions. The wide publicity that has been given the blood-tingling and imagination-stirring deeds of the SeaBees will assure the success of this picture, one of the exploitation plums of the year.

Thrills, excitement and action have not been spared . . . the force of the drama is softened by a strong injection of romance . . . holds out a powerful lure to the femmes. —FILM DAILY

PRE-SELLING BY REPUBLIC

The first full-dress tribute to the Fighting SeaBees, Navy combat construction battalions, is a stirring picturization of the lusty lads who both work and fight. Considerable production values have been accorded . . . direction . . . with an eye to action and documentary realism . . . Considerable pre-selling by Republic will facilitate handling the picture. Intense interest by the public in the Fighting SeaBees, whetted by many news stories, gives showmen added exploitation advantages.

—MOTION PICTURE DAILY

A SCREEN HIT

Mark this down as one of the best to come out of the Republic studios and as a high ranking service film. It is packed with action, drama, comedy, romance, and all the ingredients that go to make a screen hit. Not only is this an exploitation natural, but the incidents in the film are actually in the papers from day to day. Characterizations by the groups are of a high calibre.

—THE EXHIBITOR

A SWELL PIECE OF ENTERTAINMENT

Story of the "CBs" (The Construction men in the U.S. Navy) taken from real life made into a swell piece of entertainment for every individual attending a motion picture theatre. With the right exploitation and the pull of the title, this should do outstanding business. There are many light moments; with a jitterbug sequence by John Wayne; and a romance that ties the picture together exceptionally well. The cast is hand-picked and so realistic in their respective portrayals, that the picture seems a part of living and real life among these men. To Edward Ludwig, who directed, must go credit for the realism portrayed . . . Associate Producer Albert J. Cohen is responsible for the intrinsic values and excellence in production.

OF ITS MIGHTIEST ATTRACTIONS..!

BLOOD-STIRRING ACTION

Excitingly, spectacularly and authentically, this tells the story of the birth, growth and heroic accomplishments of that colorful branch of Uncle Sam's Navy, the construction battalions.

The cast . . . performs admirably and convincingly.

There is plenty of blood-stirring action and a strong thread of romance. —BOXOFFICE

BEST YET . . IN RECENT WAR PICTURES

. . this war melodrama shapes up as a virile entertainment, the sort that should undoubtedly please the action fans.

. . the story . . aided by smooth direction and good performances, moves along at a fast pace, and holds one's attention throughout. A romantic triangle, made up of sympathetic characters, should appeal to women. The battle sequences are exceptionally good, ranking with the best yet seen in recent war pictures. Particularly thrilling, and quite grim, is the battle that takes place towards the finish, where the SeaBees, though outnumbered, wipe out the Jap attackers.

—HARRISON REPORTS

SHOULD BE AMPLY REPAID AT THE BOXOFFICES

"The Fighting SeaBees", a rousing story of Pacific warfare. The battle scenes teem with action and excitement . . . The extended budget and production care . . . should be amply repaid at boxoffices throughout the country. —MOTION PICTURE HERALD

EXPLOITATION POSSIBILITIES ARE ABUNDANT

Republic has come through with a film on the U.S. Navy construction battalions that will hold its own as a billtopper on duals. Exploitation possibilities are abundant, and exhibitors have plenty of material to help them put this one over for good grosses. Performances are above average . . . A romantic angle adds selling points that will work to advantage at the boxoffice.

One of the best war sequences of recent vintage.

The Box Office Slant

See Here, Private Hargrove

MGM Comedy 101 mins.

(Prod. No. 420—Nat'l Release, Mar.)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The entire family should enjoy this amusing comedy for there are plenty of laughs, plus the fun of recognizing some of the incidents as told by most soldier-boys.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The power of the title, plus the right exploitation makes this look like a big box-office attraction.

Cast: Robert Walker, Donna Reed, Keenan Wynn, Robert Benchley, Ray Collins, Chill Wills, Bob Crosby, Marta Linden, Grant Mitchell, George Offerman, Jr., Edward Fielding, Donald Curtis, William "Bill" Phillips, Douglas Fowley. Credits: Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Screenplay by Harry Kurnitz from the book, "See Here, Private Hargrove." Produced by George Haight.

Plot: This is the story of one man's induction into the U. S. Army; his training and predicaments; his dealings with his fellow soldiers and the general life he leads as a soldier of Uncle Sam.

Comment: This is an amusing comedy about the experiences of a newspaper reporter after induction into the Army, taken from the best-seller of the same name, which was written by the real Private Hargrove. It is the first doughboy comedy to come to the screen since the War Department put limitations on the way in which our men may be portrayed, so that it does not make a farce of the Army, its personnel and its methods. It presents the military discipline, the routine tasks and the general efficiency in a manner most audiences will recognize, having heard it from their own men. Robert Walker of "Bataan" fame, plays Private Hargrove with understanding and ability making him a likeable and believable person. Strong support is given him by Keenan Wynn, as the chiseler who responds to training, Chill Wills and other doughboys. Donna Reed takes care of the romance capably and Robert Benchley handles a short scene in his usual able manner. For a picture that everyone will enjoy and one that will give most people plenty of laughs, credit goes to Director Wesley Ruggles, Producer George Haight and Harry Kurnitz for the screenplay. Most reading Americans have read the book from which this was taken, so arrange your tieups with book stores and display the title prominently around town in advance of showing. Offer prizes to people who present strange soldier incidents, during their training. With newspaper cooperation, give an advance showing for Army personnel in your district.

Chip Off The Old Block

Universal Musical 81 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 25th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Sparkling musical (which introduces "Quiz Kid" Joel Kupperman) will be enjoyed by the whole family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: One of the best of the Donald O'Connor-Peggy Ryan co-starring films.

Cast: Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan, Ann Blyth, Helen Vinson, Helen Broderick, Arthur Treacher, Patric Knowles, J. Edward Bromberg, Ernest Truex, Minna Gombell, Samuel S. Hinds, Irving Bacon, "Quiz Kid" Joel Kupperman. Credits: Directed by Charles Lamont. Original screenplay by Eugene Conrad and Leo Townsend. Original story by Robert Arthur. Director of photography, Charles Van Enger. Musical director, Charles Previn. Associate Producer, Bernard W. Burton.

Plot: The young son of a Lt. Commander, home on leave, meets the daughter of a musical comedy star, whose mother was an old sweetheart of his father's. Their plans to date are broken up by the exuberance of another young lady. At a party given for the star's daughter, the son straightens out his affairs; the father straightens out his love life and all ends happily.

Comment: This is another of the Donald O'Connor-Peggy Ryan filmusicals Universal has been turning out with such success. It is one of their best to date and introduces a new find, 17-year-old Ann Blyth. A talented young lady with the sort of appeal that makes box-office stars. Then to add that extra attraction that pays off at the ticket window, there is the debut of "Quiz Kid" Joel Kupperman in a feature film. Also rounding out a well-presented entertaining picture are such established players as Helen Vinson, Arthur Treacher, Patric Knowles, and Helen Broderick. Eight new numbers are presented—two are sung exceptionally well by Ann Blyth while most of the others are handled by Donald O'Connor and Peggy Ryan. Joel Kupperman does very well, though his manner of speaking gets so many laughs that most of the dialogue is lost to the audience. Most of the cast turn in top-notch performances, each having been hand-picked. Charles Lamont's swell direction has wrought a rapidly moving, enjoyable film for every type of audience. Credit goes to Bernard W. Burton for the excellence of the production as a whole. Arrange for plugs before and after the "Quiz Kid" radio program, mentioning the screen debut of Joel Kupperman. Sell the O'Connor-Ryan names and try to get the cooperation of local dramatic schools or drama societies. Tieups with music stores, and singing teachers, could be planned in advance of opening day. For a complete selling campaign utilizing angles designed to make your "Chip Off the Old Block" engagement a successful one, see the Showmanalysis on page 22.

Beneath Western Skies

Republic Western 55 mins.

(National Release, March 3rd)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A western for the outdoor addicts that carries all the excitement they seek.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Standard western offering.

Cast: Bob Livingston, Smiley Burnette, Effie Laird, Tom London, Charles Miller, Frank Jacquet, LeRoy Mason, Joe Strauch, Jr., Kenne Duncan, Jack Kirk, Bud Geary, Charles Dorety, Maxine Doyle. Credits: Directed by Spencer Bennet. Original story by Albert de Mond. Screenplay by Albert de Mond, Robert Williams. Director of photography, Ernest Miller. Associate Producer, Lou Gray.

Plot: The town of Stokesville is overrun by a gang of outlaws whose leader is working in cahoots with the town banker. Their plan is to frighten honest townspeople into selling their municipal bonds and depart from the town. In this way they hope to gain control of the town and make it a haven for outlaws. The schoolteacher takes things in hand by sending for some of her former pupils and having them straighten out the mess.

Comment: What starts off to be a slightly different western show peters out to just the routine stuff, but the outdoor fans will enjoy it for it has the usual good work of Bob Livingston and the comedy antics of Smiley Burnette. Under Spencer Bennet's direction there is plenty of action plus the necessary suspense in catching up with the crooks. The menace work is ably taken care of by LeRoy Mason and Frank Jaquet and Lou Gray has taken care of the production elements well. Sell as those in this series, with the western trimmings to attract attention put all around the lobby.

Voodoo Man

Monogram Horror 62 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 21st)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) For the horror fans only. This has the stuff they like.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Aimed for the horror market. Can top the bill where the Lugosi name has a following.

Cast: Bela Lugosi, John Carradine, George Zucco, Wanda McKay, Louise Currie, Michael Ames, Ellen Hall, Terry Walker, Mary Currier, Claire James, Henry Hall, Dan White, Pat McKee, Mici Goty. Credits: Directed by William Beaudine. Original story and screenplay by Robert Charles. Director of photography, Marcel Le Picard. Associate Producer, Barney Sarecky. Producers, Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz.

Plot: Girls have been disappearing near the home of a retired physician. A young writer becomes involved when the girl he had been with, and also his bride-to-be, suddenly disappears. By breaking into the physician's home, the authorities, led by the writer, come across the doctor using these girls to help restore his zombie wife to normal. When the doctor is shot, his wife is destroyed and the girls are released from their zombie state.

Comment: For those people who enjoy horror films, this one will be a good chiller-diller. It has the creepy, eerie atmosphere they look for plus the tense excitement and zombie goings-on that build up to the edge-of-the-seat stage for the spectator. Bela Lugosi's name has become synonymous with horror pictures, and he does his usual "horroring" job. Assisting him in strange voodoo ceremonies is George Zucco. One is a little surprised to see John Carradine playing the part of a half-wit, though he handles the role well. In other parts are Wanda McKay, Louise Currie and Michael Ames, all part and parcel of the strange happenings. Direction by William Beaudine maintains the necessary suspense and Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz get credit for the production as a whole. Sell to those interested in horror films, for it is aimed for that market. The Lugosi name, wherever known, will also attract attention. Eerie lobby and other voodoo paraphernalia could be used in advance of showing.

Action In Arabia

RKO Radio Action Drama 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Far-fetched melodrama of Axis agents vs. American newspaper men with enough suspense for action houses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Names of Sanders and Bruce will have to provide draw. Exploitable dualler.

Cast: George Sanders, Virginia Bruce, Lenore Aubert, Gene Lockhart, Robert Armstrong, H. B. Warner, Alan Napier, Andre Charlot, Marcel Dalio, Robert Anderson and Jamiel Hasson. Credits: Produced by Leonide Moguy. Original screenplay by Philip MacDonald and Herbert Biberman. Photographic direction by Roy Hunt.

Plot: Two American reporters returning to the States land in Damascus where they scent a story of intrigue between Nazi Agents and Arab leaders. One reporter is murdered while trailing a mysterious fellow-passenger and the daughter of an Arab leader. The remaining American, George Sanders, is warned by the Consul that he must leave by plane the next day. Meanwhile he meets Virginia Bruce and a conniving man who deals in inside information. Both are eventually linked into a plot hatched by the Germans to misrepresent their motives to the Arab leader, arouse the tribesmen to attack the Allies under Nazi leadership. Sanders and the American Vice Consul save the day after stealing a plane, flying to the Arabs' headquarters and revealing the German plot.

Comment: The playwrights and director of this film have over-exerted their imaginations in attempting to come up with an intrigue story of the present war. While parts of it are plausible enough, other sequences serve to detract from the desired authenticity even though the intent is purely fiction. The Arab tribe scenes are well managed and give the picture spectacle that is exploitable. This film will quite naturally find its greatest market among the action houses catering to the less discriminating patronage. For the action fans the show offers all the elements for "SEE" copy including spectacle, action, intrigue, thrills and romance. George Sanders and Virginia Bruce do their level best in the leading roles under the plot limitations. Gene Lockhart turns in a convincing performance. Director Moguy and Producer Geraghty are entitled to credit for the spectacle achieved in the film with a limited budget.

Curse Of The Cat People

RKO Radio Drama 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A morbid, though gripping drama with a highbrow theme and very limited appeal.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Presents selling problem and needs lively show as companion-piece.

Cast: Simone Simon, Kent Smith, Jane Randolph, Ann Carter, Elizabeth Russell, Eve March, Julia Dean, Erford Gage and Sir Lancelot. Credits: Produced by Val Lewton. Directed by Gunther V. Fritsch and Robert Wise. Screenplay by DeWitt Bodeen. Photographic direction by Nicholas Musuraca.

Plot: Irena Reed (Simone Simon), first wife of Oliver Reed, has met a tragic death as a result of her supernatural beliefs. Reed (Kent Smith) has remarried and he and his wife, Alice, are alarmed over their daughter, Amy (Ann Carter), who fails to make friends with other children. The child, having received a purported wishing ring from a half-crazed, aged neighbor, finds a make-believe friend in the person of Irena who comes back to life to play with the child. Lacking parental understanding the child persists in believing that Irena is real. Believing that she has been deserted by Irena, the child runs away in a snow storm and winds up with the old neighbor in her mysterious home. Pursued by the parents with bloodhounds and police she is found and her parents find understanding in the reunion.

Comment: First and foremost this is no picture for children. It should be recommended to your patrons as Adult entertainment only. It is a very remarkable piece of dramatic entertainment dealing with the psychology of children's minds. Tensely drawn moments which are in a sense depressing have been vividly filmed by understanding directorial and photographic hands. The acting by all members of the cast is especially fine, with a moving quality of realism that stamps the film as an artistic achievement. The picture will present a selling problem for the theatres. It is too highbrow in theme for the average "horror film" audience and the cast lacks box-office names to attract the more discriminating or arty fans. There is a very definite lesson in the picture for parents who will appreciate the plight of the family portrayed although the manner in which the juvenile problem is poised can only be justified as theatrical trickery. Two avenues lie open to the exhibitor in showing this film. One is to sell it"For Adults Only" and the other is to use it with a comedy horror show companion piece on a double bill.

Reh's Heart-Tug Lobby Poster Gets Results in Philadelphia

Manager Al Reh, Mastbaum Theatre, Philadelphia, has posted in his lobby a photo of his son in the service and alongside is a blowup of a letter to his theatre patrons.

Text of the letter is to the effect that his boy is just one of the millions who are missed at home; that bonds will help bring them back and that the time to buy those bonds is NOW.

This straight-to-the-heart appeal is getting excellent results in Philly.

Dimes Report From Chicago

Joe Abramson, secretary to Jack Kirsch, estimates the March of Dimes collection in the Chicago area will reach $150,000, while in downstate Illinois it looks likely to reach $75,000. Program Exchange

Nolan Pens Bond Editorial; DiLorenzo Plugs War Loan; Texan Talks About Weather

To begin our discourse this week, we'll dispense with our commentary on the weather (it's comfortably cold these days) and take up a letter received a few days ago from our former associate, Jack Jackson.

First glance at the heading, "America's fastest growing city in America's greatest state," would instantly bring New York to the minds of most readers. But Jack has chosen the slogan to designate a town in Texas known as Houston. His letter is a report on the "horrible climate" down here. He writes:

"This morning I had hell scared out of me, as the steam was on full blast when I tumbled out of my downy couch to sling a left-handed 'hello' at this war-torn world. I thought sure the temperature had fallen down into the blizzardy 40s and began digging out my New York costume (which I had stored away for a possible future trip to Siberia).

"I gingerly opened a window and stuck my hand out to test the 'blow and flow.' (Ed. Note: Remember how Jackson used the bell-hop to test the weather in New York? With the shortage of manpower, apparently bellhops are no longer available for testing purposes.) Imagine my surprise when I was able to be still conscious of the fact that it was a finger without having to stick it in boiling water as I did in New York. When I got downstairs I divested myself of the extra clothes tonnage and started for the office, wishing I had taken my sun glasses, and when I arrived I happened on a news item that said that Thursday night's star-studded sky brought the first lunar halo in some time and confused Houstonians. Scores of them kept weather bureau telephones ringing, wanting to know about the 'big ring around the moon.' Highest temperature was 73, lowest was 51.

"If you happen to know of anybody who wants to buy a steamlined, snow-proof vest, let me hear about them, as it seems certain the temperature will reach up into the 90s soon now and I'll have no more use for it."

Jackson's letter speaks for itself and requires no comment, except perhaps the observation that it must be hardy lot of Texans if, for example, one has to thrust forth one of his digits into the outer ozone to determine whether to wear a sport shirt and sun glasses or ear muffs and steam-lined vest.

Eddie Selette of the Colonial Theatre, Nashua, N. H., took advantage of Valentine's Day by putting out heart-shaped, die-cut announcements of his program for that day. Said the copy: "Here's a sweetheart of a show . . . etc." It's too late for you to do anything about it now, but keep this idea in mind for next year.

Both the Fourth War Loan and the March of Dimes were brought to the attention of patrons of the Palace Theatre, Greenfield, Tenn., by means of copy on the front page of the program. A page was also set aside to advertise Free Movie Day.

In the program for the Normandie Theatre, New York, Manager David Nolan utilized a column to write an editorial pointing out the activity of the theatres of America in the war effort. Wrote he, in part: "Such activities as scrap drives, USO campaigns, Red Cross fund-raising campaigns and blood donor enlistments, recruiting of Wacs and Waves, disseminating government information via the screen, are all fostered in these temples of entertainment." Continuing, Nolan pointed out the work of the industry in selling bonds and stamps, stressed the importance of the Fourth War Loan and the theatremen's determination to surpass the goal of any former drive. "When you go to the movies, remember what theatres throughout the country are doing to help speed victory. Help them in their task and help yourself."

Thomas di Lorenzo of the New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y., sends us evidence that his showplace is right in there pitching in the Fourth War Loan drive. In addition to a copy of his program, he encloses two newspaper tear-sheets. One page features a full-page cooperative ad, sponsored by Arrow Bus Lines and the New Paltz, plugging the sale of war bonds. It's an impressive ad. In a regular theatre ad, di Lorenzo takes extra space to (1) thank his patrons for their response to the appeal for the fight against infantile paralysis and (2) to list the names of men in service in whose honor bonds have been purchased by patrons.

Some copies of recent programs for the Utopia Theatre, Flushing, L. I., have reached our desk. The issues go back to Christmas, and display the showmanship flair that characterized the initial copies we received some weeks ago. If you remember, the inside spread is a calendar layout utilizing various ad elements. Hand-drawn art work comprises each front cover. Sale of war bonds and stamps is constantly plugged, and special attention has been devoted to the Fourth War Loan. In short, this cross between a calendar program and the usual weekly program is well produced, and we feel sure it is just the sort of house organ many theatremen would be glad to use. We have a few samples we'll gladly send to showmen who request them, as long as our supply lasts. We hope to receive additional future copies from the Utopia.

And so we come again to the conclusion of our discourse. But we shall return in another week. Meanwhile, send us copies of your program. Or, if you consider putting out a program, write to us for samples.

In case you missed our original reproduction of the inside spread of the program for the Utopia Theatre, Flushing, L. I., here's another of a more recent issue. Note how Manager Paul Raisler emphasizes the Fourth War Loan in copy across the top of spread. Note, too, how ad elements are utilized. For a monthly program which serves also as a calendar, Raisler's house organ is a fine selling accessory.

Good Campaign is Brien's Swan Song

As his showmanship swan song to a successful career at the Kenyon Theatre, Pittsburgh, Manager Lige Brien made his final campaign at that Warner house thorough and productive. Brien, who is now at the Enright Theatre in the same city, turned in an excellent selling job on "Lassie Come Home," and the resultant business was so good that the picture had to be held over for a second week.

Some of the highlights of Brien's campaign:

Lobby Displays. In advance of playdate a special display was made up for the lobby. Cut-out letters of the title were placed on background board 20 feet long and five feet high. Above the title were cutout letters of Roddy McDowall and Donald Crisp, while in the center, below, was a figure cutout of Roddy and Lassie. Another display featured Friskie Dog foods and was tied up with Carnation Milk. Through this same tieup, seven store window tieups in and around the Kenyon's neighborhood were effected.

Art and Publicity. Two scene mats were promoted in the Pittsburgh Press, and several writeups also appeared in the same newspaper.

Street Ballyhoo. For a street ballyhoo, Brien had an usher carry a cut-out sign in the figure of a dog, lettered with copy about the picture, theatre and playdate.

Bookmarks. Two thousand bookmarks with theatre imprint were distributed in worthwhile spots.

Newspaper Advertising. The picture was well sold in ads which appeared in the Press, Sun-Telegraph and Post-Gazette.

Ties in With True Story

When a local dog found its way home after a long absence, C. T. Spencer of the Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, tied the news story in with his engagement of "Lassie Come Home."

Tieups and Novelties Sell 'Russian Girls'

For the opening of "Three Russian Girls" at Loew's Esquire Theatre, Toledo, Manager Carl Rogers arranged several tieups and made good use of printed novelties which got his attraction plenty of local attention.

A tieup with the Buckeye News Company accounted for all their delivery trucks carrying 22x28 cards announcing the film's opening at the Esquire. More than 1000 special 2½x7-inch cards were attached to all suits delivered by the Eastern Dry Cleaning Company. Cards carried full credit for the film's opening.

Special Quiz Cards were distributed at all bus and trolley stations. Copy on the card read: "What does TRG stand for? For the correct answer call (theatre phone number) and you may win a guest ticket to Loew's Esquire Theatre." Guest tickets were issued to the first 15 persons asking the question.

Five thousand heralds were distributed in 53 war plants in the surrounding areas. Stock 22x28 cards were placed in all local bars and grills.

For a street ballyhoo, three usherettes were dressed in authentic Russian costumes and paraded the streets of the city with signs announcing the film's opening. A cooperative ad was put over with the Basch Jewelry Company and utilized photos of Anna Sten and Kent Smith, stars in "Three Russian Girls."

Polish Leaders Express Approval Of 'In Our Time' in Buffalo

After viewing "In Our Time" in its pre-release premiere showing at Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Boston, one of the country's leading Polish newspapers, Everybody's Daily, not only gave the picture a highly laudatory review for its entertainment values, but devoted a 1000-word editorial to praise of the film's authenticity and commended Warners for giving the public a timely story background that is both interesting and rarely seen on the screen.

Stanley Czaster, national president of the Polish Union of America, and Mrs. A. Bierdron, president of the Polish Women's Alliance, were among other prominent Polish-Americans who attended a showing of "In Our Time" and expressed their enthusiastic approval.

Through these organizations and the Polish press, the picture will be boosted in Polish communities throughout the country. Both Shea's Buffalo and Everybody's Daily report that local word-of-mouth recommendation of the picture has been exceptional.

WB Ties in With Benrus for Radio Plugs on 'In Our Time'

Under a tieup arranged by Warner Bros. with Benrus Watches, local openings of "In Our Time" throughout the country will receive the benefit of five-times-daily plugs, running for several days, on the Benrus Watch spot announcements over a nationwide list of radio stations.

Announcements will include a plug for the picture, in addition to naming the local theatre engagement.

A private preview of original costumes worn in Paramount's "Lady in the Dark" was held at the Women's Military Services Club in New York last Sunday, preceding by a day the fashion show and wedding held in Boston (see story below). More than 500 women in uniform attended the preview.

'Lady' Style Preview Is Held in Boston

Thirty of the costumes worn by Ginger Rogers and other principals in "Lady in the Dark" were shown at two fashion previews and a St. Valentine's Day wedding of a "Cinderella bride" in the original wedding gown worn by Miss Rogers in the film's "Golden Dream" sequence, held in Boston and Brookline this week.

Augmented by Boston models, Phyllis Brooks, featured in the picture, and Powers models put on a preview of the "out of this world" costumes on Monday afternoon at Filene's department store.

The preview was repeated on Monday night on the stage of the Paramount Theatre before a capacity audience in conjunction with a war bond premiere of "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek." Presentation of the fabulous fashions served as a "live trailer" for the New England premiere of "Lady in the Dark" to be held at the Metropolitan, Boston, on March 9.

Following the preview at Filene's, which is cooperating with M & P Theatres in promoting the premiere of "Lady in the Dark," a press reception for Miss Brooks was held at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

At 6 p.m., 18-year-old Maybritt Irene Johnson, Brockton shoe worker, who was chosen from among 150 girls as the one most closely resembling Ginger Rogers in looks and size, was married in the star's "Golden Dream" wedding gown to Michael F. Brugliera, 20, radio man, third class, U.S.N. Wedding was performed at the Fellowship Centre for Servicemen in Brookline. The entire orchid-surrounded ceremony, including the bride's wardrobe, was presented to the couple as their wedding gift.

A reception and fashion ball followed the ceremony, and pictures of the entire event were made by Paramount News.

To Maintain Steady Patronage, Theatre Requires Personality

To attract patronage for the "B" pictures as well as the top film hits, you must establish a personality for your theatre, writes Mister Showman in the National Screen Service bulletin which bears his name.

Declaring that he has "a pet peeve" which he wants to get off his chest, Mister Showman writes:

"You have undoubtedly heard near-sighted fellows voice the assertions that they don't believe in Institutional Advertising for a theatre. They admit that there is a definite advantage in advertising their pictures . . . but feel that anything beyond that limitation is a waste of money.

"That doesn't necessarily mean that the fellow who made the statement isn't a good theatre operator in other respects. In fact, he probably has a beautiful theatre with all modern conveniences . . . but spends his time wondering why the big pictures do big business . . . and mediocre pictures don't even make expenses.

"The answer, of course, is quite obvious. To the national advertising and star and story value that help put over his big attractions, he adds a strong advertising campaign. But when he gets that 'B' picture, lacking sensational advertising campaigns and boasting little in the way of box-office dynamite, he's a helpless kid.

"'Of course,' he'll ask you, 'if I haven't anything to sell, how can I get business?' Well, here's the answer to that question . . . and this isn't guessing It's a proved fact!

How Do You Do It?

"First, you've got to establish a personality for your theatre. How do you do it? Well, what makes you visit the same barber week in and week out? What influences your wife to patronize the same grocer every day, even though quite frequently his prices are higher than those of his competitor? Why do you buy your clothes from the same tailor . . . your gasoline from the same service station (though there are many stations handling the same brand of gas in the immediate vicinity) . . . your evening newspaper from the same newsstand? It's personality! They've got it . . . and you like it!

"Fellas . . . that's why people attend theatres when they show mediocre pictures! Because the theatres have personality!"

Mister Showman goes on to recommend that patrons be advised of the many conveniences placed at their disposal, that trailers for various holidays be projected, that noise and vandalism be curtailed. He points out that the first essential in any structure is the foundation, and that institutional advertising will give a theatre a foundation on which the exhibitor can build to greater and more profitable achievements.

Forms 'Young Ideas' Club

To help exploit "Young Ideas," John Conhaim of the Regent Theatre, East Liberty, Pa., got newspaper cooperation in the formation of a Young Ideas Club. Youngsters were invited to submit ideas on what the future holds for them.

SALES PROMOTION PLAN TO CASH IN THE CHIPS

A Universal Picture
Associate Producer
BERNARD W. BURTON
Directed by
CHARLES LAMONT

Geared to the rapidly mounting popularity of Donald O'Connor, "Chip Off the Old Block" is rated as his best to date, and this new film presents a golden opportunity for practical, logical exploitation and showmanship.

The title of the show is a natural for many tieups, while the presence of Joel Kupperman, outstanding member of radio's famous "Quiz Kids" in the cast will prove a good lure for many radio listeners if properly advertised. In preparing this "Showmanalysis" it is STR's plan to offer tried and proved suggestions which can easily and effectively be carried out in actual practice by a majority of the theatres. The following stunts and ideas are not created just to look good on paper but are all solid revenue producers in practice and application.

FATHER-SON PREMIERE

The title of this show forges the perfect link for a Chip Off the Old Block Premiere which under wartime conditions can be given a real patriotic flavor due to the fact that in the film, O'Connor plays the son of a Lt. Commander of the U. S. Navy. You can get your local American Legion or Vets organization to help arrange the affair, with invitations to all World War Vets who have sons serving in the armed forces to be your guests on opening night. Where there might be too many such father and son combinations in the larger cities some plan of narrowing down the field to a practical number might be employed such as the fathers of Navy sons or just the fathers of officers. This is a detail which you can work out.

Local recruiting officers will undoubtedly be glad to cooperate and the event seems to be a logical occasion to stage an induction of draftees in the theatre with the oath being administered. Have the dads of the draftees as your guests. Newspapers should give you a real publicity buildup on this stunt since it will involve many local names. If you are unable to handle the induction angle to lend glamor to the event, why not plan the premiere as a blood donors' campaign with wounded vets to speak, etc.? If you are near a military establishment it may be possible to get a service band or orchestra to supply some musical color to the premiere. Build all publicity around the theme that the event is in honor of Blank town's "Chip Off the Old Block." You will no doubt be able to encourage other than service dads to bring their younger sons along due to the broad appeal of the picture.

LOCAL QUIZ KIDS

Probably the second most important promotion angle offered by this film is based on Joel Kupperman, the Quiz Kid, who is featured. The schools are the natural point of contact in putting over this phase of the campaign. Conduct a local Quiz contest with the various grades engaging in a school competition and offer a guest ticket to winning students from each grade. If a local paper carries school news the stunt should garner ample publicity. School papers should also go hook, line and sinker for this. If you need a supply of quiz questions there is a book of them available in the pocket libraries at your five and dime store. Should you prefer, a series of questions surrounding the picture such as could be compiled by a committee of teachers from each grade using the press book for information.

SPECIAL HERALDS

We have seen a very effective herald prepared on another picture which fits this one to a "T." Get your local lumber supplier to cut up the necessary quantity of scrap one-quarter inch veneer board into five by five inch squares and have your copy printed or rubber stamped on either or both sides of the raw wood. This gag herald will attract plenty of "extra" attention to your message and will set folks talking about the stunt. If the veneer board is not obtainable, any thin white pine board will suffice. Be sure that only clean surfaced lumber is used as dirt or grimy finger marks will detract from the appearance.

CONTEST WINDOW TIEUP

The old gag of guessing the number of beans in a jar can be adapted ideally to get attention for this show. Every lumber mill has an almost constant scrap pile of assorted blocks of wood which are the offall of their cutting machines. Get a quantity of these and place the pile in a prominent window offering guest tickets and promoted merchandise awards for the closest guesses to the correct number of chips off the old block on display. You might prepare or promote a special entry blank which could be made available to contestants at the store which is providing the display window and prizes as well as at the theatre. The prizes should be displayed with the chips and the better the prizes the more interest you will stir up. The payoff should be good for a pictorial break in the press. Have a committee of judges count the chips at the end of the contest and make an issue out of the locking of the display window with stress on the fact that no one knows or will know the correct answer until the judges make the official count. No purchase should be made a requirement for participation in the contest.

MARQUEE FLASH

The 24-sheet on this picture is fine material for a huge cutout which can be mounted on compoboard and properly braced for display on the theatre marquee. If you haven't used this stunt in some time the set-up will attract all the more attention. This cutout is also perfect for a float, sound truck or giant lobby setpiece.

LIMERICK CONTEST

If you haven't planted a good limerick contest in your local paper for a while back, here is a picture which has that juvenile, jitterbug element which lends itself to such a promotion. We submit a bit of poetic license which may do the trick or if you feel poetically inclined you may desire to improve on our suggestion. The stunt calls for a fourth rhyming line and guest tickets or other awards for the best entries. Pick judges and if you find radio a more favorable sponsor of the contest . . . that will be all right too.

Here is the copy idea. . . .

As a rip my old man was a pip
As his son, I am labeled a chip
If a rip is a pip and the chip is a drip—

JITTERBUG CONTEST

With the Donald O'Connor and Peggy Ryan names to work with you have the natural basis for a bang-up Jitterbug Contest, and better still, if you have a local dancing school with modern ideas to cooperate, it will be a simple matter to build a stage event that should pull plenty of extra customers on opening night. We need relate few if any details on this stunt. You know the answers; we merely wish to call the idea to your attention for what it is worth in your situation.

MUSIC TIEUPS

There are a number of good solid tunes in this show which will be making the rounds, so don't neglect letting your patrons know that they are all in this big musical-fun show. Music stores and radio stations are "firsts" on your music contact list. Go after displays of the

Initial Campaigns on 'Seabees' Models for Future Exploitation

Theatremen in first-run cities are expending special efforts in the exploitation and advertising of "The Fighting Seabees," as can be gleaned from the following reports of campaigns in Dallas, Philadelphia and Boston.

Dallas. Interest in the Majestic Theatre engagement of the film was stimulated by an excellent campaign handled by Frank Starz, director of publicity for Interstate.

Starz took advantage of the selection of Seabee James W. Purgason of Dallas to represent that city at Republic's national reception in New York, to obtain coverage in the Dallas Morning News, which used a photo showing Robert O'Donnell, managing director of the circuit, seeing Purgason off to New York.

After the New York reception, Purgason returned to Dallas with a print of the production. He was met at Union Terminal by Mayor pro tem J. B. Adoue, Jr., Lt. W. L. Lane, District recruiting officer; Miss Mary Alice Brown, representative of Interstate's publicity department, and Republic Branch Manager Lloyd Rust. A police escort guided the group to the Adolphus Hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. Purgason were guests in the Skyway Apartment, assigned only to honored guests of Dallas. The orchestra in the Century Room at the hotel played Song of the Seabees in Purgason's honor, and he was introduced.

Next morning Purgason visited Miss Pollyanna Badgett, amusement editor of the Times Herald, which carried a photo of his arrival captioned with his Dallas program.

He also visited the Dallas Morning News, where he was interviewed by Miss Fairfax Nesbitt and John Rosenfield, amusement editors; Radio Station WFAA, where he "was introduced as the honored guest of Dallas, and reported that he was sure everybody would like 'The Fighting Seabees'."

That evening, a press preview of "The Fighting Seabees" was held, followed by a reception at the Adolphus Hotel, at which a large gathering of newspaper and radio people witnessed the presentation of a Seabee bracelet to Purgason by Mayor pro tem Adoue, Jr., who was introduced by James O. Cherry, city manager of Interstate, Dallas.

Philadelphia. A whale of a campaign launched "The Fighting Seabees" in the Quaker City, where it opened at the Stanley Theatre. George Balkin, manager of the house, and Maurice Gable, first-run district manager for Warner Bros. Theatres, aided by Irving Blumberg, Warner ad-head, and Milt Young, publicity department, utilized every available agency to publicize the picture.

Newspaper ads and stories, radio features and spots, billboards, car cards and window cards, window displays, personal letters, war plant bulletin boards were used, culminating with an opening night at which 100 Navy men in uniform were guests of the theatre.

Campaign was launched formally when Mayor Bernard Samuel presented an appropriately inscribed identification bracelet to former Philadelphian Justin Joseph Dintzer, now a Quartermaster first class in the Seabees. A few days later a screening and luncheon was held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel for dramatic critics, radio commentators, trade paper representatives, the Navy public relations and the Navy recruiting offices, as well as executive officers.

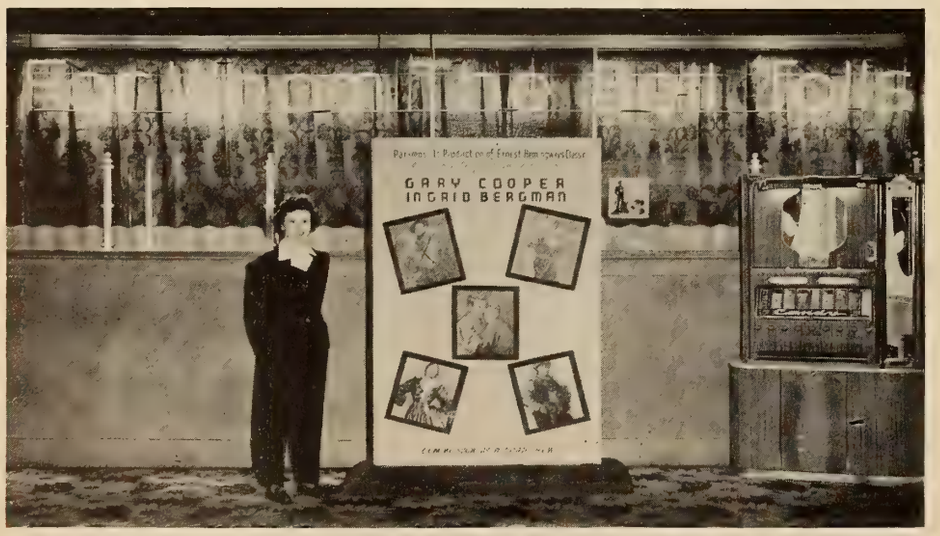
More than 420 war plants within a radius of 30 miles of the city cooperated in bringing the picture to the attention of their workers. They posted bulletins and posters sent to them by Blumberg. In many plants, attention was called to the posters through public address systems.

Central city store windows were used to advantage with fifty 11x14 stills mounted in special 16x18 frames, with theatre credits. Complete windows were promoted in the stores of Tartaglia Brothers, uniform fitters.

In advance of the opening, a large display was placed in the lobby. It featured an oil-painted panoramic background, life-size enlargements of stars, and three-dimension cut-out letters, embellished with special lighting effects.

Billposting consisted of illuminated 24-sheets in strategic locations, 100 3-sheet locations on subway and elevated stations, and 50 one-sheets on elevated stations.

Additional exploitation consisted of Perc Westmore cosmetic tie-up windows in ten drug stores, a unique display in an exclusive men's store window, and 4200 lines of newspaper advertising.



Boston. Effective campaign which heralded the opening of "The Fighting Seabees" at the Paramount Theatre was centered on Seabee Martin P. White, representative of Boston at Republic's recent national reception at the Hotel Astor, who returned to his home town to participate in promotion for the Boston run. Seabee White was a guest of honor at a reception at the Copley-Plaza, attended by executives of the M & P circuit, Boston press and radio representatives, high-ranking Naval officers. He was presented with a Seabee identification bracelet from Mayor Maurice J. Tobin and the City of Boston.

Promotion included a radio music contest on Stations WCOP, WEEI, and WORL, built around Song of the Seabees; window and counter displays of the title page of this song, which features the stars, John Wayne, Susan Hayward, and Dennis O'Keefe; a window display in R. H. White's Department Store, one of the biggest in Boston, located opposite the Paramount Theatre; a Naval Recruiting Booth in the lobby, staffed by two Waves; and a Naval Escort, consisting of Naval Police and several Chief Petty officers, furnished by the Navy Department, and stationed in the lobby and directly outside the theatre. On opening night, the mezzanine section of the Paramount was reserved for high-ranking Naval officers and their wives, who accepted the theatre's invitation to attend the opening.

Five hundred 2-sheet posters were used in elevated and subway stations, in addition to the regular campaign, which included a full showing of 24-sheets; 1500 lines of additional newspaper advertising in addition to the regular theatre budget, in the Boston Post, Globe, Herald Traveler, and Record American, and radio spot announcements on Stations WBZ and WEEI.

To ballyhoo MGM's "Whistling in Brooklyn," in Atlanta, Manager Boyd Fry of Loew's Grand sent a be-whiskered, baseball-uniformed man through the city's streets. Pedestrians stared at him.

Notable among the stunts used by Manager Jerry Zigmond of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, to call attention to Paramount's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," was a neon sign of the title used in advance in the lobby and out in front during the engagement of the Technicolor production. Sign drew much attention.

'Destination Tokyo' Heralds Distributed in 23 War Plants

Distribution of 8000 heralds in 23 war production plants, with the film title serving as a slogan for the workers, numbering from 500 to over 22,000 in each plant, was one of the high spots of the "Destination Tokyo" campaign staged for the film's engagement at the RKO Palace Theatre, Columbus, O., by City Manager Harry Schreiber.

Curtiss-Wrighter, house organ of the Curtiss-Wright aircraft plant, ran a story urging workers to see the picture. Teaser ads were used, plus the national ad arranged by the home office. Special panel blowups were used in the lobby.

Despite the tightness of publicity space, the picture received good news breaks during the week preceding its playdate.

Music, Radio and Newspaper Tieup Sell 'This Is The Army'

W. E. Winterton, manager of Famous Players Canadian Capitol Theatre in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, reports a strong campaign on Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army." He writes:

"The Hudson's Bay Company gave us a very nice window next to the entrance to their store and dressed it with an army display, using a 3-sheet cutout and stills as the center of attraction. Theatre credits were boldly displayed and the window was allowed to stand for three days.

"The Record Shop on the main street also displayed stills and card with playdates.

"Wesley Music House had window full of 'This Is The Army' music and am advised they sold out the first day and ordered more by wire.

"On Sunday, day before opening, the RCA Victor program sponsored by the Record Shop, had a 15-minute program and called it 'Fifteen Minutes from "This Is The Army".' All music played was from the picture. The program followed the news at 3:45 and got a good listening audience. In return for the above, we allowed them a display card in the foyer, calling attention to the fact that records from 'This Is the Army' could be purchased at their store.

"The Hudson's Bay Company have a 15-minute radio program daily at 2:45 p.m. and on Tuesday (2nd day) gave the picture two good plugs.

"While we did not spend any extra money on newspaper space, we got plenty of cooperation from the editorial department. A special reviewer gave us a splendid writeup, and on the fourth day the editor himself gave a review in his column. This type of advertising is very valuable and cannot be bought on these pages.

"We displayed one week ahead of opening two large cutouts with stills (sent us by Warners) in the lobby and foyer. Our fronts were quite colorful and stressed the technicolor angle. One-sheet frames were used in hotels and 14 x 36 inserts at the bus depot.

"The War Service Auxilliary Committee, of which I am a member, made sure the chairmen of the subcommittees asked for the support of all their members in advertising the picture, especially from the angle that part of the proceeds went to the Canadian Army Show Recreation Welfare Fund.

"Two army schools and two air force schools carried notice of the picture on their Order of the Day bulletin boards."

Money Dates for March

With its blustery winds, its change-of-season weather, not to mention its thirty-one days during which the Lenten season will be rigidly observed, March presents a formidable obstacle to good theatre attendance. Most people, too, will be burning the midnight oil trying to figure out their income tax returns. To be forewarned is to be forearmed; therefore, wise showmen will quickly and firmly grasp every angle of emphasis that promises to make theatre attendance so important it will outweigh climactic discomfort and other obligations in the minds of their customers. Showmanship activities for March are not as plentiful as during other calendar periods, but they are sufficient in number to permit activities of the kind that will get good support from groups and businesses interested in observance of the events and encourage added patronage at performances through all of the month's 31 days. Herewith are ideas that may prove helpful:

National Observance Periods

MAR. 12-18: GIRL SCOUT WEEK. Make this local observance an event of importance. Meet with the heads of the Girl Scouts in your community and assist them in planning recruiting drives and setting up recreational and organizational activities for the year. For publicity purposes, help them prepare an outline of past accomplishments and future aims for presentation to the newspapers and radio stations. Offer the facilities of your stage and lobby for an exhibition in which the girls will demonstrate the units of service in which they are trained by the organization. To wind up the membership drive, get the high school bands to lead the Girl Scouts in a parade to your theatre for a special performance. Try to locate local women who have, in one way or another, contributed to the welfare or fame of your community who formerly enjoyed membership in the Girl Scouts. You should succeed in getting abundant publicity for every move you make in assisting the aims of this fine organization, and if you make your theatre the focal point of all activities vis-a-vis observance of the period, your box-office is certain to benefit.

MAR. 13-18: NATIONAL HOBBY WEEK. Get the newspaper editor and radio station manager to assist you in locating the outstanding hobbyists in the vicinity and arrange for a lobby exhibition of examples of their playtime activities. If lobby facilities are inadequate, tie up with merchants for windows and get publicity for your theatre and its attractions by having the newspaper run a contest where tickets are offered as prizes to persons sending in the best impressions of the various hobbies displayed. Don't overlook this bet, for it offers many chances of personal contact with the better-class citizens who are not regular theatre patrons and whose continued patronage is highly desirable.

Special Opportunity Tieups

MAR. 1: U. S. DEPT. OF EDUCATION EST. 1867. Contact school heads and local Board of Education officials. Try to get them to use your stage for special activities to celebrate the anniversary. The possibilities are as big as your own imagination and your ability to sell your ideas and the importance of the occasion to the executives you contact.

MAR. 7: LUTHER BURBANK, FAMOUS HORTICULTURIST, BORN 1849. With spring and the planting season just around the corner, the country agricultural agent, leaders in local Garden Clubs, the 4-H Club membership and great numbers of ruralites can be interested in participating in observance of the natal day of this man whose work has meant so much toward furthering the perfection and progress of plants and vegetable life. If possible, arrange to give to all attending the ceremonies packages of seeds carrying a message about your theatre.

MAR. 14: ELI WHITNEY PATENTED THE COTTON GIN, 1794. If yours happens to be a manufacturing or cotton-growing community, you should experience little difficulty in arranging for wide observance of this day.

MAR. 15: FEDERAL INCOME TAX DUE. So many newcomers are entering the lists of income tax payers, and there is so much confusion and bewilderment concerning the income tax blanks, that efforts expended in familiarizing the public with the details of necessary procedure is likely to be greatly appreciated by collectors and payees alike. Get in touch with the local Collector of Internal Revenue and arrange for the appearance of some member of his staff to handle a five-minute instruction period from the stage of your theatre for four or five evenings preceding that date of collection.

MAR. 17: ST. PATRICK'S DAY. This is a big day for the Irish. Arrange with a local florist for green carnations to be given the ladies, and see that handbills are printed or overlayed in green. If possible, obtain a quantity of inexpensive shamrocks from one of the big novelty houses to be given away, with some message about the theatre and its attractions appended, on or before the 17th. Contact the heads of local Irish societies and try to arrange for choral groups and other activities on stage, such as an Irish Reel dancing contest, old fiddlers contest, etc.

MAR. 20—FIRST DAY OF SPRING. Go after local merchants and arrange for observance in the way of fashion shows, mezzanine dress parades, etc.

MAR. 21—JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH, COMPOSER, BORN 1685. The various music societies and music stores will cooperate on activity to celebrate this occasion.

Sectional Observances

Mar. 1—Nebraska joined Union, 1867.

Mar. 2—Texas Independence Day.

Mar. 3—Florida admitted to Union, 1845.

Mar. 4—Pennsylvania Day, Charter granted, 1681.

Mar. 4—Vermont joined Union, 1791.

Mar. 15—Maine admitted to Union, 1820.

Mar. 23—Alaska made part of United States, 1867.

Mar. 25—Maryland Day.

Polls Patrons to Find Tastes and Criticisms

To get a line on his patrons' likes and dislikes concerning entertainment and the theatre, Manager Eddie Selette of the Colonial Theatre, Nashua, N. H., has distributed questionnaire cards to the moviegoers of that community.

"To Our Patrons," the copy begins. "We want you to feel as comfortable here as you would in your own home, and so we welcome any suggestions and criticisms. So that we may arrange our programs to please you, fill out this questionnaire and deposit in box located near doorman."

Patrons are asked to check the type of feature they like by checking any of the following: Action, Comedy, Drama, Western, Love, Musical, Mystery, Opera. Next, spaces are provided for the insertion of the names of stars they enjoy seeing.

Small boxes are provided opposite "yes" and "no" for affirmative or negative replies to the question: "Are the ushers courteous?" This is followed by space in which the recipient of the card may write-in any suggestions or criticism. Lines for name and address, and then the name of the theatre, complete the copy on the card. Reverse side is a "message from the cashier" in which she enthuses over the coming hits and points out other advantages to patrons who attend the Colonial regularly.

Results of Selette's poll are not known, but other theatremen would do well to follow his procedure in learning the tastes of their patrons and then setting about to the job of fulfilling them and correcting any deficiencies in service that may have been brought to the theatremen's attention.

Air Cadet Recruiting Tieup

A tieup with the Army Air Cadet Recruiting service was arranged by J. G. Oppenheim, Jr., of the Academy Theatre, Waukegan, Ill., for his playdate on "Pilot No. 5." The mayor proclaimed "air cadet week," planes flew over the theatre opening day, with tickets going to persons who guessed nearest their correct altitude. A two-way "talky" set between planes and the ground brought the conversation to the crowds in front of the theatre.

Silverman's Campaign Exploits 'Desert Song'

Newspapers, radio, tieups, posting and a special lobby display were the avenues of selling approach utilized by Manager Jacob Silverman of the Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa., for his campaign on "The Desert Song."

For six days, Silverman ran a series of advance ads on the Technicolor musical.

Through a tieup with Station WFBG, transcription and spot announcements were broadcast six times daily for seven days.

Plenty of paper was posted and displayed. For instance, six 24-sheets, 100 one-sheets were posted, while 200 window cards were placed in conspicuous spots throughout Altoona. Twenty-six car cards were used in trolley cars and buses.

Silverman contacted all the music shops in town and arranged for them to use window and counter displays embracing sheet music of the songs from the picture, as well as recordings of the numbers. Wherever available, juke boxes were tied in to play "Desert Song" numbers.

Station WFBG also played recordings of the songs, with special tie-in advertising.

Boston Campaign Sets Pace for 'None Shall Escape' Premieres

Columbia sent its drum-beaters into New England to set the stage for the world premiere of "None Shall Escape" in thirty-one New England cities on January 19th. Boston, the hub of the day-and-date booking arrangement, served as the focal point for the exploiteers who took full advantage of the press and radio facilities of that city.

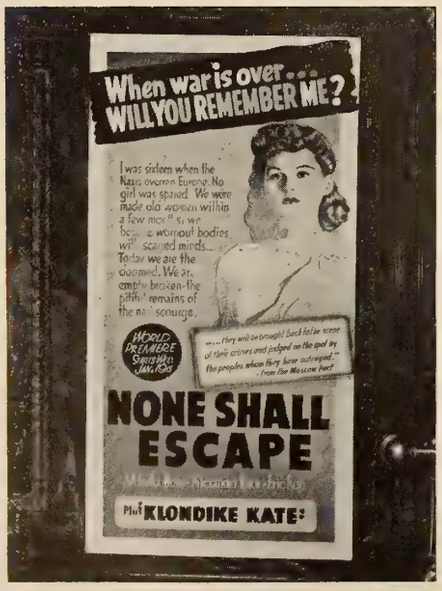
To inaugurate the campaign, Columbia's space-grabbers invited the press and radio to sit-in with representatives of New England's theatres at a luncheon-forum-screening at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Boston on January 8th. Quentin Reynolds, noted war correspondent and national network news commentator, was guest of honor and spoke of his personal experiences with the Nazi war criminals.

Highlight of the actual campaign, selling the picture to the public, was a tie-in with the Fourth War Loan Drive which resulted in the sale of $1,000,000 in bonds. Arrangements were made for a rehearsal "trial" of the Axis war criminals to be held in the United States Federal Court in that city through the efforts of Manager Ed Allen of the Majestic Theatre and Manager Al Parris of the Normandie.

Federal Judges for 'Trial'

Feature of the "trial" that garnered reams of attention from the newspapers, including front-page breaks, was the selection of the "jury." In a widely heralded newspaper and radio campaign, places on the jury were offered to each person who purchased a $10,000 war bond, with the result that the final count showed a group of 100 who furthered the war effort by loaning Uncle Sam $1,000,000.

The trial was presided over by two Federal judges, with the chief trial attorney for Suffolk County, Mass., as chief prosecutor, assisted by two Boston judges. Representatives of the United Nations sat in on the trial as observers and heard the prosecutor present witnesses who recently fled Europe and related their first-hand experiences with Nazi bestiality. As Exhibit "A," "None Shall Escape" was screened in the courtroom after the testimony of the witnesses had been heard.



In addition to an extensive newspaper advertising campaign, the Boston premiere of "None Shall Escape" was backed up by comprehensive radio coverage. All five stations in Boston carried scores of spot announcements and gave generously of free time to the promotion of the "million dollar jury" and the showing of the picture. WCOP carried five-minute interviews on four different days; WEEI, WBZ and WHIH mentioned the jury and the picture on many of their news broadcasts; and WMEX broadcast the "trial" directly from the Federal Court for one full hour, giving the picture many plugs. In return for the exclusive right to broadcast the trial, WMEX made special announcements of the trial and also carried the story daily on its news broadcasts.

Other outstanding features of the Boston campaign was the distribution of the Columbia "None Shall Escape" war bond poster and an unusually large street banner in the busy downtown section of the city.

Gets Extra Newspaper Space

The campaign in Hartford, Conn., was handled by George Landers, manager of E. M. Loew's Theatre, with a Columbia exploiteer and netted the "None Shall Escape" engagement extra newspaper space and radio time. As in Boston, the transcription made by General Marcel De Baer, Belgian judge and chairman of the Inter-Allied Commission for the Prosecution of the Axis War Criminals, was aired, with the picture getting a generous play. A half-hour radio forum on WTHT was held with noted localites participating. One hundred and fifty "None Shall Escape" war bond posters were posted on traffic poles in the center of the city in a Fourth War Loan Drive with the Chamber of Commerce.

Al Anders of the Bijou Theatre, Springfield, Mass., and Leo Young of the Strand, Portland, Me., socked their communities with equally fine campaigns that included extra newspaper space, additional merchant's window cooperation and radio time. Both used the General De Baer radio speech as well as the regular spot announcement transcriptions. In Portland, Manager Young arranged for a roundtable discussion on the punishment of the Nazi war criminals to be broadcast from the stage of the theatre after a screening for participants and other local bigwigs.

Manager Ed Allen of the Majestic Theatre, Boston, adapted a newspaper ad to make this sock lobby poster an advance display for his world premiere of Columbia film, "None Shall Escape."

'Harvest Moon' Next WB Film To Receive a Music Buildup

Next Warner Bros. production to get the benefit of extensive national exploitation through its musical angle will be "Shine On, Harvest Moon," based on the story of Nora Bayes, with Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan starred.

In addition to a long list of tieups already arranged for radio and night club plugs, the Arthur Murray Champagne Hour featured by orchestras in 45 cities will play various "Harvest Moon" numbers as part of their dance music, with the band vocalists also featuring songs from the picture.

'Hitler's Madman' Sold Via Gibbet Displayed in Lobby

Adorned with a sign, "Reserved for Hitler's Madman," a gibbet with rope and noose suspended to within ten feet of the floor was displayed in the lobby of the Paramount Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, by Manager Maurice Crew in advance of the showing of "Hitler's Madman."

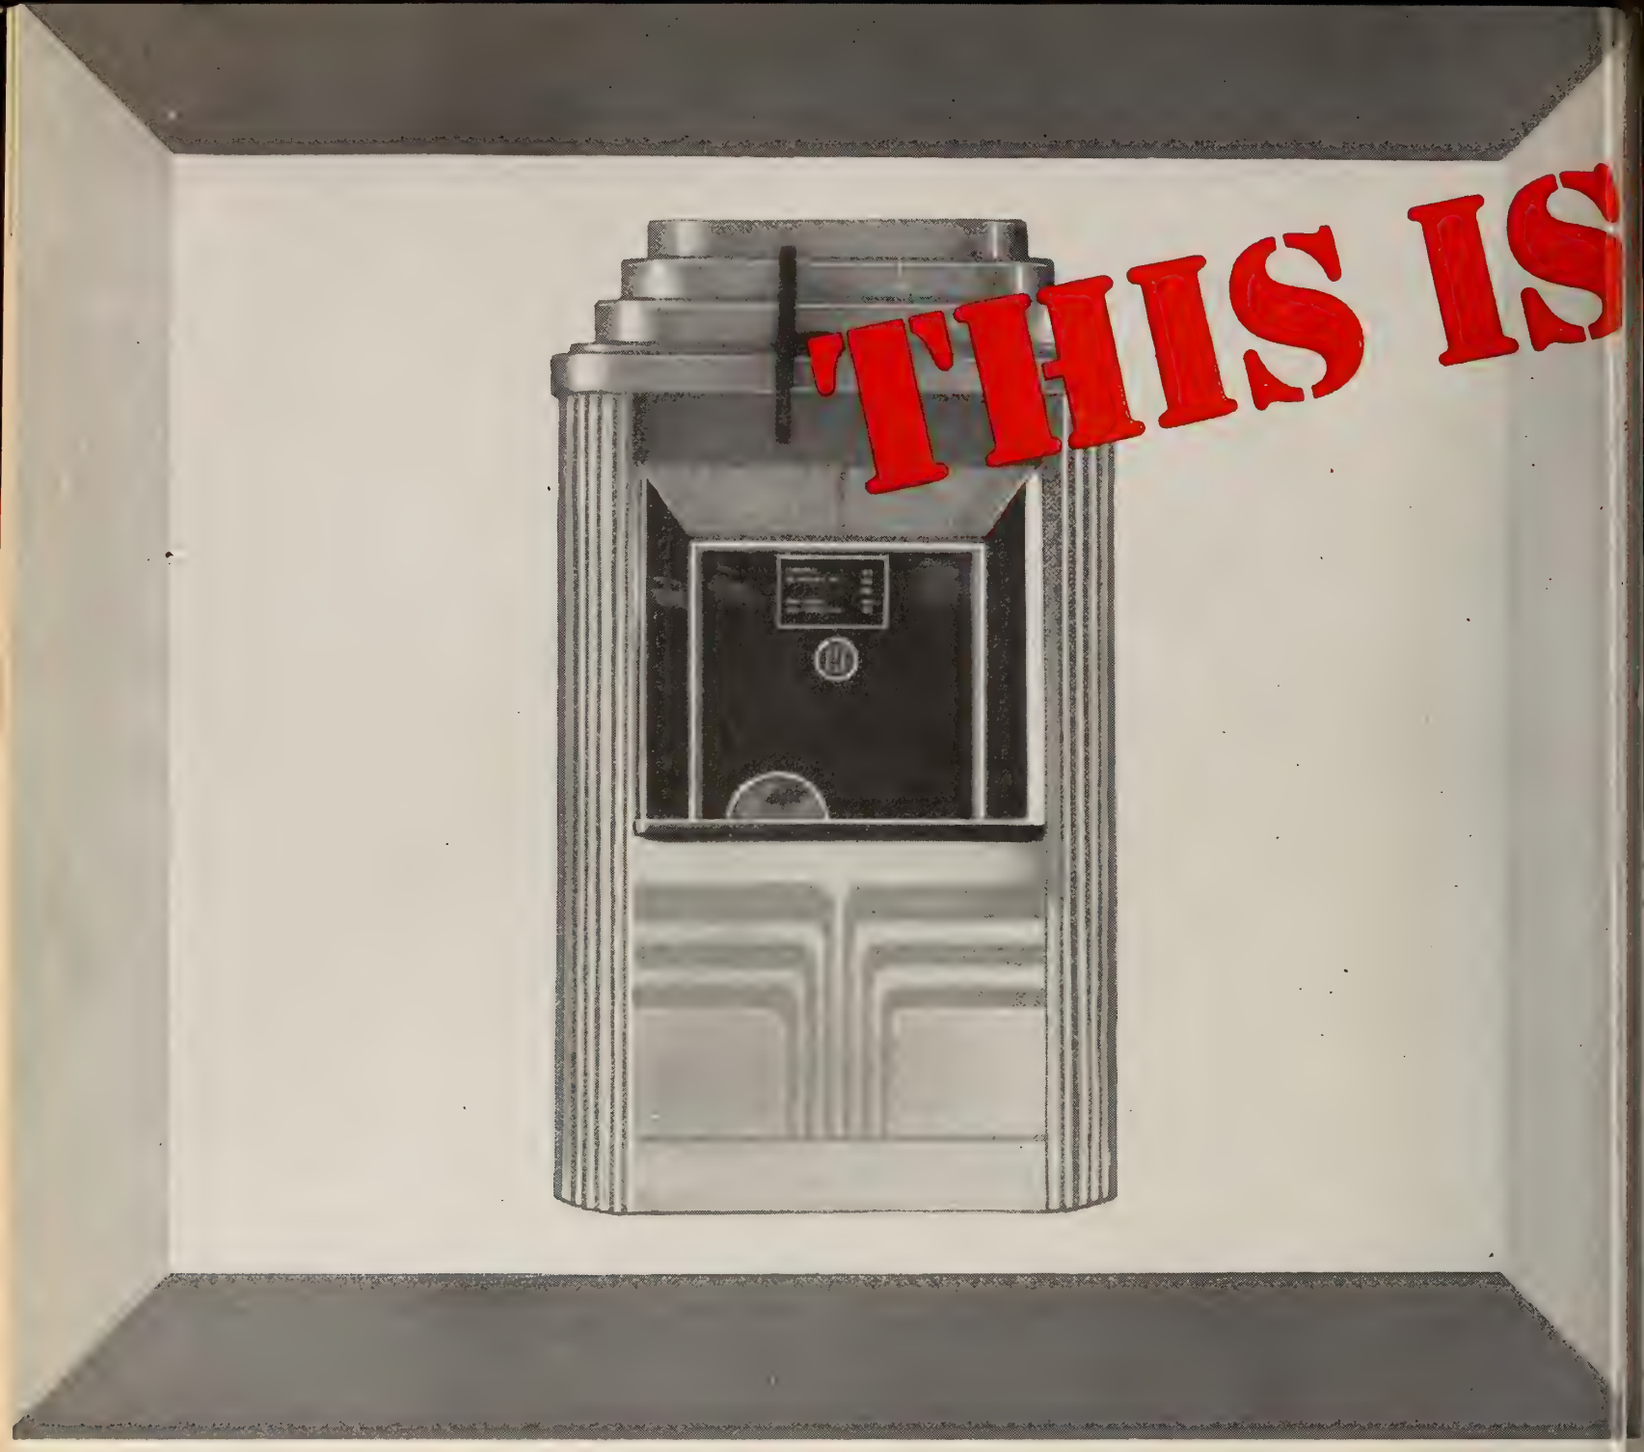
Pictured here is one of three exceptionally attractive book store windows on MGM's "Madame Curie," promoted by Miss Vivian Brown, student assistant manager of Loew's, Richmond, Va. According to Manager George Peters, she also persuaded a newspaper literary critic to review the book. Personal letters were also mailed to all the roentgenologists in Richmond and neighboring cities calling their attention to the film's engagement at Loew's.

Two Win Collies in Contest on 'Lassie'

A fifteen-year-old Ohio boy and a fourteen-year-old Staten Island girl have won prize pedigreed collies in one of the most successful and interest-provoking contest conducted by a national publication.

Young America launched the contest last September in connection with "Lassie Come Home."

The two collie pups, similar in appearance to the canine star of the movie, were awarded on the basis of solutions to a crossword puzzle, accompanied by the best essay on "Why I Like Dogs." One award was announced to go to a boy, the other to a girl, with fifty additional awards of war stamps.



The prize pup won by Charles Vance, Jr. of 567 East North Broadway, Columbus, O., was presented to him recently on the stage of Loew's Ohio Theatre in Columbus. Captain Volney Phifer, special traveling exploitation representative for MGM, will present the animal to the boy, with Manager Russell Bovin and numerous prominent civic personages participating. The father of the prize-winner is principal of a Columbus school. Details were worked out by J. E. Watson, MGM exploitation representative in southern Ohio territory.

Captain Phifer also presented the second prize-winner, Doris Kamman, of 1061 Post Ave., Staten Island, N. Y., with her dog, but this time by proxy. Doris was in the South, so the pup was put in the temporary custody of her twelve-year-old cousin, Caroline Gerhard.

Judges in the contest were George E. Pierson, secretary of the Collie Club of America; Rudd Weatherwax, Hollywood dog expert who trained Lassie; and Stuart Scheftel, publisher of Young America. Mr. Pierson reports that as a result of "Lassie Come Home" and attendant exploitation, an unprecedented demand has been manifested for collie pups, and that at the present time it is actually difficult to obtain a pedigreed collie from a kennel or dog shop.

People who try to do things and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed.

California Manager Lets Kiddies Enlist Canines for Service

With "Lassie" signed to a five-year contract and with other dog stars in the offing, it seems likely that we shall be seeing a number of pictures this year in which a canine has the leading role or at least plays an important part in the story. Considering the overwhelming fondness of the public for this tried and true friend, such pictures will provide theatremen with a sure-fire exploitation stunt that will not only attract patrons, but will make friends for the theatre.

This stunt is simply to use dogs in the flesh as participants in best-dog contests, dog shows, or in a patriotic manner, such as linking them with the dogs in actual service. You know, dog owners are always very proud of their pets and they are looking for a chance to show them off. Therefore, you can be sure of cooperation when you run some such affair. The younger element, especially, are delighted to enter their dogs in contests.

Take the case of Manager Bill Browne of the Sequoia Theatre, Redwood City, Calif. He cooperated with the Army by making it possible for the youngsters to enlist their dogs for military duty at a special Kiddies' matinee. There were big dogs and little dogs, terriers, bull dogs, chows, great danes, and mixed breeds—to put it conservatively. A few were chosen, but all were honored, to the delight of their owners. This was the contest where a great dane was marked: "4-F—I'm overweight."

Of course, holding a dog contest is no sinecure. What to do with the dogs after the contest is sometimes a poser. George Sharp, manager of the Fox-Wilson, Fresno, Calif., lined up with the San Joaquin Sportsman Club to hold a dog contest for the kids, and he was somewhat startled when the youngsters brought 125—count 'em—entries. After the judging was over and the show was about to start the staff made use of a parking lot in which to tie up the dogs until their masters saw the show. An attendant, of course, was in charge. As Manager Sharp commented: it was a howling success.

Sheet Music Covers Campaign Nucleus

A successful campaign on "Riding High" has been reported by Manager Harry D. Stearn of the Schine Manring Theatre in Middlesboro, Ky.

Campaign was built around 100 sheet music covers received from the Paramount Music Corp. The covers were used in advance of the picture by stringing them across the back of the theatre, over the exit doors and in the lobby. They were also used in window and counter display tieups with Penney's, Woolworth's, Scott's and the Gibson Music Store.

Seven-foot block letters were stenciled on the sidewalk in front of the theatre, and small stenciled signs were used on all street corners throughout the town four days in advance of playdate.

Three thousand heralds (the back page was sold to merchants to defray cost of makeup and imprinting) were stuffed in copies of the local newspaper. Some were dropped from an airplane over three large coal mine camps, and window cards were also placed at various mining camps.

Newspaper publicity included a story and 48-inch feature Stearn played up the Technicolor angle because "Technicolor means an awfully lot to (Dorothy) Lamour." He also erected a large lobby board which was moved to the front of the theatre after the engagement of "Riding High" got under way.

This striking window display at The Fair, Chicago, is representative of hundreds being arranged from coast to coast on 20th Century-Fox's "The Song of Bernadette" (STR, Jan. 22, p. 47). Similar displays are under way with the better stores in New York, Philadelphia, Youngstown, Cleveland, New Orleans, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Washington, D. C., and other cities. The displays are coordinated with newspaper advertising, local publicity releases and giveaways (art reproductions of the Norman Rockwell painting of Jennifer Jones as Bernadette) issued with the purchases of war bonds.

Simons Uses Tieups to Put 'London' Across

Effective tieups, many attractive window displays and plenty of outdoor billing were among the high spots of the exploitation campaign put on by Manager Jack Simons of Loew's State Theatre, Providence, for the showing there of "Jack London."

Special window cards were placed throughout the city. Specially prepared 20x22-inch cards were placed on bulletin boards of the main library. Fifteen thousand heralds were distributed in the downtown area. Heralds and cards were also conspicuous at the USO Canteen, Masonic Center and both the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

As a result of the Adam Hat tieup, "Jack London" got an attractive window display and two co-op ads in the Bulletin and Journal. The Royal Crown Cola tieup accounted for banners on five of their trucks. A tieup with the Irvine Shoe Store was the means of distributing 5000 imprinted bags. Other window displays were promoted, Kresge's plugged a "Jack London" sundae at their fountains and local newspapers came through with lots of publicity and art.

'Wake Island' Idea

With progress being made in the effort to re-capture lost Pacific islands from the Japanese, Sgt. Ed Harris. USMC, formerly manager of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., believes that the re-capture of Wake will be of important significance, and suggests that when the newspaper headlines announce the event, Paramount's "Wake Island" will be a natural for re-booking.

He visualizes ad copy reading "Marines who desperately fought to hold Wake Island now re-capture the island and avenge their buddies, etc." Insertion of new invasion newsreel clips, Harris continues, could be effected to make the picture up to date. He concludes: "I know that Paramount and livewire exhibitors will take advantage of this opportunity to salute the Marines who are making history today."

covers and recordings as well as broadcasts. You might use the recordings as a basis for spot announcements having the radio station play the records and follow with your announcements, associating the music with the picture and your theatre playdate.

FASHION TIEUPS

The window display man at your local department store with a little help and inspiration on your part can develop a sure-fire, eye-compelling window set up on 'teen-age clothes. Photos or blowups of O'Connor, Peggy Ryan and Ann Blyth can be used to associate a display of 'teen-age models with the picture, "Chip Off the Old Block." The floor of the window could be covered with wood shavings with a milk bar set up for background. Framed pictures of "Ma" and "Pa" in old-fashioned clothes of the Charleston Dance Craze era could be used for back bar atmosphere along with a collection of college pennants and loving cups from years gone by. Live models recruited from high school students could be used in the larger cities where the store's budget permits.

FINAL TIP

Remember that there is military atmosphere in the picture, musical production numbers, song hits, a new femme love interest in O'Connor's life, and a swell title that will all add up to showmanship if you will let the bars down and go after that extra do-re-mi which is yours for the effort. Drag down your share of the chips and cash 'em in.

Strip Across the Front Page

As a unique method of advertising the showing of "Thousands Cheer" at the State Theatre, Altoona, Pa., W. B. Jacoby ran an eight-column strip across the front page of the local newspaper.

DALLAS

March of Dimes collections for this area have reached an all-time high with a take of about $200,000. Actual breakdown from the circuits is as follows: Interstate, $120,000; Jefferson, $27,700, and R & R for the full circuit including Arkansas and Oklahoma $26,870.44. In each of these cases collections were taken in the houses and there are more than 150 individual houses yet to be heard from. Last year the total Texas yield was $11,001.91.

In the February 15 issue of the R & R 24-Sheeter, Editor Don Douglas does himself proud with a eulogy to the family child, the influence of the child on hapiness in the family, and the development of character through parenthood. Occasion was the Valentine's issue of the sheet, which carried reproductions of pictures of 26 children of the R & R personnel.

Staff Sgt. Forrest Thompson, Tower-Melba, Dallas, is hospitalized in England from frostbite on fingers suffered on a bombing expedition.

All units of the industry here now are gearing themselves for the approaching Red Cross drive.

At a meeting of Paramount partners recently, E. V. Richards, Jr., New Orleans, was seen visiting Lou Bissinger at the Queen. The Queen was erected in 1912 by E. H. Hulsey with Richards as manager. The visit was an occasion for reminiscing between Bissinger and Richards, with the latter telling about the trouble he had to get some steel beams set. Lots of water over the dam since 1912!

H. S. Leon Theatres, in entering subscriptions for STR, one for each operation, advised the managers that the subscriptions were entered as a sales aid in the exploitation of the house and pictures. In a letter he stated STR is designed primarily as a service magazine to the manager and it gives suggestions for display

DENVER

In the theatre drive for bond sales Colorado houses are well over the 75 per cent mark, and by the time final returns are in State Chairman Bob Garland is sure they will be well over the top.

C. U. (Banknight) Yaeger has his ponies at the New Orleans races and is winning. He has just added two horses to his stables.

W. R. Reynolds of Kansas City has been transferred to Denver by United Artists, where he takes over the territory served by Fred P. Brown, who gets the Denver city territory.

Fred Braden is here whipping up the publicity for the roadshow of "Song of Bernadette," which will start at the Denver and Esquire February 22. Eddie Yarborough, also of 20th-Fox, spent a week here from his New York headquarters on film publicity.

Marie Jeffries, Universal secretary, has been made assistant booker.

John Anderson, PRC exchange partner, to New York to attend franchise holders' meeting. The past week PRC has had its first film in a Denver first-run. "Career Girl" ran at the Orpheum, and with "Cry Havoc" did a nice business.

Bob Ryan, long-time Denver film salesman, who has been taking a vacation for several months, is back on the job, handling the northern territory for Republic. He succeeds Jimmy Ecker, who has joined the Merchant Marine.

Lon T. Fidler, Monogram franchise holder, went to Chicago for a district sales meet, and stopped at his Kansas City exchange on the way home.

The Hardwick family of Clovis, N. M., have bought the lot occupied by the Cover Theatre, Fort Morgan, Colo. The theatre was destroyed by fire recently and the Hardwicks will rebuild as soon as possible.

Homer Ellison, former Denver theatre man, is in town booking for the Red Cross theatres.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen on the row included Larry Starsmore and Fret Footman, both of Colorado Springs; John C. Woods, Espanola, N. M., who has returned from a long stretch on the Alaska Highway and who has made application to join the Marines; James Hughes, Yuma, Colo.; Paul Trampe, Trenton, Neb.; George McCormick, Canon City, Colo., and Fred Anderson, Eaton, Colo.

DES MOINES

A. H. Talbot, veteran theatre manager and showman, has been named district manager for the Mort H. Singer theatres in Iowa, according to an announcement by John Redmond, general manager for the circuit. He will make his headquarters at Cedar Rapids. Frank Hoffman, formerly manager of the Variety Club in the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago, will succeed Talbot as manager of the Iowa Theatre at Cedar Rapids. Talbot has been manager of the Iowa Theatre for the past 10 years and has been in the show business for 35 years.

A total of $1,156,225 worth of war bonds was purchased for admission to a special victory show presented at the Paramount Theatre in Des Moines by the Italian-American Columbus Club. The 1700 persons attending the show all bought bonds ranging from $25 to $1000, with 31 persons buying the $1000 bonds. The sale was four times the original quota of $250,000 set for the show.

Waterloo is howling because the premiere of "The Sullivans" was not held at Waterloo, native city of the family. A special premiere showing was held at New York City with the parents in attendance, but a Hollywood premiere is scheduled for Feb. 23. Mayor Ralph Slippy and Chamber of Commerce officials have repeatedly asked 20th Century-Fox for an early showing, but the studio reported that it would be impossible for some time to get all the picture's stars together for a premiere showing at Waterloo. It is still hoped by the Waterloo folks to have the first Midwest showing of the film.

Harry Wood, booker, was named president of the 20th Century-Fox Family Club at the Des Moines exchange, with Evan Jacobs, vice-president, Gwendolyn Welsh, secretary, and Carrie Faber treasurer.

The meeting with Des Moines RKO officials to discuss details of the company's Ned Depinet drive included Charles Boasberg, drive captain; his assistant, Harry Gittelson; Walter E. Branson, Western sales manager; and R. V. Nolan, Prairie division manager. Branch Manager Lou Elman and his bookers and salesmen met with the officials.

Wayne Strong has taken over the De Luxe Theatre at Kingsley from H. H. Thomas, who has operated it for the past 11 years.

Leroy McMahon, owner of the Uptown Theatre at Gladbrook, reports he had dropped out of the Garbett circuit and hereafter will do the buying and booking for the house.

DETROIT

The Barkerette Valentine party was held in the Variety Club rooms in the Hotel Book-Cadillac last Saturday, with proceeds going to help the USO and school activities in Detroit. Mrs. Moe Dudleson, wife of the branch manager for United Artists, was active in planning the affair.

Gil Green, manager of the Michigan Theatre, was in a three-column picture in the Detroit Times last week, showing him paying off the winner of the "Tender Comrade" contest, in which wives of soldiers wrote their ideas of proper behavior for the spouses at home. The prize was a $100 War Bond.

Maj. Jack Hurford, former Fox Theatre manager, home on leave from special duties in Alaska, told last week of some luck—both hard and good. He started out his tour of duty with a frosty trek through the Aleutians and the wilder portions of Alaska. For months he was holed up in the wilderness. Then the Army evened things up for him—it made him official escort for Ingrid Bergman on her 16,000-mile tour of the Army camps.

Leo Gorcy, the Dead End kid, spent his birthday in Detroit with his father, who runs a local restaurant. Leo, who was in town on a War Bond tour, received a diamond-studded watch from his dad.

The City Commission of Bay City, Mich., is holding up the payment of the $6,500 reward offered for the solving of the slaying of Floyd Ackerman, Bay City theatre manager. John Woos, 24, has received a life sentence for the killing in a holdup two months ago. One plea for the reward has been filed with city officials. The reward was offered by theatres, the city, a bank and civic groups.

The Midwest premiere of "Jane Eyre" took place February 17 at the Fox Theatre in a special Victory Bond show which the Wisper and Wetsman Theatres helped promote.

"The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" was the attraction for the War Bond show held at the Broadway Capitol Theatre February 15. Stars of screen, radio and stage participated in the "Bond Wagon." "Madame Curie" carried over a third week at the United Artists Theatre.

INDIANAPOLIS

O. M. Young, local manager for Ross Federal Screen Service, has been promoted to district manager and will have his headquarters in Chicago. His new territory will embrace eleven Midwest branches.

Clyde Winans, city manager for Young and Wolf theatres at Gary, Ind., has resigned his post, and will take a much needed rest before announcing his future plans.

J. A. Marriott has reopened the Ace Theatre at Bradenberg, Ky. The house was shuttered for the past year.

The Avalon Theatre, operated by Jake Friedman and his wife, was acquired by E. J. Miles of Indianapolis.

Charles Rich, Warner district manager, was a visitor at the local exchange during the week. Before returning to Cleveland he was accompanied by Claude McKean, local exchange manager, on a business trip to Ft. Wayne and Chicago.

Sam Abrams, PRC sales manager, made a business trip to Chicago during the week.

Ward Scott, 20th-Fox district manager, was a caller at the local exchange during the week.

The Sanders Theatre, a Fountain Square Theatre unit, has undergone a face lifting. The entire lobby has been remodeled and streamlined and the box-office, formerly at the door, is even with the sidewalk. New doors, tile floor, and

Pfc. John (Jack) Elliott, a former employe at National Screen Service, is reported missing in action. He was a member of the Boston bomber unit which participated in heavy bombings of German positions in Tunisia. He enlisted in the Army Air Force in June, 1941, and was stationed in England.

Three boys who sat near the front row at Lyric Theatre decided the screen was not bright enough and proceeded to use flashlights. Interfering with the show, police took them to the juvenile aid division. The boys were fourteen, twelve and nine years old.

Arthur Serber, assistant manager of the National Theatre, Louisville, has resigned his position and will join his wife at Denver, Colo. She is a member of the Wacs there. He formerly owned and operated the Mary-Lane Theatre in Evansville, Ind.

Mrs. Daisy Johnson stopped at Loew's Theatre Thursday to see a movie and got the surprise of her life—and she saw her son, R. Edwin Johnson, second class petty officer, in a newsreel.

MEMPHIS

Though complete figures on the Fourth War Bond show, which was staged at Loew's Palace and Malco theatres last week, have not been compiled as yet, it is estimated by M. A. Lightman, chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the Shelby County War Bond Finance Committee, that sales are well over $2,000,000 and that 5000 individual bonds were sold.

Romance is still playing a big role among theatre employes. The last victim of Cupid is Ann Gibson, night assistant at Loew's State, who was married last Saturday to Lt. Steve Carter, stationed in Memphis with the Second Army. The bride will continue her position at the theatre on return from a short honeymoon.

Paramount held a district sales meeting in Dallas last Monday and Tuesday. Attending from the local exchange were: L. W. McClintock, branch manager, and Joe S. Young, W. C. Kroeger and R. M. Hammond, salesmen, and Sebe Miller, booking manager. The meeting is under the direction of J. J. Donohue, district manager.

MIAMI

Plans for the Southern premiere of "The Song of Bernadette," February 23, at the Lincoln and Miami theatres, are under way here. Spence Pierce of 20th Century-Fox's Atlanta office is in town assisting with an extensive newspaper-radio-exploitation campaign.

Emery Austin, MGM field man out of Atlanta, has been in Miami this week, working with Paramount Enterprises' publicist, Jack Clark, on "Madame Curie," which opened February 18.

Tom Jefferson, former publicist with Paramount here and in the New York office, is now in Officers' Candidate School at Miami Beach.

The Olympia Theatre, Miami's only vaudeville house, is celebrating its 18th anniversary this week, with Patricia Morison heading a gala stage revue. Al Weiss, Jr., manager of the house, has been the Olympia impresario for the entire eighteen years except for two years in the early '30's.

Allan Armstrong, manager of Wometco's Ritz, was the winner of third prize in RKO's direct mail campaign contest for "Tender Comrade."

SULLIVANS SELL BONDS. $50,000 in War Bonds were sold in one hour by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Sullivan, parents of the 5 gallant Sullivan Brothers, in the lobby of the Roxy Theatre, New York, where the 20th-Fox film, "The Sullivans," is the headline attraction.

James "Josh" Loomis, head artist at Wometco, has been called up by his draft board for the second time in four months, and reports to Camp Blanding for a physical examination February 20.

Al McAdams has joined the Wometco accounting department. Recently of the Embry Riddle Flying School, he has been in publicity and management for thirty years.

NEW YORK

Columbia's sales drive began this week with a great to-do at the local exchange. Salesmen and bookers are all pepped up at the announcement of prizes consisting of one to four weeks' salary.

At Republic Mrs. Ruth Berns has been made secretary to Maxwell Gillis, eastern division manager.

Ralph Pielow, MGM exchange manager, has been in the hospital a week for a check-up.

Moe Sanders, 20th Century-Fox N. Y. and Brooklyn supervisor, has just returned from Florida to resume his work at the exchange and with Motion Picture Associates.

When Peter Saglembini, Warner booker, started for the Army last week he was given a luncheon by the Bookers Club and received a handsome wrist watch from his office associates.

Charlie Boasberg and Harry Gittleson, who head the Ned Depinet drive at RKO, reached the end of a 12,000-mile trip when they got back to the local exchange last week. There was a big welcome awaiting them, with many over from the home office, including A. Schubert, Mike Poller, Rutgers Neilson, Frank Drum, Jack Level, Harry Michalson, Art Brilant, and Walter Branson. Country-wide prizes approximating $65,000 were announced, besides another $20,000 in group awards.

The Costello Theatre on Washington Heights, operated by Henry Siegel and Harry Fried, has changed to a Spanish policy. It is now La Teatro Costello. Oh, Maurice!

Sally Saslow, N. Y. booker at UA, has resigned to get married. The marrying season seems to be on. Edna Underhill, Columbia telephone operator, is also soon to take the same step.

C. C. Moskowitz, Loew vice-president, has been named a member of the Board of Directors of the Police Athletic League by Deputy Commissioner William M. Kent, president of PAL. Moskowitz has been active in aiding the youth organization in its annual benefit shows at Madison Square Garden.

PHOTOGRAPHY'S "SECOND FRONT"

More than a hundred war products now made of material developed for a better Kodak Film

FILM BASE IS A PLASTIC—one of the earliest. To make a better film, Kodak long ago began producing from cotton linters a "miracle material": cellulose acetate.

In the form of TENITE—made by Tennessee Eastman Corporation, a Kodak subsidiary—this plastic is tough as a steer's horn and lighter than wood. It can be molded under heat or pressure, or "machined" like lumber or metal. It can be clear transparent, or in an unlimited range of colors.

Tenite is molded into finished products at the fastest rate ever reached with plastics. It led to a minor "industrial revolution" before the war or wartime shortages were dreamed of . . .

Now it has more than a hundred war applications—not as a substitute, but as a superior material. As an extra advantage, it does supplant other "critical" materials.

A few war uses are illustrated . . . In a sense, they all started with photography—the ever-growing need for finer film . . . Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

REMEMBER TORPEDO SQUADRON 8? . . . how, knowing exactly what the odds against them were, this heroic band of 30 Navy fliers drove unswervingly into the massed fire of the Japanese fleet off Midway? And only one man survived? A stern example to us at home. BUY MORE WAR BONDS.

He controls the Jeep with a Tenite steering wheel—strong, tough, and able to stand all climates. Your own car probably has a Tenite steering wheel, instrument panel, accessories.

His bayonet scabbard is Tenite—lighter, tougher, more easily cleaned . . . Cost is little more than half that of scabbards made with earlier materials.

Snake-bite kit supplied our troops by the Army Medical Corps includes vacuum pump—molded of Tenite—for extracting snake venom.

Doubles for brass—Before acceptance by the Army, this bugle—molded of Tenite—won the most critical ears by its tone and range.

ST. LOUIS

Rex Williams, city manager for Loew's theatres, has qualified for the title of No. 1 Hard Luck Guy of the St. Louis film colony. His streak of unfavorable luck got away to a running start some six months ago when he broke a wrist in a fall at his home. Then $100 worth of Christmas presents, purchased by the attaches of the two theatres as a surprise for him, were stolen just a few hours before the planned presentation at a Christmas Eve party in his honor. A week after that he suffered serious injuries when his automobile was wrecked on the Express Highway in Forest Park because another driver lost control of his machine. After he had been taken to a hospital following this accident pneumonia developed and he had to make a real fight to live. (Stop, you're breaking my heart.) But his bad luck was not through with those setbacks. For a few days after his release from the hospital burglars broke into his home and carried off much loot. Then he received notice that his efficient assistant, Wayne Sheppler, was being transferred to Evansville, Ind., to take over the management of the Loew's theatre in that city. And last, but not least, he has been reclassified 1A.

Cecilia Parker, known to countless film fans as Andy Hardy's sister, has been visiting here with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Donald J. Morgan of Overland, St. Louis County, Missouri.

Louis K. Ansell of Ansell Brothers Circuit and Mrs. Ansell have sold their residence at 22 Ridgemoor drive, St. Louis County, to Mrs. Ida K. Sebulsky and son, Lester.

East St. Louis, Ill., went over the top in the Fourth War Loan drive with plenty to spare. By February 9 it had rolled up a total of $5,100,000 against a quota of $4,767,070. The East St. Louis motion picture theatres contributed much to this fine showing for the metropolis of Southern Illinois.

The St. Louis newspapers all gave fine reviews and some nice space to Monogram's "Where Are Your Children?" which opened at Fanchon & Marco's Missouri Theatre on February 9.

"Song of Bernadette" will open an extended run at Fanchon & Marco's Ambassador Theatre either on March 9 or 16.

Harry Hynds, Universal manager, has closed a deal with George Karsch of Farmington, Mo., head of the Leadbelt Amusement Company and the Farmington Entertainment Company for the entire 1943-44 product of Universal. Houses in Boone, Terre, Elvins, Flat River, Ironton, Bismarck, Desloge, Farmington and Leadwood are included in the deal.

Willie Ruth Jones, former secretary at the St. Louis MGM office, has gone to Buffalo, N. Y., to undergo training as a Lionite under the direction of Marion Ryan, Buffalo office manager.

F. L. Lowe, Star Theatre, Lebanon, Mo., and A. H. Weicks, Temple Theatre, Staunton, Ill., were recent callers.

The value of a trained theatre staff was demonstrated recently at the Ambassador Theatre, when spontaneous combustion caused a minor fire in the basement storage closet. A near-capacity audience of 3100 was in the theatre. Henry Riegel, Jr., manager, quickly and coolly spoke to the patrons; ushers quickly deployed to their stations, there was no excitement and, as directed by Riegel, the assemblage left the theatre in an orderly fashion when firemen arrived. The blaze was quickly extinguished.

George F. Dembow, vice-president in charge of sales for National Screen Service, addressed a meeting of theatre owners and managers and exchange managers at a luncheon at the Coronado Hotel recently, speaking on the Fourth War Loan Drive. Harry C. Arthur, Jr., Campaign Chairman for Eastern Missouri in the Fourth War Loan Drive, presided at the gathering. Arthur said that reports up to February 7 indicated that the 110 theatres of St. Louis and St. Louis County had sold a total of $3,150,000 in bonds while sales outstate had topped $5,000,000.

A goal of $5,000,000 in War Bonds was set by the B'nai B'rith Councils of St. Louis for their war bond show at the St. Louis Arena on the night of February 17th.

Warner Bros. will have a trade showing of "Passage to Marseille" on Monday, February 21, at S'Renco Screening Room, at 10 a.m.

Patrons of Fanchon & Marco's Fox Theatre the night of February 15 were given a preview of 20th Century-Fox's "The Sullivans." The trade also was invited to this "sneak preview."

In a final effort to achieve the goal of a War Bond for every theatre seat in the Fourth War Loan drive the 111 motion picture theatres of St. Louis and St. Louis County conducted their fifth and final "free movie day" on Tuesday, February 15. Three of the houses, the Aubert, Maffitt and Maplewood, all units in the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Circuit conducted bond premieres that night. At the 108 other houses regular admissions were sold for cash in addition to free tickets for bonds purchased.

SAN FRANCISCO

Alameda has Robert L. Lippert, owner of a bay area and San Francisco chain of theatres, to thank for the personal appearance at a Fourth War Loan drive street rally of four Hollywood celebrities. Lippert arranged for Lola Lane, Slim Summerville, Harry Carey, and Charles Starrett to take part in the program.

"Desert Victory," British Army film, was shown at a meeting of the Interchange Club at the Palace Hotel.

The Warfield Theatre, a Fox-West Coast downtown first-run and vaudeville, currently screening the juvenile delinquency film, "Where Are Your Children?", has engaged Gail Storm, feminine lead in the picture, for a series of personal appearances in connection with the showing. During her stay here, Miss Storm will also entertain at the Stage Door Canteen.

Golden State Theatre Circuit's contribution to the Fourth War Loan Bond drive was the Bond Premiere of the neighborhood theatres held at the Royal Theatre. All the neighborhood houses cooperated in the sale of tickets.

The Clay Theatre, a foreign film house here, is holding over the British film, "Jeannie," for a fourth month, which is a record for the house.

The Presidio Theatre housed the private showing of the new Army motion picture, "War Department Report," which includes films captured from the enemy. This picture is not for public release, but will be shown to defense workers in various war plants.

B. V. Sturdivant, who has been giving his services as national director of the Fourth War Loan campaign and vice-president of the California War Chest, besides his regular duties as northern California division manager of Fox-West Coast Theatres, has now been named a member of the National War Fund budget and quota committee.

VANCOUVER

The Stanley Theatre, a F.P. house, was held up last week and the bandit escaped with $200. He marched a taxi-driver, doorman and usher at gun-point through the lobby and upstairs to the office of Amy Brewster, manager, and then scooped up the cash.

Odeon Theatres added another B.C. theatre to its string last week, buying the Gem Theatre, Haney, from William Clayton, old-time projectionist. The theatre was erected three years ago. Jim McAllister of the Fraser, Vancouver, will be in charge temporarily. This gives Odeon 27 theatres in British Columbia. Clayton will stay on as projectionist.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Revivals Are Back, Local Survey Shows

By Jack Balch

HOW would you like to see Charles Boyer and Rudolph Valentino square off, each with a beautiful lady in his arms, and kiss it out for the lovemaking championship of all the movie ages?

Dave Arthur of the Fanchon and Marco chain here (Ambassador, Fox, St. Louis, etc., YOU know), says he got to wondering one day who would have won out in a bout between Joe Louis and Jack Dempsey, both in their prime. One question mark led to another. Joe and Jack obviously couldn't be had. But Charlie and Rudy—pardon the familiarity—could. Being in a position to act on his own suggestions, Dave went ahead and acted.

So, with all the customers as a collective body of referees, Boyer and Valentino are to meet Thursday at the Ambassador Theater in osculatory combat in which no holds will be barred except those proscribed by Will Hays.

Boyer will be seen in the currently-showing "Flesh and Fantasy," with the luscious Barbara Stanwyck as his foil. Valentino will be seen in "The Eagle," a pumpkin a la mode of the silent days. His foil will be Vilma Banky, quite a luscious number in her time according to the sered and yellowing clippings this reviewer dug out of the Post-Dispatch morgue. "The Eagle," released in 1926, has had sound and music added, and the story shows how Valentino, a lieutenant in the Army of Katherine the Second of Russia, made off with the gal he wanted.

Ought to be a real contest. Huh?

ALONG THE RIALTO

● Out in St. Louis Harry and Eddie Arthur are proving that they haven't lost that old showmanship. In their big Ambassador Theater this week, they are playing "Flesh and Fantasy," with Charles Boyer, and "The Eagle," with Rudolph Valentino . . . Great screen lovers of today and yesterday. They are asking women patrons to decide which is their favorite and which is the greatest lover. The newspapers are eating it up . . . It's a swell stunt for Xmas week or any other week.

Larry Bearg, district manager of F.P., and Frank Gow, supervisor, were up to Vernon last week for the opening of the Empress Theatre. This gives F.P. two in Vernon. Walter Bennett of the Capitol will manage both theatres. Plenty of troops there.

"Thousands Cheer" on its third week is doing capacity at the Capitol. Since the Capitol opened 23 years ago this is only the sixth picture to play over two weeks.

Henry Morton, who runs six theatres in conjunction with Odeon in Winnipeg and Saskatoon, is in Vancouver on his way south to San Francisco and Hollywood.

Dorothea Fairleigh, daughter of R. E. W. Fairleigh of Dominion Theatre Supplies, was married here to Lt. Robert Armstrong, and will live in Prince George, B. C.

A survey is being made in needed theatre reconstruction by Famous Players circuit across the Dominion as part of the post-war building program to assist employment measures.

The Regina Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, representing the city's six theatres, has inaugurated a plan to supply theatre passes free to men returned from overseas service who are receiving medical treatment or awaiting discharge from the Army.

The Department of National Defense has announced the selection of "the best movies of 1943," which are to be shown to the Canadian troops in all war theatres. The list, 14 in number, comprises "Pride of the Yankees," "Random Harvest," "In Which We Serve," "Shadow of a Doubt," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Forever and a Day," "The More the Merrier," "The Human Comedy," "Stage Door Canteen," "Corvette K-225," "Holy Matrimony," "Desert Victory," "Mission to Moscow," and "Heroic Stalingrad, City That Stopped Hitler."

Ingrid Bergman headed a party of Hollywood stars who recently visited Army posts in the Prince Rupert district of British Columbia.

Hector Quagillito of the Colonial Theatre is a proud granddad, his youngest daughter, Jane, giving birth to a daughter last week.

Frank Phillips, head of the art dept for F.P. in Vancouver, is a real old-timer in show business, starting with Loew's theatres in Toronto 30 years ago. His fronts on the main stem are always outstanding and create plenty of attention.

Marge Luff of Columbia Pictures is a member of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

Mike Goodman, who was with Famous Players for a number of years, is now the owner of the Abbotsford Steam Laundry. Quite a change for Mike.

C. A. Leivis of the Midway, Rosedale, passed away last week. Mrs. Leivis will run the theatre.

The Canadian tax on gross receipts of theatres is expected to show a revenue of upwards of $9,500,000 for 1943 according to a estimate from Ottawa. There is a possibility that the Federal amusement tax of 20 per cent may be dealt with in budget measures at the present sitting of the House of Commons.

Observers close to the scene hold to the view a tax increase is in prospect in the light of similar moves in Washington.

An explosion caused by a blow-torch ruined the booth in the Empress Theatre at MacLeod, and completely destroyed prints of two features. The theatre was not open at the time. The owner is Danny Boyle.

DIXIE SHOW BOAT (PRC) Musical Comedy. Principals: Frances Langford, Guy Kibbee, Eddie Quillan, Charles Butterworth, Fifi D'Orsay, Frank Jenks. Plot: Two criminals, seeking refuge, take passage on a show boat, where they soon discover that, through an accident, a large supply of whiskey has been substituted for the cure-all remedy featured by the show. They decide to take possession of the boat and sell the liquor. Their plans are overheard by the captain's niece and a young trumpet player, who plot to capture the pair, but they themselves fall into the hands of the gangsters. However, the boy signals for help and brings about the capture of the criminals.

TWO SISTERS AND A SAILOR (MGM) Comedy With Music. Principals: June Allyson, Gloria DeHaven, Jimmy Durante, Van Johnson. Director, Richard Thorpe. Plot: Two lovely sisters lead a very full life between dancing in a famous New York night spot and using their small apartment for a miniature canteen. Mention of a desire for a larger canteen by one of the sisters miraculously brings the wish to life. A sailor, who is also a millionaire, is responsible for the new canteen. With the aid of a famous comedian, the place becomes a success and the love tangle of both sisters over the sailor is happily straightened out.

JAMBOREE (Rep.) Comedy-Drama. Principals: George Byron, Freddie Fisher, Ruth Terry, Rufe Davis, Don Wilson. Director, J. Santley. Plot: A young band leader and his men change places and style with a rural orchestra in hopes of getting a radio contract. They have to earn their keep by working on a farm run by four attractive sisters. Complications arise due to the impersonation, and nearly upset the budding romance between the band leader and the oldest sister. When the contracts finally come through, the men change their minds and decide to remain on the farm, while the girls go on the radio.

Short Subject Reviews

Mail Call (Very Good)

RKO (43104) This Is America 17 mins.

On the basis of past performance one comes to look for a lot from new releases in the This Is America series, and more often than not, one finds the results on the screen more than satisfactory, even in view of this high expectancy. This latest offering from RKO Pathe, therefore, must be rated as exceptionally good, when it is reported that the picture measures up handsomely. As a piece of information that will have beneficial effects in stimulating the writing of letters to men overseas and in making people generally more conscious of the value of using V Mail for their letters to service men, there is here a fine contribution to the war effort. Even so, it is also a picture which holds audience interest for all members of all families of Americans. The "heart interest" element is most conspicuous as the picture portrays what happens as a new mother proudly sends a letter to the father of their first-born, but makes the mistake of using regular mail instead of V Mail. The delays, the heart-wrenching, which is caused thereby—through nobody's fault—is most dramatically developed. Book it and get an audience for it by selling the truth—which is that all of the town's citizens should see this picture for a better knowledge of how they can help sustain morale at the fighting fronts, but particularly how they can do something real, tangible and most worth while for their own boys—the American soldiers, sailors and marines who are doing America's job in this war.

Practical Joker (Good)

MGM (S-551) Pete Smith Specialty 10 mins.

This is not an outstanding short but one that should catch the fancy of most people with a sense of humor. It deals with "Butch," the perennial practical joker who loves to pull smart gags on people and laugh his head off while they suffer. "Casper" is the typical victim and the film builds up to the point where "Casper" and his wife are desperately fighting back at "Butch" with some of his own dynamite. There is a lot of good fun in this subject and the commentary by Pete Smith is as usual witty and full of pep.

Home Maid (Good)

MGM (S-552) Pete Smith Specialty 10 mins.

Another humorous round-up of helpful kitchen hints by Polly Patterson which proves both entertaining and instructive. The hubby creates the problems and Polly solves them. The girls from the sewing circle will get a great kick out of this one and take some worthwhile advice along home too. The film is directed by W. Jason, with the adribbing by the illustrious Mr. Smith.

Roaring Guns (Good)

WB (9110) Santa Fe Western 20 mins.

Robert Shayne has been sent to California to take over supervision of a gold mine which employs hydraulic water monitors to rip mountains apart and wash out remaining gold. This method of mining destroys the land of the ranchers, causes them to rise up in revolt. Shayne is ousted from his job, joins the settlers in their attack on the ruthless mine-workers. Direction, acting and production values in this western are high in quality, and much action, excitement and fisticuffs have been packed into the film's 20 minutes. Where westerns are popular, this subject should be well received. And even in theatres whose patrons look down their noses at the customary horse opera, this two-reeler is made well enough to add an entertaining 20 minutes to a program dominated by a feature comedy or musical. Produced by Gordon Hollingshead, "Roaring Guns" was directed by Jean Negulesco. Supporting cast includes Virginia Patton, Stephen Richards, Charles Arnt, Norman Willis, Russell Simpson.

Dogie Round-Up (Interesting)

WB (9505) Sports Parade 10 mins.

Aside from rousing one's appetite for a juicy steak, this sojourn into the cow country of Wyoming to show how cattle are branded, innoculated against disease and separated into groups, is an attention-arresting short subject. One would assume, on first thought, that the "inside story" on ranching activities would provide little interest, but producers Blumenthal and Heilner, in this instance, have succeeded in making it an enjoyable pastime for movie audiences. The dogie, an orphan calf, is featured throughout the Technicolor subject which was directed by Andre De LaVarre. Knox Manning's narration and an appropriate musical score (one of the songs heard: Home On the Range) adds to the subject's ppeal.

Grandfather's Follies (Excellent)

WB (9103) Featurette 20 mins.

If anyone doubts the melodic appeal of the songs of yesteryear as arrayed against today's jive, let him try, after viewing this two-reeler, to erase from his mind the catchy melodies of On the Banks of the Wabash, After the Ball, Come Josephine In My Flying Machine, Daisy Bell, In My Merry Oldsmobile and others. But aside from any argument about music of grandfather's time and that of today, here is a two-reel musical nostalgically appealing and extremely diverting. With Niblo's Garden of New York in 1866 as the setting, a series of impersonations pass in array. Re-created are Millie Cavendish, Maggie Cline, Harrigan & Hart, Lillian Russell, Chauncey Olcott and Eddie Foy. The subject has been capably directed by Jean Negulesco, and because of its excellent entertainment worth, deserves care in booking and exploitation. It is not, in any sense of the word, "filler."

World's Youngest Aviator (Interesting)

Universal (8374) Person-Oddities 9 mins.

Here is an above-average round-up of interesting and seldom if ever seen-on-the-screen personalities doing unusual things in a commonplace sort of way. Ten-year-old David Stoddard of Fort Stockton, Texas, is a seasoned pilot who will make young and old sit up and take note of what's around the corner in aviation after the war. The residence on Hamid's Pier, Atlantic City, address, No. 1 Atlantic Ocean, is furnished with some rare collection pieces. The Bradmore Hotel in Colorado Springs, Calif., shows the oldest collection of American stage coaches. Bob Elliott of Rogue River, Ore., delivers his mail by motor launch against a beautiful scenic background. Elaine Lovett of Jacksonville, Fla., displays her pet squirrel and cat who are worthy of a "Believe It or Not." A reel that's just the ticket for any program.

Post-War Jobs (Revealing)

20th-Fox—March of Time No. 7 18½ mins.

A problem uppermost in the minds of Government and industry officials is tackled in this latest issue of the March of Time. With cancellations of Government contracts already taking place in some industries, necessitating the dismissal of war workers and reconversion to the manufacturing of civilian products, the plight of many war workers is already beginning. In addition, according to the film, the services are discharging many men per month for whom places must be made in civilian industry. When the war ends, some veterans will return to the jobs they were promised would be held for them, while others who had no jobs when they entered the armed forces will also have to be taken care of. The subject shows how industry is meeting the slackening-up of war production, the suspension of priorities, and the releasing of materials for the coming peace-time economy. And it reveals, too, how the expected post-war demand for products unavailable in wartime is expected to keep manufacturers busy. The post-war job problem has many complex angles, but the fact that it is already occupying the best minds of business and Government is an excellent indication that the change from wartime to peacetime production is likely to be hurdled with as few upsets as possible. This revealing March of Time is food for thought, especially for those temporarily prospering from well-paid wartime jobs.

Camera Digest (Fair)

Columbia (5903) Panoramics 10½ mins.

The camera of Andre de La Varre, who produced, directed and filmed this reel, catches some interesting occupations and scenes with the only flaw being that most of the items have been seen on the screen too frequently to smack of discovery. The sequences cover a man who makes animals from the roots and branches of trees, the method of gathering Spanish moss in Florida swamps, underwater views at Silver Springs, Fla., Ross Allen's Snake Farm and a Seminole Indian Village in the Everglades.

20th-Fox Lists Release Dates, Titles of Shorts for April, May

Titles and release dates of eight short subjects to be released during April and May have been announced by Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of world-wide distribution of 20th Century-Fox. This includes two March of Time releases, untitled as yet.

The list follows: "The Frog and the Princess," a Terrytoon in Technicolor, April 7; "Fun For All," Sports narrated by Ed Thorgersen, April 14; an untitled March of Time, April 21; "Mighty Mouse Meets Jekyll and Hyde Cat," a Terrytoon in Technicolor, April 28; "Mailman of Hell's Canyon," a Movietone Adventure narrated by Hugh James, May 5; "My Boy Johnny," a Terrytoon in Technicolor, May 12; an untitled March of Time, May 19; "Nymph of the Southland," Sports photographed in Technicolor and narrated by Ed Thorgersen, May 26.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Lake, MacMurray Teamed in 'Girls Town'; Ginger Rogers Prepares for 'Gibson Girl'; Mitchell in 'Keys of Kingdom'

Allyn Joslyn returns to his home studio for the first time in a year to play the important role of Lynn Bari's theatrical manager in Fox's "Sweet and Low Down." Joslyn joins a cast including King of Swing Benny Goodman and his orchestra, Linda Darnell, Jack Oakie, Lynn Bari, James Cardwell, Ray Mayer, John Campbell, Roy Benson, and Dickie Moore. William LeBaron is producer of the musical.

MGM starts two new pictures this week. "Honest Plush Brannon," a new Wallace Beery film with O. O. Dull as producer, and "The Picture of Dorian Gray," drama with George Sanders, Hurd Hatfield and Angela Lansbury in top roles. The latter is to be directed by Al Lewin with Pandro Berman as producer.

Dennis Morgan has been assigned the leading role opposite Ida Lupino in Warners' "The Very Thought of You." This will be the next to go on Jerry Wald's production schedule and will mark the second directorial assignment for Delmer Daves.

William Berke, who directed "The Navy Way," the big-budget William Pine-William Thomas special, was signed to megaphone "Thunderbolt," their next Paramount production. "Thunderbolt" will reunite a winning director-actor combination since Robert Lowery, who scored heavily in the Navy drama, will again take over the stellar spot in the new picture. Heading the cast with Lowery in "Thunderbolt" will be Chester Morris. Filming is scheduled to get under way April 1st.

Wyndham Standing and Tom Drake have been added to the cast of MGM's "Marriage Is a Private Affair," starring Lana Turner with John Hodiak. Robert Z. Leonard is directing and Pandro Berman is producing.

Sonja Henie, ending her ice tour, arrived in Hollywood for talks with William Goetz. She will do a picture for International called "It's a Pleasure." Starting date was set for late April and David Lewis has been assigned as producer.

Cab Calloway, accompanied by his 18-piece band, is in Hollywood for a two-week engagement before the cameras on the set of Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1944." Calloway and his band will be featured in a huge Harlem night club sequence along with the topnotch boogie-woogie pianists, Dorothy Donegan and Gene Rodgers. Calloway's is the second name band to appear in "Sensations." The other: Woody Herman and his orchestra.

Mary Gordon and Frank Shannon have been added to the cast of "Pilebuck," the Terneen production at Columbia, starring Pat O'Brien and Carole Landis. Edward Sutherland is directing.

Producer David Hempstead has signed George Barnes to photograph Ginger Rogers in RKO's "The Gibson Girl," Technicolor production which is scheduled to go before the cameras late this month under the direction of William Cameron Menzies.

Gale Storm will be starred in "The Right to Live," Monogram drama now being prepared by Producer Jeffrey Bernerd. Houston Branch has just completed the screenplay, based on an original story by James Fielding. William Nigh will direct.

Thomas Mitchell has been assigned the role of the Scot doctor in "The Keys of the Kingdom," which is shooting at Fox. Another choice role falls to Edmund Gwenn. Gregory Peck plays the lead part. Forty-five speaking roles will include Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roddy MacDowall, Ruth Nelson, Peggy Ann Garner, Arthur Shields, Dennis Hoey and many more yet to be cast. John Stahl directs. Screenplay is by Joseph Mankiewicz, who is also producing.

Reginald Le Borg was assigned by Associate Producer Will Cowan to direct Universal's "Jungle Woman," starring Acquanetta with Evelyn Ankers and Milburn Stone in the romantic leads. Production is slated to start this week.

Harold Daniels was signed by RKO as dialogue director for "Heavenly Days," forthcoming Fibber McGee and Molly feature. With Robert Fellows producing and Howard Estabrook directing from his own script, picture is slated to go into production this week.

Veronica Lake will co-star with Fred MacMurray in the forthcoming Paramount musical,

Reproduce Residential District

One of the most interesting outdoor sets constructed at MGM studios in years was completed when the last poplar and maple tree was transplanted on Kensington Avenue. With Lot 3 as the site, three blocks of the famous St. Louis residential district of 1903 have been duplicated for scenes in the Judy Garland film, "Meet Me in St. Louis." Approximately 30 three-story houses, complete with large grass lawns, line the swank thoroughfare. Grass and shubbery planted some weeks ago, are now flourishing to lend atmosphere to the scene. "Meet Me in St. Louis" is directed by Vincente Minnelli, produced by Arthur Freed.

Pay Jitterbugs to Cut Rugs

One hundred and sixty 'teen-aged jitterbugs have started work in the three-day military academy ball sequence of Fox's "Sweet and Low Down." The 12- to 16-year-old swing fans will be paid to dance to Benny Goodman's orchestra, to hear "The Pied Pipers," famed radio quartette and Lynn Bari sing. Goodman's band will play Jersey Bounce and introduce two new Mack Gordon and Jimmy Monaco songs—Chug, Chug, Choo-Choo, Chug, and Hey, Bub, Let's Have a Ball—during the three-day sequence. Direction is by Archie Mayo for Producer William LeBaron.

Beebe Celebrates Anniversary

His 30th anniversary in motion pictures will be observed next week by Universal's Ford Beebe, associate producer and director of "The Invisible Man's Revenge." In 1914 Beebe left his post as reporter for the old San Diego Sun, and topical post for the NEA syndicate, to join the staff of the Los Angeles Herald. Instead, Universal, then located on Gower Street in Hollywood, hired him as publicity director. A few years later Beebe became a screenwriter and in 1930, a director. He came to Universal in 1937 and has been at the Valley lot ever since.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

Let's go over to Paramount today to see Betty Hutton and Arturo de Cordova working in "Incendiary Blonde," the fictional story of Texas Guinan's life.

We arrive as they're setting up the cameras for a scene inside a night club; the year is 1923. Over near a service table that's placed against a post, Miss Hutton, de Cordova and Director George Marshall are standing discussing the next scene, for that's where the action takes place.

The club is decorated in beige and coral satin and there's a padded seat, of the combined materials, built against the wall. The windows are covered with beige glass curtains; in the centre of each hangs a huge (wooden) parrot on a stand.

On the service table, in front of the camera, is a shattered ketchup bottle with the ketchup running down the sides. Gangsters have just finished shooting up the place, and we're going to watch them film the resulting excitement.

While they're rehearsing, we steal around behind the camera to get a better view. To do this, we must pass through Miss Hutton's dressing room. Although it is of the 1923 vintage, the furniture is surprisingly modern in design: all white with light blue silk trimmings.

We get a choice spot just as Director Marshall announces a "take," so everyone hushes. Scene starts with the shooting of guns, at which time Miss Hutton and de Cordova drop to the floor behind the post. Simultaneously with their action, her father falls against the service table, and a technician throws water at the splashed ketchup to start it running again.

Just as quiet reigns and Miss Hutton is getting up enough courage to show her face, she hears her father moaning "they got me." She runs towards him to help, only to discover that what he thought was blood was only ketchup. Scene ends with them all having a good laugh over the incident.

Now we make note of what Miss Hutton is wearing. It's a long green velvet, open-front skirt with a light green satin blouse with long sleeves; the left-side of the blouse is embroidered with a large monogram T.G. (Texas Guinan). Her hair is piled high in front and tied with a bow in the back. She's wearing dark stockings with dark green velvet pumps and a gold buckle.

We hang around to meet the stars, and after a short chat, leave.

Until next week.

To Test 'Address Unknown'

Because of unusual dramatic quality in "Address Unknown," Columbia is planning test prereleases in five or six key cities in order to gauge audience reaction before putting it out for national release. The picture, which was produced and directed by William Cameron Menzies, is expected to go before its test audiences late next month. Top spots are played by Paul Lukas, Carl Esmond, Peter Van Eyck, Mady Christians and Morris Carnovsky, and it introduces K. T. Stevens.

Old-Timers in 'Climax'

George Waggner, producer-director, whose option was picked up by Universal this week, has not forgotten the "forgotten stars" of the past during the filming of the Technicolor musical drama, tentatively titled "The Climax," starring Susanna Foster, Turhan Bey and Boris Karloff. Among the screen idols of the past who appear in scenes with Miss Foster: Grace Cunard, Maurice Costello, William Desmond, Stuart Holmes, Eddie Polo, Ann Cornwall and Jack Richardson.

Defer 'Mama's Bank Account'

Film production on "Mama's Bank Account," Kathryn Forbes' best-selling novel, slated to start by the end of February, was indefinitely deferred by RKO with the signing of a deal for the story to be brought to the Broadway stage this spring by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Frank Ross (left) and Mervyn LeRoy discuss the latter's assignment to direct Ross' projected production of "The Robe," Technicolor picturization of the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas which RKO Radio officials expect to become the outstanding attraction in the company's history. Director LeRoy will join Ross upon completion of "30 Seconds Over Tokyo" and his MGM pact.

Production at Republic Going Forward in High Gear

With eight pictures in the cutting room, three shooting and eleven scheduled to start before the end of March, Republic Studios is well launched upon its heaviest production season. Of those now before the cameras, two are in the high-budget class headlining the studio's super deluxe features under the 1944 expansion program.

"Candlelights in Lisbon," second vehicle starring Vera Hruba Ralston, began rolling on January 31, with George Sherman producer-director on the screenplay which is the story of espionage and counter-espionage in that city teeming with the nationals of many countries.

"Man From Brooklyn," million-and-a-quarter-dollar production, is winding up a ninety-day shooting schedule.

Roy Rogers' next picture will get under way this week titled "Yellow Rose of Texas." The story is another of the deluxe musical-features set for the King of the Cowboys under the Republic banner.

Clements Signed by Paramount

As the result of an outstanding performance in the Bing Crosby-Leo McCarey picture, "Going My Way," Stanley Clements, 17-year-old actor, was signed by Paramount to a long-term contract. They plan to co-star him with Alan Ladd and Gail Russell in "Salty O'Rourke." This is the much discussed story by Milton Holmes, author of "Mr. Lucky," which will be one of Paramount's major film undertakings this year. Clements will portray a tough little jockey, Ladd will be the horse race owner for whom he works, and Gail Russell will be the school teacher with whom Clements and Ladd are in love. E. D. Leshin has been assigned to produce "Salty O'Rourke."

PCA to Make 'O'Brien's Navy'

Producers Corporation of America announced the purchase of "O'Brien's Navy," an original comedy based on one of the most amazing episodes of the war, written by Commander Dan Campbell, U.S.N. The screenplay is already in work and the production set as PCA's second United Artists release following "Knickerbocker Holiday." "O'Brien's Navy" will go before the cameras on April 1st. Commander Campbell, whose ship is currently stationed at San Pedro, will also act as technical consultant. It will be a Harry Joe Brown production.

PROGRAM NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

"Girls Town," which will go into work in April. B. G. De Sylva, executive producer, plans to use several other ranking women stars in the production, which has for its locale a defense industry town where the girls outnumber the men a hundred to one. Harry Tugend wrote the screenplay, and Joseph Sistrom will be the associate producer.

▶Will Jason, for past five years director of shorts at MGM, has been signed to long-term contract by Columbia, which gave him his first opportunity to direct features. First assignment will be "Calling All Stars," lavish musical to be produced under the supervision of Irving Briskin. Production will introduce a number of new faces to the screen from radio, stage and night clubs.

▶Akim Tamiroff, whose last appearance on the Universal lot was with Deanna Durbin in "His Butler's Sister," was signed again by Felix Jackson for an important role in Deanna's new picture, "Caroline." He will portray the part of a Russian gold miner who follows Miss Durbin from New York to California. "Caroline" will be filmed in Technicolor and directed by Frank Ryan.

▶Monogram has taken up its options on the services of Johnny Mack Brown and Raymond Hatton to continue in their western series for the company's 1944-45 program. The pair will appear in eight pictures during the year, to be filmed under the supervision of Charles J. Bigelow.

▶Howard Hill, national archery champion who appeared with Errol Flynn in "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and other pictures, has been signed by Clifford Sanforth to star in his series entitled "Son of Robin Hood." Pictures will be based upon the novels of Paul A. Castleton. The first production is scheduled to start in May. No release has been made.

RKO Signs Ethel Barrymore

Ethel Barrymore has been signed by RKO for her first screen appearance in 11 years, to play Cary Grant's mother in the film adaptation of "None But The Lonely Heart." Miss Barrymore will cut short the record-breaking run of her current stage success, "The Corn Is Green," and report to Producer David Hempstead by the end of the month. Clifford Odets, noted playwright who adapted the book to the screen, will make his bow as a film director with this picture, scheduled to go into production late this month.

'Bobby Socks' for Richmond

Ted Richmond, former independent producer, has been signed by Columbia to a term contract as a producer and will work under executive supervision of Irving Briskin. First production assignment for Richmond will be musical entitled "Meet Miss Bobby Socks," which will be just what the title indicates: a travesty on the current frenzy of teen-age youngsters for crooners and dance bands.

COWBOY AND THE SENORITA (Rep.) Western. Principals: Roy Rogers, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Dale Evans, Mary Lee, John Hubbard. Director, Joe Kane. Plot: Two prospectors are accused of kidnapping a young girl when they're found with her bracelet in their possession. They escape and locate the girl who returns with them to help her protect her gold mine. The man engaged to the youngster's cousin is trying to steal the mine from her and that's why she ran away. With the help of the Sons of the Pioneers, the two prospectors catch the crooks and expose the fiance.

SONORA STAGECOACH (Mono.) Western. Principals: Hoot Gibson, Bob Steele, Chief Thundercloud, Rocky Camron, Betty Miles. Director, Robert Tansey. Plot: The Trail Blazers are sent to take a prisoner from a neighboring town to Sonora to stand trial. The men guilty of the crime this man is being held for try to kill him on the way. But the boys make arrangements to catch the real culprits by following the stagecoach. In this way the Trail Blazers get the gang and a confession—and clear an innocent man's name.

KISMET (MGM) Drama. Principals: Ronald Colman, Marlene Dietrich, James Craig, Edward Arnold, Joy Page. Director, William Dieterle. Plot: A magician, beggar and clever rascal in old Bagdad skillfully maneuvers his daughter into marriage with a young prince. He gains an important position in a distant land for himself and wins a gorgeous wife in the bargain. He attains all this through conjuring humorous lies and reckless thievery with the help of two comical stooges.

THE SCARLET CLAW (Univ.) Mystery. Principals: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Paul Cavanaugh, Gertrude Astor. Director, Roy William Neill. Plot: The famous sleuth, vacationing in Canada is called in to help solve several murders believed to have been caused by a legendary monster who is terrorizing the countryside again. While searching for the monster he narrowly escapes death on the fog-shrouded marshes. By working out a clever trap, Holmes captures the beast and surprises everyone when he reveals the true identity of the killer.

MARINE RAIDERS (RKO) Drama. Principals: Pat O'Brien, Robert Ryan, Ruth Hussey, Frank McHugh, Barton MacLane. Director, Harold Schuster. Plot: A Major and his Marine Raiders stop the Japs one of those days on 'Canal. It's a tremendous fight and he ends up with a bomb splinter in his leg. Shipped to Australia he meets and is about to marry a member of the Women's Auxiliary Australian Air Force, when he's shipped home. Here he's put to work training marines through every phase of combat, then back to Australia with the troops. He marries the girl when he gets there, just before he leaves on an "expendable" mission.

LADY IN THE DEATH HOUSE (PRC) Drama. Principals: Jean Parker, Lionel Atwill, Marcia Mae Jones, Douglas Fowley, Robert Middlemas, Joe Devlin. Director, Steve Sekely. Plot: A young scientist takes a job as an executioner because he believes life can be restored after death. In this position he is able to help his fiancee when she is sentenced to die for the killing of a man found dead in her apartment. By locking himself in the room with the panel board of switches he stops her execution until a friend brings in the real killer.

OBSERVATIONS

The industry's participation in the Red Cross drive, which takes place the week of March 23-29, will be conducted on a highly efficient, well-organized basis, judging by the manner and speed with which Joseph Bernhard, Chairman, is setting up the machinery for the event which, it is certain, will have the active and enthusiastic support of theatremen.

The men serving with Bernhard represent the best in talent and energy for the job. They will help immensely. We say they will help, because in the final analysis the success of the drive will be measured by the efforts that the theatremen make in taking up collections in their theatres.

No matter when will be the effective date, nor what the precise amount of the new admission tax, the theatreman can be reasonably sure of this: the increase will be an increase that must be paid at the box-office.

The only sensible thing for the theatreman to do is to scale his admissions to cover the full amount of the new tax. Attempts to absorb any part of the impost (even for purposes of obviating odd-penny scales) ultimately will create a more difficult situation for the theatre owner who tries it than that problem with which many will be faced in getting higher prices now or in the very near future. If it is essential to avoid the odd-penny admission prices, it were better to add odd pennies to the admission than to set the scale on a basis of absorbing a part of the tax. There are many situations where the increase in admission prices, even of a few pennies, will cut into the gross attendance of the theatre. But, apparently, there is no hope of getting a tax differential into any bill to relieve this situation. In the majority of theatres, however, the public is getting much more for its money at the movie shows than at the counters where any other commodity (essential or otherwise) is on sale today. As soon as the amount and effective date of the tax becomes known, the theatreman would do well to start immediately to condition the public to the increased prices. A good advertising and publicity campaign in advance will prove a tremendous factor in gaining acceptance of the new admission scales.

Ed Kuykendall, writing in a bulletin recently issued to MPTOA members, delivers a precisely well-aimed poke at a vulnerable spot in the handling of the decree-revision proposals as drawn up by the distributors. The nature of the proposals, which have been under study by the Department of Justice, remains theoretically unknown to the trade press—the text not having been made available for publication. It has been submitted for consideration to the officials of accredited exhibitor organizations. But since the rank and file of exhibitors are the ones who are most concerned with what they will get in a new decree package; and since, in America, the majority opinion of a large mass of interested plain people historically has proved superior to the opinion of a select few (no matter how sincere and able), valuable time might have been gained and constructive action indicated by allowing the rank and file an opportunity to study and evaluate the proposals in the light of their own practical experience and knowledge of conditions affecting the buying and booking of films.

Maurice Bergman, Universal's Eastern advertising and publicity director, gives us a definition of showmanship which will be oft-repeated.

"Showmanship," Bergman said in an address at the AMPA luncheon in New York Wednesday, is "doing the absurd thing at the logical time."

In the same address, Mr. Bergman pointed out that there is a lack of institutional advertising by theatremen. That's a point on which this page has long been in agreement. It is true that there is not enough of the institutional type of advertising by theatres. But there are many exhibitors who are institutional-advertising-minded and most of them frequently inquire why the industry as a whole is not more institutional-advertising-minded. Some of them point out that the distribution branch of the industry is not institutional-advertising conscious; otherwise, say these showmen, there might be some institutional copy in the consumer advertising displays placed by the distributors in general magazines and newspapers. These showmen claim that even a series of slogans, agreed upon by all distributors and to be used concurrently in all such consumer advertisements would be a help. A series of slogans of the "movies are your best entertainment" type need not take too much space away from the allotment for the illustrations and producer, star, writer, etc., credits, and they could do some good.

RKO Elevates Boasberg To N. Y. District Head

Charles Boasberg, RKO Radio eastern central district manager, and the captain of the 1944 Ned Depinet Drive, has been appointed Metropolitan district manager, it was announced this week by general sales manager Robert Mochrie. Boasberg succeeds Robert Wolff, who will leave shortly for England to assume the post of managing director for RKO Radio in Great Britain.

Mochrie also announced that, in line with the company's policy to make promotions from within the ranks, Phil Hodes, member of the company's New York branch sales staff, has been promoted to branch manager of the same office.

Other promotions announced were B. G. Kranze, Cleveland branch manager, to succeed Boasberg as eastern central district manager. A long time employe of RKO Radio, Kranze was formerly manager of the Albany branch, and before that a salesman in the New York branch. Succeeding Kranze at Cleveland, will be Al Kolitz, former branch manager at Denver, whose successor at Denver was announced last week as Tom Bailey, former salesman in the same office.

Govt. Controls on Film Stock Lifted by June, Says WLB Head

The tight clamp put on film stock by the war is due to be lifted by June and only the ability of manufacturers to produce in sufficient quantity will stand in the way of unhampered use of stock both at the studios and for printing, according to Harold C. Hopper, of the WLB, who spent last week-end in New York discussing the manufacturing situation. Mr. Hopper was certain the Government controls on raw stock would be taken off in two or three months, since military demands have settled to a pace that does not exceed the esimate on which manufacture was based.

Commercial orders, of course, would rise suddenly if the ban is removed, and then the question is, said Mr. Hopper, whether raw stock manufacturers can quicken production to meet the demand.

Raw Stock Production Up 30%

Production of photographic film for military, lend-lease, and civilian purposes for the year 1943 averaged 136,523,250 square feet per quarter, or more than 30 per cent in excess of the figure for 1941, the War Production Board announced Tuesday. The figures cover production by eight leading manufacturers.

Bond Sale Over Top

A bond for each of ten million theatre seats had been sold up to last week, according to reports to the WAC and after consultation with U. S. Treasury officials, Charles P. Skouras, national chairman of the industry's participation in the Fourth War Loan, revealed Wednesday.

The number of seats in the 16,900 theatres in the U. S., Alaska and Hawaii are estimated to total 11,500,000. Thus, with sales to extend to February 29, the industry's drive for a "bond for every seat" is over the top.

Skouras, accompanied by B. V. Sturdivant and A. J. Krappman, national campaign director and assistant national director respectively, left New York for Los Angeles Thursday morning.

Bernhard Launches Red Cross Meetings

"Let's get the ten million dollars for the Red Cross," said Joseph Bernhard at the conclusion of a brief address to New York exhibitors at a breakfast meeting which taxed the capacity of the grand ballroom at the Hotel Astor Thursday morning.

Bernhard, chairman of the industry committee for the Red Cross campaign, was launching the organizational drive which will be carried across the country in a series of exhibitor gatherings in all key cities. In appealing to the theatremen to support the Red Cross campaign Bernhard quoted a motto of the Navy: "The difficult we do immediately, the impossible takes a little longer," and asked that the spirit expressed therein be the guide to efforts which the industry will put forth in raising the minimum $10,000,000 quota.

Speakers who preceded Bernhard were Max A. Cohen and Sam Rinzler.

Included among those on the dais were: Mort Blumenstock, Ben Kalmenson, Harry Kalmine, Francis Harmon, Si Fabian, Sam Dembow, Don Jacocks, Henry Gluckman, Harry Goldberg, Fred Schwartz, Andy Smith, Henderson Van Sourdan and Elliot Lee of the Red Cross. Harry Lowenstein, Grad Sears, James Grainger.

Look for Top Budget British Film—Reisman

British producers are now in an excellent position to compete with American films so far as quality goes because of the present excess profit laws in Britain, declared Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of RKO Radio's foreign department, when he got back last week-end from a trip to London. In quantity production the English are not so fortunate, said Reisman, because they lack studio space.

The British scale of taxation calls for a 100 per cent tax on profits above the 1936 average, with the alternate privilege of putting the money back into the business. Since distributors in Britain have been making profits about on a par with American producers during the past year, it follows there is a sizable money backlog that can be used for top budget pictures. With the restriction on studio space this means higher budgets for features, Mr. Reisman pointed out.

The intimation was that this situation gives the English an opportunity to compete with U. S. film producers, as seen in the recent moves of J. Arthur Rank to enter the American field both in production and distribution. Mr. Reisman paid Rank a compliment by saying he was sincere in his efforts to build up the British film industry.

Fromkess Setting Up New PRC Program

Leon Fromkess, head of production for PRC Pictures, left Wednesday for the coast, following a series of meetings with franchise holders in New York, to outline plans for the 1944-45 program. The addition of Constance Bennett productions will add two more features to the set-up, with Miss Bennett producing and starring. The star—and now producer—said during the week that she was working on a story original (not written by her) and had several others lined up. She expects to go into active production late in the spring.

Of the regular PRC schedule, Fromkess announced that the company would make a minimum of 24 features and 16 westerns, which is the same as for the 1943-44 program. Budgets will be increased this year, with single film outlays going as high as $300,000, Mr. Fromkess said. There will be four musicals, the first of which, "Dixie Steamboat," has already been completed. This film features Frances Langford and Guy Kibbee.

Equipment difficulties are making it hard for PRC to contract for Technicolor productions, although the studio hopes to have several pictures in this process. However, Fromkess has been investigating other processes with, thus far, no definite results. A national sales meeting has been called to take place in April.

John Huston Cited For War Film Work

Captain John Huston, Warner Bros. director now in service, has been cited by the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce "for distinguished accomplishment in filming our troops in action in the Aleutians." Presentation of a gold scroll and key in recognition of his service will be made by Colonel Frank Capra on the "Freedom of Opportunity" program over Mutual Network next Saturday (26th), with Walter Huston accepting the presentation on behalf of his son.

MPTOA Joins Move For Tax Front Unity

The exhibitor move to erect a solid front against discriminatory taxation received a major impetus this week when sixteen of the eighteen MPTOA units and ten unattached organizations joined Allied and other exhibitor units in setting up an advisory group to act for virtually the entire exhibitor personnel of the country. The cooperative action grew out of the recent fight in Congress to lower the then-proposed 30 per cent admission tax, a levy which it was declared by Ed Kuykendall of MPTOA, Allied's Abram F. Myers and heads of state exhibitor organizations agitated for unification of effort so that theatre men would not be caught unaware when some new tax situation loomed up in Congress.

The result of MPTOA's participation was to make the line-up truly representative of theatre men the country over as worked out in the advisory group. This committee will be known as the Round Table Conference of Exhibitor Organizations on Taxation. As set up thus far there will be three representatives from MPTOA, three from Allied, three to five from unattached units, and three from affiliated circuits.

The Round Table Conference will not have power to act in an executive capacity, but will function purely from an advisory standpoint. The first meeting is expected to be held within two or three weeks.

Canadian Theatre Men Draw Up 'Inside Industry' Trade Pact

Boards of regulation within the industry to determine trade practices and "conciliate" individual cases comprise the method by which Canadian film men hope to make Governmental control unnecessary in the Dominion, it was revealed this week as the result of the all-trade meeting held at Toronto. According to the plan as developed, conciliation boards will be created for each distributing zone, with a central appeal board operating in Toronto. Both exhibitors and distributors will accede to the decisions made by this judicial array, with a united front as the ultimate aim.

The plan will now be submitted to the major distributing companies for comment and further suggestions. The meeting was made up not only of independent exhibitors, but also chain and exchange representatives. All were enthusiastic in giving support to the united front idea.

Kaufman Found Penniless; Fine By Government Uncollectable

After several examinations of the financial status of Louis Kaufman, former business agent for the Newark Operators Local 24 who has been convicted of participating in a conspiracy to extort more than $1,000,000 from the film industry, Assistant U. S. Attorney Martin Klein this week announced that his investigation showed Kaufman to be virtually penniless and that therefore the Government may not be able to collect the $10,000 fine levied on him. The convicted man, now out on bail, will appear shortly at the New York Federal Court building to sign a waiver to the effect that he is destitute. Kaufman also faces a seven-year term.

Hoffberg Gets 'Norway Replies'

"Norway Replies," official report of Norway's activities in the war, which had its premiere Friday at the Stanley Theatre, New York, will be distributed by Hoffberg Productions, it was announced this week by the Royal Norwegian Information Service.

Kuykendall Sees 'Half-Way' Measures Hurting New Decree

Compromise measures which carry over from the old decree into the newly proposed setup and the secrecy under which text of the distributor-proposed formula was withheld from the trade press were hit in a bulletin issued last week-end by Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA.

There is a growing conviction among independent exhibitors that the best thing the Department of Justice can do will be to throw both the consent decree and the anti-trust suit out the window and "start in all over again with a more intelligent attempt to correct the real abuses and unfair competitive practices in a more direct and practical way," Kuykendall declares.

The crux of the matter, the MPTOA head claims, lies in the retention of small block releases in the face of the proposal by distributors to allow cancellation privileges which exhibitors have long wanted. Twenty per cent cancellation for small theatres on product as it is released would obviate the arguments against block booking by the season—or in other words, wholesale selling.

Sees End to Block Booking

"If this new option to cancel pictures as released is honestly carried out," says Kuykendall, "it completely destroys so-called compulsory block booking once and for all. In itself this is a long step forward, a step, I might add, which several years ago would have saved the industry millions of dollars of wasted money squandered on the endless fights against block booking legislation and regulation, with all the ill will and bad publicity for the industry it generated.

"But to appease the reckless and irresponsible agitators against 'blind selling' . . . the requirement that each picture must be trade shown before it can be licensed for exhibition anywhere is retained."

This provision will force distributors to continue selling in small blocks, even if they wish otherwise, Kuykendall points out. The small block is something that has been added, for the industry was built up through the system of seasonal selling—wholesale at wholesale prices. Then, says the MPTOA chief, the business had stability and sound business practice.

The absurdity of the present half-and-half measure lies in the fact that "the new unconditional option to cancel 20 per cent of the pictures as they become available for exhibition completely destroys the only objections ever raised against so-called blind selling."

Mr. Kuykendall warned exhibitors that they must consider the new terms carefully at this time because when—or if—a decree is agreed to they will have to live under it for ten years. He also said the MPTOA stand on changes was substantially the same as that of other exhibitor organizations so that cooperation among all exhibitors could be produced if the theatre men can keep together.

The question of whether any kind of decree can do any good is brought up by the MPTOA president as a last possibility in case agreement is impossible. Rather than operate under conditions as they have been, he said many exhibitors are coming to the conclusion that this method of dealing with business problems is inherently wrong and simply brings the industry nearer to eventual regulation by a Governmental commission.

Screen Shows How

In a speech on the U. S. Senate floor recently Sen. Sheridan Downey of California mentioned the Walter Wanger-Universal film, "Gung Ho" as typifying the spirit that makes democracy work, at the same time paying high tribute to the picture.

"Recently I had an opportunity to view this film," said Sen. Downey, "and to me it brought a profound realization of the dangers and sacrifices of our fighting men and a renewed determination that we in the United States should subjugate our own passions, prejudices, and wants to a more unified national effort to support the members of the armed forces."

Conn. MPTO Wants Clarity

Following the distribution of MPTOA president Kuykendall's bulletin on the provisions of the major company proposals for a new consent decree, the Connecticut MPTO this week called for a standard form of contract that would be written in simple terms and be clearly defined.

The demand came after a meeting at which the distributor proposals were studied in connection with Kuykendall's report. Executive secretary Herman G. Levy said his organization was generally opposed to a new decree, but if it had to be, there were several contract gremlins that should be eliminated, such as the "lock-out" and "show case" exceptions to the rule against circuit expansion. The Connecticut unit was also opposed to the ten-year agreement and favored elimination of trade-shows. In general Levy declared they had found the cancellation provision "vaguely phrased" and wanted a clearer stand on whether exhibitors were to be granted unrestricted rights in this matter.

Mary Pickford Drops Out of Bidding for 'Junior Miss'

The contemplated $355,000 purchase by Mary Pickford of screen rights to the stage hit, "Junior Miss," came to a sudden halt last week-end when the United Artists partner completely withdrew her offer after months of negotiation. Miss Pickford's decision, it was announced by United Artists, "was caused by the nature of the restrictions and limitations placed on the grant of motion picture rights to her."

Miss Pickford originally made her offer last summer, when it was announced that she had proferred $355,000, plus a percentage of the net, for complete motion picture control of "Junior Miss," which is a comedy of adolescent life. When the deal reached the contract stage Miss Pickford decided she would not receive under the terms, the rights for which she had made the offer.

MGM Conference March 11-15

A conference of division, district and branch managers has been called by MGM for March 11-15 at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. Not only distribution problems will be discussed, but also the company's responsibility to the Government in war activities. This phase of the meeting will have equal importance to direct film matters.

Colored Group Praises Columbia

The Board of Directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People passed a resolution at a recent monthly meeting commending Columbia Pictures Corporation for the role.

Try One-Price Policy

New Haven first-run theatres have adopted a one-price-all-over-the-house policy to promote greater efficiency by reduced staffs and also to gain better control over disturbing elements in the audiences. In the process the box-office scales have been increased. Prices now stand at 40 cents for matinees and 50 cents for evenings, both orchestra and balcony.

Omaha Variety Club Sponsors Benefit

To raise funds for the Children's Memorial hospital, to be built in Omaha, the film industry of Nebraska and western Iowa will stage a benefit program in many theatres of the area on Tuesday, April 11, it was announced Sunday by E. I. Rubin chief barker of the Omaha Variety club which is sponsoring the event.

"We expect this to be the biggest benefit affair of its kind ever conducted in this country, our goal is $50,000," Rubin said.

The film industry is asking all theatres in the Omaha film area to present matinees for school children on that afternoon and turn over all proceeds to the hospital. Many will give two shows during the afternoon. Films will be furnished the theatres free.

In Omaha in addition to the matinee, the Variety club plans to sponsor a film premiere, in the evening, with hospital memberships the price of admission.

General chairman of the event will be M. G. Rogers of the Film Row garage. Committee chairmen include: Walter Green, tickets; Sam Epstein, Greater Omaha theatres; Isadore Sokolof, film bookings; Harold Johnson, Nebraska Public schools; Nebraska parochial schools, Joseph Scott; Harry Lefkowitz, Iowa public schools; Frank Hannon, Iowa parochial schools; John Kemptgen, Nebraska theatres; Jesse McBride, Iowa theatres; Jack Conor, publicity; John Gillin, radio promotion; Hank McGrath, advertising; Gene Blazer, legal; D. V. McLucas, Central States and Tri-States and Griffith theatres; Meyer Stern, finance.

Hospital trustees warmly praised the Variety club plan, including A. A. Lowman, president of the board, who said, "This is one of the finest things yet conceived for the hospital. When Variety club gave the hospital $500 a few weeks ago it promised that it would do something bigger in the future, but this plan surpasses our expectations."

Jewish Women Volunteers Aid Weekly Brownville Bond Rallies

With the cooperation of the American Jewish Women's Volunteers, Wilfred Simon, manager of Loew's Palace Theatre, is holding a weekly series of rallies for the Fourth War Loan drive at the Parkway and Hopkinsville Theatres, Brownsville, two leading Jewish theatres.

To date, the Palace has sold 658 individual bonds with a cash total of $69,725. Mrs. Claire Herzog of the American Jewish Women's Volunteers assists in supervising the rallies and also makes the appeal to the audience from the stage.

Gets B'nai B'rith Aid

Although actual sales were not reported, a successful war bond premiere was held recently at the Strand Theatre, Akron, Ohio. The Akron B'nai B'rith sold the bonds for every one of the 1156 seats in the theatre.

Bergman Sees Lack Of Goodwill Ads

Exhibitors must begin to understand that selling screen entertainment is the new type of showmanship, that the old kind of ballyhoo has given way to merchandising and advertising, declared Maurice Bergman, Universal eastern advertising and publicity director, on Wednesday to members of the AMPA and their guests at a luncheon at the Hotel Edison. Bergman made the point that the exhibitor must condition his community to the events that take place in his theatre and the patrons should be grateful that they can attend the theatre in a normal manner.

"These standards represent the new era in showmanship," said Bergman, "which must essentially keep pace with the showmanship used by commercial advertisers. This means that the institution of the motion picture is just as important to sell as the attraction.

"What has happened to the institutional ad in this business?", Bergman asked—"those ads which exhibitors used to proudly announce a succession of hits? What has happened to that old spirit that used to tell the public that the movies are the best fun for the least money?

"Why, with business so good, should not the moving picture theatre institutionalize itself? Why wait until the next depression?

"I say to every exhibitor that they should not worry so much about spending a few dollars more for advertising. Why shouldn't advertising be as important as the subject of film rental? You can always get an adjustment on a bad film buy. It's not so easy to get one on bad advertising."

Canadian Admissions Increase 13 Per Cent Over 1943 Figures

Canadians in 1943 supported their motion picture theatres to the tune of 183,500,000 admissions, an increase of 13 per cent over 1942, according to figures released this week by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa. Net box-office receipts after taxes reached a total of $45,461,097, which represents an increase of 12.3 per cent over the preceding year. Taxes, Federal and provincial, came to $11,713,165.

All provinces showed increases in number of admissions and in receipts, the biggest advances appearing in the cities of Halifax, Edmonton, Calgary, and Vancouver. Average per capita outlay for film amusement during the year was $5.01. Of the provinces, British Columbia spent $7.52 per person, Ontario $6.53, Nova Scotia $5.89, Manitoba $4.39, Alberta $4.22, Quebec $3.81, New Brunswick $3.75, Saskatchewan $2.56, and Prince Edward Island $2.52.

80 Per Cent of Monogram's Current Schedule Completed

Twenty of the 26 features listed for release on the Monogram program for the 1943-44 season have been completed, Trem Carr, executive director in charge of production, declared in Hollywood last weekend. This approximates about 80 per cent of the program.

"Never before in the history of Monogram," said Carr, "have we recorded such a high percentage of completions so early in the season, and this is true in spite of the fact that our current schedule is more ambitious in every respect than ever before.

Peggy Bleakley Story Editor

Peggy Bleakley, for the past six months assistant to Joseph Shea, eastern publicity director for William Cagney Productions, has been advanced to the post of Story Editor in the New York office.

FILM TRAVEL-LOG

The producing pair, William Pine and William Thomas, arrived in New York from Hollywood this week to confer with Paramount executives.

Jack Bloom, assistant to L. J. Schlaifer, central sales manager, returned to the 20th-Fox home office this week after six weeks in Florida recovering from an appendectomy.

Phyllis Brooks took a short run down to Virginia and got back to New York in time for the "Lady in the Dark" premiere.

Stanley Shuford, Paramount advertising manager, has journeyed to the Hollywood studio for a three-week stay.

In New York from Hollywood is Lester Cowan, United Artists producer, who is completing his staff.

John J. Maloney, MGM central division manager, left New York for home Wednesday. Home is Pittsburgh.

MGM's eastern division manager, Ted O'Shea, started Thursday on a tour of the southern exchanges.

Skouras, Gamble Praise Industry Bond Efforts

Unqualified praise of the motion picture industry for its part in the Fourth War Loan campaign was given by Charles P. Skouras, National Chairman of the industry's Fourth War Loan campaign committee, and Theodore R. Gamble, Chairman of the War Finance Division of the U. S. Treasury, at a dinner attended by more than 60 film industry leaders in New York Monday.

Skouras paid special tribute to Ned E. Depinet, chairman of the distribution group.

In addition to Messrs. Skouras, Gamble and Depinet those attending were: F. H. Ricketson, Jr., B. V. Sturdivant, William F. Rodgers, Gradwell Sears, Neil Agnew, William F. Scully, W. C. Michel, Ben Kalmenson, Dan Michalove, Abe Montague, Leo McCarthy, Ed Morey, Charles Reagan, A. W. Krappman, Bernie Hynes, Hal Horne, Fred Stein, Charles Schlaifer, Williard Keith, F. Peskay, Seymour Peiser and Sam Shain.

Post-war Bonanza for U. S. Films Abroad, Says Johnston

W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, who has been making a tour of eastern exchanges, stopped long enough in New York last week to declare to the press that the end of the war would find the United States established more securely than ever as the leading motion picture market of the world.

"Though film production is being carried on to a limited degree in some of the European countries," said Johnston, "it is a fact that the making of films in most parts of the world has come to a virtual standstill. On the other hand, American studios are operating at full capacity.

"The question of the European market will occupy an important place in our plans. Whenever the cessation of hostilities on the Continent may come, there will ensue an unprecedented demand for motion pictures."

Bernhard Names Executive Staff for Red Cross Drive

Nationwide Series of Meets Arranged; Public Relations Setup is Also Announced

Complete executive staff which will work under Joseph Bernhard, National Chairman of the Motion Picture Theatres Division of the 1944 Red Cross drive, was announced this week by Bernhard.

Harry Brandt, president of Brandt Theatres, will serve as field director; Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures, is distributor chairman, and Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service, has been named corporate gifts chairman.

Members of Bernhard's staff previously announced are Harry Goldberg, campaign manager, and Charles A. Smakwitz, publicity director.

Leon J. Bamberger, promotion manager for RKO Radio Pictures, will be assistant to Depinet in the Distributors' Division, which will embrace the following district chairmen:

Metropolitan District—New York, Ralph Pielow, B. Abner and Jack Bowen.

Northeastern District—Buffalo, M. A. Brown; Boston, William Erbb and A. M. Kane; New Haven, Ed W. Ruff; Albany, C. G. Eastman.

Eastern District—Charles Zagrans and R. J. Polliard, Philadelphia; H. H. Greenblatt, Pittsburgh; J. B. Brecheen, Washington.

Eastern Central District—Harris Dudelson, Cincinnati; Maury Orr, Cleveland; M. Dudelson and Jack Goldhar, Detroit.

Southeastern District—Fred R. Dodson and Paul Wilson, Atlanta; John E. Holston, Charlotte; E. V. Landaiche, New Orleans.

Southwestern District—J. B. Underwood, Dallas; J. J. Rogers, Memphis; J. A. Gibbs, Oklahoma City.

Midwestern District—W. E. Banford and Sam Shirley, Chicago; W. H. Workman, Minneapolis; H. J. Shumow, Milwaukee.

Indiana-Kentucky District—William Marriott, Indianapolis.

Prairie District—Harry Hynes, St. Louis; Jack Langan and J. E. Garrison, Kansas City; Lou Levy, Des Moines; M. B. Johnson, Omaha.

Rocky Mountain District—Tom Bailey and Len Gruenberg, Denver; C. Davison, Salt Lake City.

West Coast District—Vete Stewart, Seattle; Al Oxteby, Portland; Al Shmitken, San Francisco; Henry Herbel and Fred Greenberg, Los Angeles.

Also appointed this week by Bernhard was a national public relations setup, with a chairman in every exchange center, who will work with exhibitor chairmen in conducting the Motion Picture Theatres' Red Cross Drive. With Smakwitz as publicity director working out of New York, the following city representatives were named:

Atlanta—Harold Martin. Boston—Harry Browning. Buffalo—Charles B. Taylor. Charlotte—Roy L. Smart. Chicago—W. K. Hollander. Cincinnati—E. V. Dinerman. Cleveland—Ed J. Fisher. Dallas—Frank Starz. Denver—Harold Rice. Des Moines—Dale McFarland. Detroit—Alice Gorham. Indianapolis—William Elder. Kansas City—Jerry Zigmond. Los Angeles—Thornton Sargent. Memphis—Maurice Druker. Milwaukee—Don Damien. Minneapolis—Charles Winchell. New Haven—Lou Brown. New Orleans—Maurice Barr. New York—Harry Mandel. Oklahoma City—Robert Busch. Omaha—Ted Emerson. Philadelphia—James Ashcraft. Pittsburgh—James Totman. Portland, Ore. —M. M. Mesher. St. Louis—J. L. Kaufman. Salt Lake City—Helen Garrity. San Francisco—Phil Phillips. Seattle—Vic Gauntlet. Washington—Frank LaFalce. Albany will be handled by Smakwitz' office for that area.

A series of nationwide Red Cross meetings for exhibitors, to be held in 31 exchange centers and designed to cover every part of the country, has been set for the two weeks starting February 28, Bernhard announced.

Among prominent industry executives who have volunteered their services as speakers at these meetings, and who will start out next weekend to tour the exchange centers, are Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager for Warner Bros.; Sam Dembow, Paramount Theatres executive; A. W. Smith, Jr., Eastern division manager, 20th Century-Fox; Si Fabian of Fabian Theatres; Edward L. Alperson, RKO Theatres executive; Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president of United Artists; Francis S. Harmon, executive chairman, War Activities Committee; Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures; Ben Shlyen, publisher of Boxoffice; Harry Brandt, president of Brandt Theatres; Martin G. Smith, president of both the national and Ohio Allied exhibitors association, and Harry M. Kalmine, assistant general manager of Warner Theatres.

At a meeting held Wednesday in Bernhard's offices, these executives were grouped in four

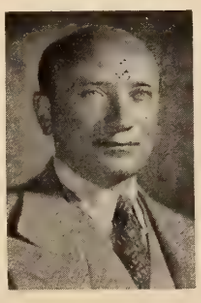
Praises Red Cross Motion Picture Service

Praise for the Red Cross Hospital Motion Picture Service overseas which, "next to a letter from home there was no better morale builder . . . ," was expressed in a letter received recently by Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee, originally written by Capt. Hampton W. Howard, formerly with the Red Cross and more latterly overseas for more than eight months with the U. S. Army, and forwarded to Harmon by Don C. Smith, deputy administrator.

Wrote Capt. Howard: "I feel you will be interested to get a first-hand reaction to the benefits of the 16mm movie programs shown under the auspices of the Red Cross in Army hospitals overseas. Little did I think when I had the privilege of setting-up the Red Cross Hospital Motion Picture Service that I myself would be a grateful recipient of its benefits.

"The Army Red Cross is now showing the latest releases of Hollywood's selected pictures. These pictures, the gift of the American Motion Picture Industry, are shown not only in the recreation halls to ambulatory patients but are also shown in the wards to those whose wounds or sickness necessitate their being bed-ridden, and it means more to these boys than I can describe.



"As a hospitalized patient in Army hospitals in Iran, Egypt, and later in South America, I not only personally enjoyed the pleasure of seeing movies brought to the patients through Red Cross but had the double enjoyment of seeing first-hand just how much relaxation an hour and a half's film visit to America and American scenes meant to all of us overseas. I can truthfully say that next to a letter from home there was no better morale builder than those movies, and I do not need to tell you how much the spirits of these sick and wounded men has to do with the speed of their recovery. I am proud that I had the opportunity of having a small part in the origination of this feature of Red Cross service, for movie nights, generally three a week, were the one thing to which we all looked forward.

"So on behalf of myself and the other war casualties whose period of hospitalization was greatly lightened through the medium of your movies, thanks to the American Red Cross and through them to the American Motion Picture Industry whose generosity in donating these up-to-the-minute Hollywood productions has made your movie programs overseas possible."

The Box Office Slant

Whispering Footsteps

Republic Mystery 58 mins.

(Prod. No. 309, Nat'l Release, Dec. 30th/43)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Screams, chills and thrills will entertain the whodunit fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good companion feature for a light comedy or musical.

Cast: John Hubbard, Rita Quigley, Joan Blair, Charles Halton, Cy Kendall, Juanita Quigley, Mary Gordon, Billy Benedict, Matt McHugh, Marie Blake. Credits: Directed by Howard Bretherton. Original story by Gertrude Walker. Screenplay by Gertrude Walker and Dane Lussier. Director of Photography, Jack Marta. Associate Producer, George Blair.

Plot: A young bank clerk in a small town is suspected of murder because his description fits the guilty man and he happens to have been in the locale at the time. The case against him grows to ugly proportions after four young girls have been found murdered. However, when the real murderer is finally found and confesses, the bank clerk gets the courage to leave the small town and make something of himself.

Comment: A standard mystery that will be enjoyed by the armchair detectives, especially the less discriminating fans who won't object to the case built against the hero—which is so strong that you feel certain he must be innocent. It should serve its purpose as a companion feature to a light comedy or musical. John Hubbard, in the role of the suspected man who is the target of suspicion because of the efforts of his friends to prove him innocent, handles his role capably, and he is given good support by Rita Quigley, Mary Gordon, Marie Blake and Matt McHugh, all members of his boarding house, and Cy Kendall as a police inspector. The direction of Howard Bretherton has interspersed enough comedy with the mysterious happenings to make the picture an enjoyable bit of entertainment. Sell as other mysteries, tying up your exploitation of a "whispering campaign" with the title.

The Purple Heart

20th Century-Fox Tragedy 99 mins.

(Nat'l Release, March)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) While grimly realistic, the picture will leave patrons with a greater sense of responsibility toward our forces and an uplifting determination to do all they can to help.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Following hard on the revelation of Japanese atrocities, a sensational exploitation campaign will put this film in the big grosses.

Cast: Dana Andrews, Richard Conte, Farley Granger, Kevin O'Shea, Donald Barry, Sam Levene, Charles Russell, John Craven, Trudy Marshall, Tala Birell, Richard Loo, Peter Chong, Gregory Gaye, Torben Meyer, Kurt Katch, Nester Paiva, H. T. Tsiang, Benson Fong, Allen Jung, Paul Fung, Key Chang. Credits: Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Directed by Lewis Milestone. Screenplay by Jerome Cady from a story by Melville Crossman. Photography by Arthur Miller. Technical advisor, Otto Tolischus.

Plot: The whole story concerns the trial in a Japanese court of eight American aviators who were grounded after the Tokyo bombing. A feud between a Jap army general and an admiral rests on getting information from the prisoners on where the planes came from—whether from a land base or from a flat-top. The captain, Dana Andrews, will not tell, and then one by one the others are called before the general to undergo torture. None will tell. Then the general changes his tactics and promises treatment as legitimate prisoners of war if the men will reveal the high American officials behind the attack for future reference if Japan wins the war. This is tempting and the men hold a secret ballot with the understanding that if even one man votes to give this information they will go through with it. When the high court official counts the votes there is still no one ready to comply, despite horrible wounds and extreme pain. The court then sentences them to be executed. The men march back to their cells with strong steps and heads held high.

Comment: This is strong medicine, and it is likely that every American should see the picture, for it points a lesson to the laggards who run from every realistic facet of war. Perhaps the most outstanding fact about the film is its dogged honesty of purpose. The story is grim, even depressing, and no attempt has been made to lighten the action to the detriment of realism. There is not one cheap scene in the whole 99 minutes. This calls for hats off to Producer Zanuck and Director Milestone. They carry the story right down to the logical ending with no tricks to mar the true movement of the tragedy. The job of the exhibitor is to tie the picture into recent revelations of Japanese atrocities, featuring the sensational nature of the subject matter and the fact that it is the first screen story to come to the screen where the locale is inside Japan itself—Tokyo, to be exact. You can safely claim authenticity for the Jap court procedure and their way of doing things in general, for Zanuck had as technical advisor, Otto Tolischus, newspaper correspondent who covered Japan until he was expelled when the war began. The public still knows little about the Japs, and its growing curiosity about Nipponese customs and fanatical beliefs (and how they have been developed to cruel ends) should be taken advantage of to the utmost. The picture engenders a patriotic feeling in your patrons that makes them want to do something to help. Everybody OUGHT to see "The Purple Heart," and in that sentence you have the keynote.

Monogram Drama 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Kid drama that the family will enjoy.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good second feature.

Plot: Charged with manslaughter, a gambler adopts a newsboy on the advice of his press agent. Then the agent and the gambler's girl friend double-cross him. Sought by the police, he and the newsboy hide out in a mountain resort owned by a young lady. When the police trace him, she promises to wait until he returns.

Comment: This a program offering of the kind that people enjoy as the second feature. It is particularly good for the family trade because its about a waif and his questionable benefactor. Rick Vallin does very well in the role of the gambler whom the youngster straightens out, while Bobby Larson does a standout job with his role of the newsboy. Good performances are turned in by Jack LaRue, as a press agent, Mary Gordon as a housekeeper and Veda Ann Borg and Wanda McKay as the two women in the gambler's life. A well-written screenplay has been turned into a well-presented picture by the capable direction of Lambert Hillyer and the production handling of John T. Coyle. Sell through Boys Clubs and charitable organizations who take care of homeless children.

Million-Dollar Kid

Monogram Comedy-Drama 65 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 28th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Should entertain all the "East End Kids" fans and might be enjoyed by others.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good offering in the series.

Cast: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, Billy Benedict, Louise Currie, Noah Beery, Sr., Iris Adrian, Herbert Heyes, Robert Greig, Johnny Duncan, Stanley Brown, Patsy Moran, Mary Gordon, Al Stone, Dave Durand, Bud Gorman, Jimmy Strand, Pat Costello. Credits: Directed by Wallace Fox. Story and screenplay by Frank H. Young. Director of Photography, Marcel Le Picard. Associate Producer, Barney Sarecky. Produced by Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz.

Plot: The son of a millionaire becomes a member of a gang of muggers, for the thrill he gets out of it. The East Side Kids, who have become acquainted with the father when they save him from these ruffians, try to help straighten the son out. It is only after they break the news of his older brother's death in action, that the Kids are able to bring him around.

Comment: In this latest picture the East Side Kids move into society to help a wealthy family solve their problems. Among their good deeds, they bring in two of their mothers to help out in a servant shortage, thus modernizing the story. To the theatregoers who like this series, here's another offering that will amuse them, for there's lots of action and much doing all the time. The picture has a number of laughs and there are many spots in which the audience laughter drowns out the dialogue, but this is taken care of by their mugging and facial expressions, which is just as much a part of the story as the actual dialogue. Even the older members of the family, who might have objected to their roughness and toughness, should find entertainment in this one. Leo Gorcey the president and head of the gang, is very much at home in his role. Strong characteristic support is given him by Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell and Billy Benedict, and a new member, Al Stone, adds some dopey comedy to the proceedings. Johnny Duncan in the title role and Herbert Heyes and Louise Currie, as his father and sister, handle their roles capably. Wallace Fox's direction keeps the action and the boys' gags going at a pace that will satisfy their established following. To Katzman-Dietz goes credit for an uplift job on the type of story the Kids usually have had. Many of the scenes take place in a Gym, so arrange tie-ups with sporting goods and department stores and also cooperative ads with local Gyms and Clubs. Heralds printed in money form could be distributed.

You Can't Ration Love

Paramount Musical 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Jolly topical musical comedy campus story. Will satisfy masses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good juvenile bait. Perfect companionpiece for heavy drama in the dualers.

Cast: Betty Rhodes, Johnnie Johnston, Bill Edwards, Marjorie Weaver, Johnnie "Scat" Davis, Mabel Paige, Jean Wallace, Roland Dupree, Christine Forsythe and D'Artega and his 20-girl orchestra. Credits: Produced by Walter MacEwen. Directed by Lester Fuller. Screenplay by Val Burton and Hal Fimberg. Story by Muriel Roy Bolton. Photographic direction by Stuart Thompson.

Plot: Adams College is co-educational and the girls find themselves short of boy friends due to war-time shortages. In a practical effort to solve the problem, the young men of the campus are rationed on a point basis. Rationing fails to solve the rivalry problem for the football hero, and the havoc which results almost breaks up the varsity show.

Comment: Paramount has two definite comers in Betty Rhodes and Johnnie Johnston, who turn in bang-up performances in this film and show promise of much greater things, given the opportunity. While the picture falls short of being a big musical capable of filling "A" booking time, due to the lack of established name stars, it nevertheless contains that happy quality of being a well-nigh perfect audience picture. If you can get patrons in to see it, they will praise it to their friends. The timely theme which satirizes the ration system on a jitterbug campus basis should help considerably in providing selling angles. We would rate this a "sleeper" which calls for special handling. The song numbers are good. Johnnie sings with a Crosby manner which is not an imitation and Betty Rhodes supplies most pleasing vocal as well as histrionic support. It is worth mentioning that the comedy supplied by Marie Wilson and Johnnie "Scat" Davis, working as a team, is natural, in good taste and an asset to the picture's appeal. The D'Artega All-Girl Orchestra fits into the picture in a pleasing and practical way. The organization is both comely and clever with their principal number based on famous band imitations. The tunes offered in the piece are Ooh-Ah-Oh, How Did It Happen, Love Is This, Look What You Did to Me, Nothing Can Replace a Man, by Lester Lee and Jerry Seelen, and the old sure-fire melody, Louise. Director Lester Fuller is to be complimented on the manner in which he has knit the entertainment elements into a completely pleasing production for the masses. Get an opening on this film and we predict you will garner some better-than-average grosses.

The Navy Way

Paramount Drama 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Good all-family entertainment. Not a shot is fired, this is not a war picture.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: For the top half of a bill in most situations. With title and strong exploitation, picture should pay off.

Cast: Robert Lowery, Jean Parker, Bill Henry, Roscoe Karns, Sharon Douglas, Robert Armstrong, Richard Powers, Larry Nunn, Mary Treen. Credits: Directed by William Berke. Original screenplay by Maxwell Shane. Director of photography, Fred Jackman. Produced by William Pine and William Thomas.

Plot: This story is laid against the panorama of the world's most magnificent Naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill. Each in his own way, a group of recruits in boot camp learns the spirit of the Navy, while the two leads find romance with a charming WAVE.

Comment: Starting with a title that is box-office, Pine-Thomas have put together a formula picture that has quite a few honey touches that get down into an audience. Names are sufficient to back the title and the film is good for the top half of a bill in most situations. The work of Robert Lowery, who has the lead role, is outstanding. The story is regulation, with a touch of pathos as leavening. A couple of songs by a choir are worked in neatly. Production by William Pine and William Thomas is well wrought and authenticity of settings bespeak the cooperation of the Navy. The best sales point for the picture is the title. It suggests much and promises more. Most people, though they believe they know the Navy Way, will want to see what it is. Arrange to get the cooperation of Naval Recruiting Stations and other Naval Organizations.

Hour Before The Dawn

Paramount Drama 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Gripping war story with competent cast concentrating on out-of-the-ordinary spy plot.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for sensationalized selling, playing up strong cast and story authorship. Should do business.

Cast: Franchot Tone, Veronica Lake, Binnie Barnes, John Sutton, Henry Stephenson, Philip Merivale, Leslie Dennison, Nils Asther, David Leland. Credits: Produced by William Dozier. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Screenplay by Michael Hogan. Adaptation by Lester Samuels from a novel by W. Somerset Maugham. Photographic direction by John Seitz.

Plot: An Austrian girl, Veronica Lake, marries the son of an influential British official. During the war, the husband becomes a conscientious objector and the wife swayed by her sympathies, becomes a Nazi spy. Her intrigue leads to the destruction of an English airfield and her husband, outraged upon learning of his wife's duplicity, kills her and joins the R. A. F.

Comment: A deftly handled, superbly mounted, and faithfully portrayed drama which tells a very unusual war story—one that will stir the emotions of all who witness it. Director Frank Tuttle has added to his already impressive array of laurels by bringing to the screen a vivid portrayal of British aristocracy under the impact of war. The performances of the entire cast rate superlatives. Veronica Lake gives a remarkable sincerity to her role as the Austrian refugee, faithful to Hitler, living among, and even marrying Franchot Tone, scholar, teacher, conscientious objector and son of a British family of position, in order to carry out her nefarious task of charting the way for Nazi fliers so that they may destroy a secret airfield. Tone delivers a convincing portrayal, carrying a difficult role with integrity. The other members of the cast are equally good and equally well chosen for their parts. Veronica Lake's mastery of Austrian dialect will be an eye-opener for her fans. The picture, in dealing with the conscientious objector theme, neither justifies nor offends on the controversial aspects of the topic. It is a war picture that avoids the fighting, killing material to which some people have an aversion. It involves two bombings, but these do not convey terror to an audience. We believe this film will definitely please the ladies as much as it will be enjoyed by the men. There are enough light moments to keep it from being morose. The climactic handling of Tone's murder of his Nazi wife is timed for suspense, but not horror. It is worth preferred time and selling effort.

Start Live-Action Sequences For New George Pal Puppetoon

Paramount producer Jerry Fairbanks has started work on the live-action sequences in Goerge Pal's production, "And To Think That I Saw It On Mulberry Street," Technicolor puppetoon picturization of the novel of the same name by Dr. Seuss.

The film begins with live-action in black and white photography, changes gradually to puppets in color and eventually to full Technicolor.

Small Kentucky Town Active During Drive To Sell War Bonds

Activities in connection with the Fourth War Loan drive have been reported by Manager J. E. Isaac of the Schine Novo Theatre, Novo, Kentucky.

A bond premiere held recently resulted in the sale of $52,375 in bonds.

A Victory Queen contest was promoted with the local high school. Each candidate for the title received one vote for each dollar purchased in bonds at the theatre. The school also staged a bond auction, with the students furnishing prizes. This event sold $20,250 in bonds.

The Rotary Club committee promoted prizes from merchants for a bond auction at the theatre. Among the 137 rizes promoted was a radio valued at $37.50 which brought $3000. Bonds sold at the auction: $26,650.

One hundred and forty-four bonds were sold for Free Movie Day, held February 10.

A blowup of the theatre's seating chart was displayed in the lobby. With bonds sold in honor of service men in that area, their names and the names of purchasers were placed on the chart. To each purchaser went a card to mail to a service man, advising him that a bond was bought in his honor.

The marquee was decorated with a pennant and banners. A seating chart was displayed in a window, while another window was filled with prizes promoted for the auction. Since there is no newspaper in Novo, a p.a. system was used throughout the area to announce the events.

The mayor officiated at a City Hall rally, with Rotary committee members and others giving talks. All pastors delivered sermons urging bond-buying. The Rotary Club committee canvassed homes, and patrons were personally solicited by members of the theatre staff.

During the bond premiere and auction, members of the Rotary Club committee appeared on the theatre stage. All bond sales were cleared through the bank and post office. Total E bond sales amounted to $101,100. Population of Novo: 4217.

Sue Thanks Audiences

Appealing, heart-touching little Sue Ann, one of the crippled children in the recent March of Dimes appeal trailer, makes another appearance on the screens of America! In a very brief but deeply touching film, Sue Ann, now able to walk with her braces, thanks the moviegoers for their generous response to the infantile paralysis campaign. The newsreels are including the shot in next week's releases. The idea of following up a successful theatre campaign with a "thank you" to the public is expected to have a fine reaction with the seldom-thanked moviegoers.

District Theatremen Continue Bond Efforts

Although the District of Columbia has gone over the top in the Fourth War Loan drive, Washington theatre managers who have pledged to "sell a bond for every seat" are continuing to spur their war bond sales for the balance of February. Five District neighborhood theatremen have lent added support to their campaigns by staging gala war bond premieres in their respective theatres. On Wednesday night the Atlas, Apex and Village held premieres, while the Kennedy and Highland were to have held theirs on Thursday and Friday nights, respectively.

Sponsored with the cooperation of the MPTO of the District of Columbia, and the War Activities Committee, the premieres were conducted in the same manner as downtown premieres at Warners' Earle, Loew's Capitol and RKO Keith's.

The respective theatres issued the bonds and distributed the tickets, taking care not to sell beyond the seating capacity of each theatre. Only one ticket to a premiere was issued for each bond purchased. Seats were not reserved, but theatre auditoriums were divided into sections corresponding with the face value of the bonds purchased.—Wa.

Century Plans March Million-Dollar Dinner

Climaxing the Fourth War Loan, Century Circuit is sponsoring Nassau's Million Dollar Dinner to be held at the Garden City Hotel on Tuesday evening, March 7th. Admission for this affair is by purchase of a $5,000 war bond only, and a total of over $750,000 has been subscribed to date.

Some of the highlights of the affair will be the signing, by all the guests attending, of a captured Nazi battleflag sent by General Dwight Eisenhower to Judge Leone Howell. It will be sent back to General Eisenhower with the instructions that it "be dropped on Berlin."

Another novelty of the evening will include a War Bond Auction of Mayor LaGuardia's hat, an autographed copy of Al Smith's famous speeches, a deck of autographed cards that General Mark Clark and General Eisenhower used during the African campaign, and other autograph collector's prizes.

Lew Lehr wil be Master of Ceremonies, and a prominent orchestra will supply the dance music for the evening.

Tank Ballyhoos Bond Premiere

A $300,000 combination war bond premiere and auction was held recently at the Warner Uptown Theatre in Cleveland, managed by Julius Lamm. Street ballyhoo for the occasion featured an appropriately-bannered General Sherman tank.

Theatres Busy With Bond Premieres; Two Report on the Sales

Morton G. Thalhimer and W. F. Crockett, co-chairmen of the Virginia theatres' participation in the Fourth War Loan drive, announced that 29 motion picture theatres were holding war bond premieres during February, up to and including March 1.

These premieres, at which an individual is admitted to see an advance showing of an outstanding feature film upon the purchase of an E bond, are being held in every section of the state.

Tom Baldridge, who is actively directing the Virginia theatres' participation in the drive, said that in addition to giving their theatres gratis to he Government for an evening bond premiere performance, these owners were also issuing bonds to the public from early morning until midnight, holding Free Movie Days (gratis admission upon the purchase of an E bond), and running newspaper, lobby and screen announcements on the Fourth War Loan drive.

In Hamilton, Ohio, Manager Nat Turberg of the Paramount Theatre has been officially congratulated by the Butler County War Finance Committee for the successful manner in which he staged a war bond premiere. The premiere, which included a film, a stage show and local talent, who contributed their services, netted $721,000 from the capacity audience.

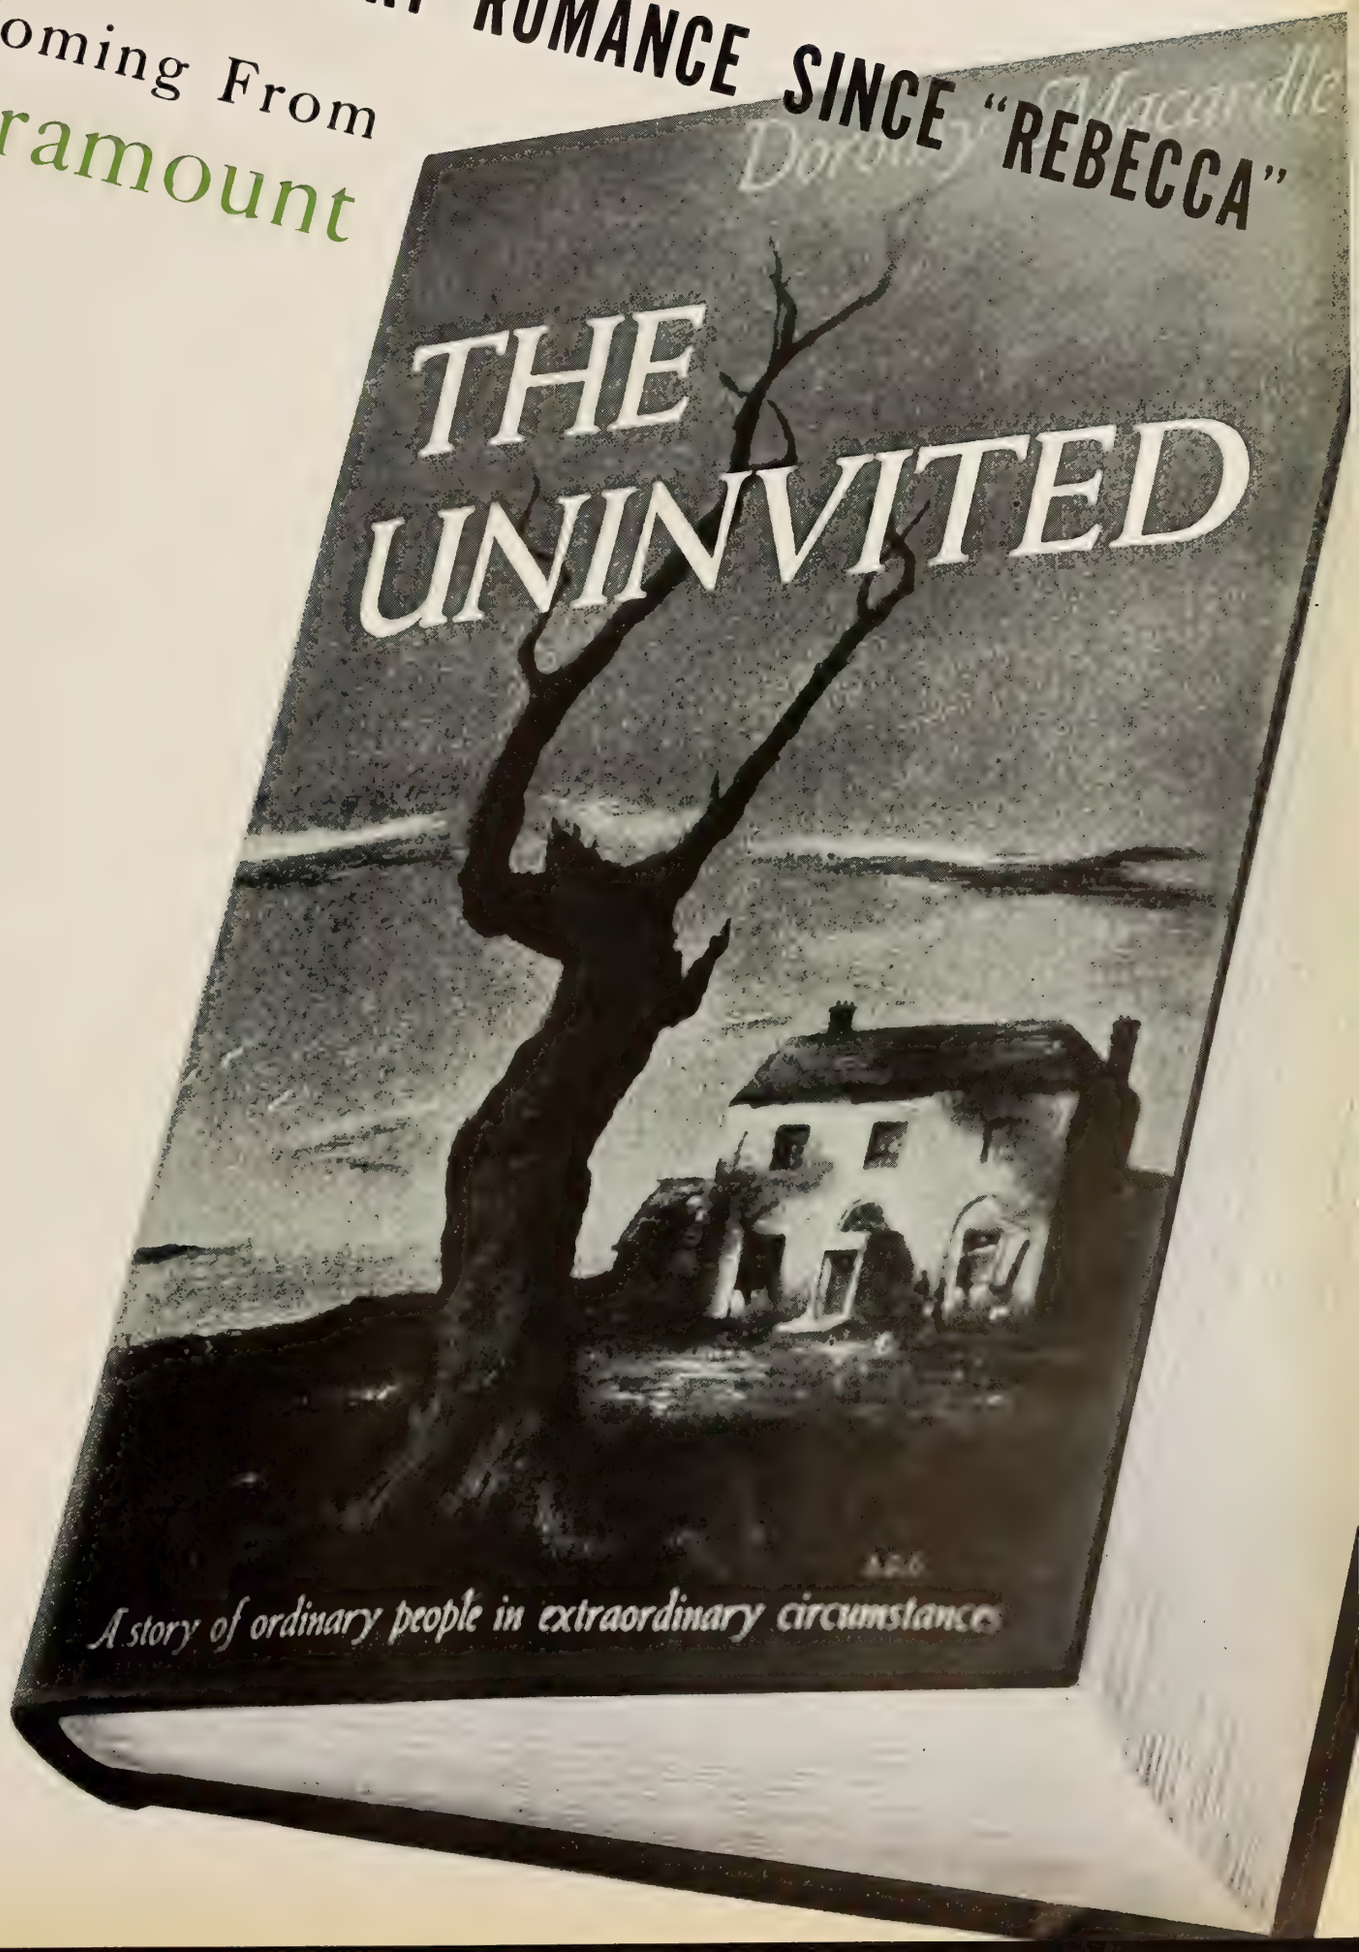
The Paramount is a Northio Theatres house, affiliated with Paramount. Official congratulations were extended by J. H. Warndorf, chairman of the committee.

Reporting from Cooperstown, N. Y., William C. Smalley, president and general manager of Smalley Theatres, reported that a bond premiere and auction held at the 726-seat Smalley's Theatre in that city resulted in a sale of bonds amounting to $545,475. This amount, of course, included the auction, during which a pound of butter was auctioned for $2000.

Dimes Collections Far Ahead Of Most Optimistic Expectations

Amazing reports of March of Dimes collections are pouring into the national headquarters of the theatres' committee. Almost complete reports from chairmen in seventeen states reveal that collections ran far ahead of the most optimistic expectations.

Following are comparative totals, by states: Florida, $74,179 ($9,724 in '43); Oklahoma, $54,000 ($20,998 in '43); North and South Carolina, $60,000 ($8,466 in '43); No. California, $230,000 (last year entire state collected $260,000); Connecticut, $69,550 ($54,493 in '43); Illinois, $214,000 ($107,414 in '43); Kansas, $84,000 ($44,000 in '43); Kentucky, $28,000 ($19,000 in '43); Michigan, $210,323 ($130,270 in '43); Rhode Island $30,946 ($19,110 in '43); Tennessee, $60,000 ($32,270 in '43); Virginia, $60,000 ($27,945 in '43); Texas $200,000 ($11,000 in '43); Western Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, $150,000 ($81,000 in '43).



14,000 Prints of Red Cross Trailer

Issuance of 4,500,000 feet of film was approved for 14,000 prints of "A Report from the Front—by Humphrey Bogart," American Red Cross trailer, which will be shown in the nation's theatres the week of March 19, according to John C. Flinn, coordinator of the War Activities Committee, Hollywood division. The print order, to be run off by Consolidated Film Industries from 50 duplicate negatives, exceeds by more than 2,000 the top number of trailer prints heretofore screened.

Soldier's Home Town Scene of Premiere For 'Private Hargrove'

One of the outstanding events of the year in Charlotte, N. C., took place last Saturday night when "See Here, Private Hargrove," picturization of the book by Sergeant Marion Hargrove, formerly of this city, had its world premiere at the Carolina Theatre.

A number of celebrities from Morris Field, Quartermaster Depot, Camp Sutton, Camp Marshall and Fort Bragg attended the opening. Included in the group were Lt. Thomas Mulvehill, who appears as one of the characters in the picture, and Lt. Wilson Taylor, public relations' officer of the Field Artillery Training Center of Fort Bragg.

All who attended the premiere were given autographed photos of Donna Reed, the film's chief feminine interest, while visiting celebrities were given autographed copies of the book.

Mrs. Hargrove, mother of the author, and Hargrove's two sisters who live at Mt. Olive, N. C., were on hand for the opening and also broadcast from the stage of the Carolina. Other celebrities were interviewed on the air from the stage.

The Charlotte News, the paper on which Hargrove worked, published a special souvenir edition for the premiere.

Mayor Herbert H. Baxter of Charlotte was master of ceremonies, with the Morris Field Band providing music for the occasion. As a salute to Hargrove, women volunteering for the Air Wacs were sworn in on the theatre stage. Officials for the swear-in activities were Lt. Col. William A. Schilletter, commanding officer of the Charlotte Army Recruiting District; Maj. James A. Wheless, Charlotte recruiting officer, and Lt. Harrill of the Morris Field Air Wac detachment.

A special early bird show for war workers at Carolina defense plants was held Saturday morning at 8 o'clock. A special detail of buglers was dispatched to Charlotte from Camp Sutton to sound a city-wide reveille for the swing-shift early bird show. Some of the visiting newspapermen and other celebrities were on hand for this early-morning activity.

Arrangements for world premiere were handled by Jack Austin, manager of the Carolina, with assistance from Al Burks, MGM exploiteer, and Ken Prickett.

Palmeri's Radio Forum

A half-hour radio forum to discuss the possible punishment of Axis war criminals was staged by Manager Vincent Palmeri of the Warner and Merritt theatres, Bridgeport, Conn., in advance of the opening of "None Shall Escape." The broadcast went on the air over Station WICC with seven prominent local personalities participating.

Comparing Picture and Book

Tieing in with a local book shop, Vaughn O'Neill of Loew's State, Syracuse, planted a newspaper contest on "The Cross of Lorraine," offering a war bond and guest tickets for the best letters comparing the book with the film. The book shop ran several cooperative ads.

Herewith is one of the ads used for the recent "Technicolor Premiere" of "Lady in the Dark," Paramount's Technicolor version of the stage success, in Hollywood. Illustration of Ginger Rogers in one of the "out of this world" creations she wears in the film dominates most of the advertising for the lavish motion picture.

Leap Year Stunt for 'In Our Time' Scores

An effective showmanship stunt known as a Leap Year Turnabout Party was put over with rousing success in connection with the opening of "In Our Time" at the Strand Theatre, Albany, N. Y. So successful was the promotion that it is being utilized throughout the Warner Circuit and also will be adopted nationally.

Basic idea: to take advantage of Leap Year "time" and have a group of girls pay all the expenses of a date with members of the armed services. Girls were obtained from the junior hostess list of the USO, the Y.W.C.A., and various other city organizations.

Meeting place was the USO headquarters, at 7 p. m., and the pairing off was done by means of a time clock, with the boy and girl whose "time" punch came closest to each other being teamed for the date.

Dinner was provided by the girl, either at her home or in a restaurant. The girl also paid the admission to the Strand for the special showing. After the show, the party returned to the USO for dancing and a midnight buffet.

Stunt was handled by Charles A. Smakwitz, assistant zone manager and advertising head for Warner Theatres in the Albany territory, in conjunction with Leo Rosen, manager of the Strand, and Jerry Atkin, assistant advertising head.

Through a tieup with one of the leading local papers, The Knickerbocker News, the party and "In Our Time" received big publicity breaks for a week, winding up with a featured layout, under a banner head reading ". . . And a Good Time Was Had by All at the Leap Year Party," the day after the event.

'Bernadette' Success At Rivoli is Traced To Horne Campaign

With "The Song of Bernadette" setting a new box-office record at New York's Rivoli, its success can be traced, in large part, according to Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of worldwide distribution for 20th Century-Fox, to the advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign accorded the picture under the direction of Hal Horne, director of advertising and publicity for the company.

The campaign "sold" the public with an intelligent advertising approach which incorporated all the appeal of Franz Werfel's masterpiece. Supplementing heavy advertising well in advance of the opening, book tieups were arranged with scores of prominent bookshops. Department stores set up attractive window displays, while art and feature stories appeared in all newspapers well ahead of the premiere. Radio promotion and judicious use of a new kind of 24 sheet—the upright—completed the campaign, which the company plans to use in all out of town engagements that follow.

Not since the opening of "Gone with the Wind" had Broadway been the scene of such a dazzling and brilliant premiere as that accorded "Bernadette" at the Rivoli. Society, civic, radio, stage, screen and press were represented in the distinguished audience which attended the gala invitational premiere. Thus, the New York opening of the picture equalled in brilliance and importance the world premiere which heralded "Bernadette" in Hollywood.

The notables who welcomed and acclaimed the picture at its New York opening included Wendell L. Willkie, Annabella, Phil Baker, Joan Fontaine, Brian Aherne, Laird Cregar, Conrad Nagel, Bryan Foy, Phil Silvers, Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, Commander and Mrs. Bernard Baruch, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Farley, Lady Hardwicke, Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, Major Herbert Bayard Swope, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Sullivan, Major and Mrs. Alexander de Seversky and many others.

The motion picture industry was represented by important theatremen which included Edward Alperson, Harry Brandt, Ted Schlanger, Walter Vincent, Walter Reade, Si Fabian, Gus Eyssell, John Nolan, Al Boyd, Frank Buhler,

Students' Bonds Buy Airplane In 'Destination Tokyo' Tieup

Capitalizing on the recent Fourth War Loan drive in the New England schools, Publicity Director Paul A. Levi of the M & P Metropolitan Theatre arranged a group picture of students of St. Mary's High School, Waltham, Mass., posed behind a sign carrying this copy:

"St. Mary's High School, Waltham, has just bought war bonds to purchase one $15,000 plane. Our next goal, $75,000 pursuit plane. 'Destination Tokyo'."

The sign was done in conjunction with the local showing of "Destination Tokyo." In addition, Levi arranged a full window of boats in the War Manpower Building and a window showing a model submarine in R. H. White Co., which stopped traffic along Boston's busy Washington Street.

Program Exchange

Raisler Scores in Drive; Why Abbreviated Names? Good Dealer-Program Tieup

Before we get down to business, we must report an incident concerning the weather. One night last week we chose to reply to letters from friends in various parts of the country. In effect, we advised them that New York had so far been practically snowless, and that from all indications it would remain that way for the balance of the season. How hasty, how rash of us to make such a prediction! For the very next morning upon arising and opening our windows to indulge in our daily calisthenics, we came face to face with a blizzard. Hurriedly we closed the windows and watched the snow beating against the panes. The ground was white. (Note: The fact that we opened our windows may lead some to believe that we slept with them closed. The windows were already partly open, with plenty of air coming through; we simply opened them wider when we began our exercise period.) Never again shall we make any predictions concerning the possibility of snow. It lasted for a day or two, but along came rain and washed most of it away. And so, now that we've had our say about the weather, we'll get down to business.

Last week we were happy to learn of the excellent bond-selling job done by Manager Paul Raisler of the Utopia Theatre, Flushing, Long Island. If you remember, we discussed and reproduced his program in last week's issue. And then, just a day or two before going to press with that issue, we received word that he had sold—or was likely to sell—four bonds for every seat. It was definitely established later—a little too late for us to make the change in our story—that he had actually reached the record of selling four bonds for every seat. Independent Theatre Owner and Manager Raisler has done an outstanding job in the Fourth War Loan, and we are happy that he is one of our Program Exchange contributors. His unusually fine monthly program should have tipped us off to the fact that this showman never does anything by halves.

Having received the "February Schedule" for the Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, we still can't understand why Manager Harland Rankin finds it necessary to abbreviate the given names of the stars who appear in his attractions. We have, however, noticed a tendency among Canadian exhibitors to abbreviate given names. Thus, whenever we mentioned these showmen in exploitation reports, we had to refer to them as K. Jones or B. Good or U. Tellem. Rankin has ample space in his little monthly program to print the full names of stars and players, but perhaps it's the old Canadian custom that prevents him from doing so. We must say, however, that the schedule is extremely convenient, and its small size prevents paper waste when there is such a critical paper shortage as right now.

Left-over space in the program for the Normandie Theatre, New York, has been devoted to boosting the sale of war bonds. Readers will remember that only a couple of weeks ago we pointed out that Manager David Nolan, instead of spacing out his stories to fill a column, could utilize the extra space at the bottom for the benefit of the bond drive. This he has done in his current issue.

His Comments Delight Readers

We have thoroughly enjoyed reading Tom Edwards' "Tom Tells Tales" on the back of his latest calendar program for the Ozark Theatre, Eldon, Mo. In addition to his personal endorsements of several of the attractions booked for the five-week period, he makes other comments and observations that delight the reader. Here are a few of them, chosen at random:

▶"Overheard two high school boys talking. One of them said: 'She has a shape like an empty shaving cream tube.' Speaking of that, saw a new autograph last week. It read, 'Roses are red, spinach is green, you have a shape like a B-17'."

▶"Overheard on Family Night: Blonde, 'Is he a nice boy?' Redhead, 'No, dear, you'll like him fine'."

▶"Someone is always riding me about not working very hard, but really folks, you don't know the show business. Here is what happened last week: The theatre was jammed, the lobby packed, and they're stacking up outside . . . I stop to hold and pet a baby . . . wonder how long I'll have to keep this up? . . . Oh well, the first show's about over and it looks like a second sellout . . . I hear the audience start muttering . . . the film's busted . . . I practically lose a leg getting to the booth . . . it's fixed . . . I rush back to the lobby and a woman gives me the devil because I don't have any nickel sacks of popcorn . . . I rush in to hurry-up the ushers and there is a to-do down front . . . a poor fellow is having a fit . . . the usher helps him out the side door . . . I rush back towards the lobby, and two kids are fighting . . . I grab them by the neck and put them outside . . . Two dogs enter the lobby when I open the door, and start fighting . . . I pitch the dogs out, and one of the kids rushes back in and grabs me by the seat of the pants . . . a puffed-up looking woman over by the popcorn machine screeches and falls flat . . . somebody calls for a doctor . . . she's having a baby . . . the cashier faints, and the furnace starts smoking . . . someone yells fire . . . someone else yells 'Tom! Tom!' . . . thank goodness, I wake up . . . I'm being called for breakfast . . . no wonder a theatreman can't sleep!"

There will be some theatremen who will declare that you don't have to dream to have the experiences described by Edwards. But whether it's fact or fancy, few fail to realize that a theatre manager has many responsibilities and that his job is not an easy one by any means.

To our mind has come an idea which originated out west a couple of years ago. We reported it at that time, but we are repeating it now for the benefit of those who may not have yet heard of it. To impress upon patrons the location of his theatre and also the various types of merchants near it, this manager had a map made up showing his neighborhood, the location of his theatre and the location of stores. Each store was labeled with the type of merchandise it sold. Of course, the manager had tied in with the merchants, and they helped bear the cost of the program. A local draftsman made up the map. If you're looking for something different, you should give this idea serious consideration.

And now we find we must leave you here. But we'll be back again next week.

Republic's "Silver Spurs" was given prominent display and top billing in this ad for first-run engagement of the Roy Rogers special at the Fox Kinema, Fresno, Calif.

Admiral Radio Tieup Results in 'Tokyo' Ad in Collier's Magazine

Under a tieup made with Admiral Radio, "Destination Tokyo" was featured in a full-page ad in a recent issue of Collier's magazine.

Ad layout included three stills from the film, plus several plugs in the accompanying copy.

Exhibitors Utilizing Suggestion

Acting on the suggestion made in the press-book on "None Shall Escape," theatre managers are arranging for prominent local personalities to go on the air to discuss the post-war punishment of Axis war criminals as an advance plug for the picture. To date, radio roundtable discussions have been staged in Portland, Maine, by Manager Leo Young of the Strand Theatre; Hartford, Conn., by Manager George Landers of E. M. Loew's Theatre; New Haven, Conn., by Manager Sidney Kleper of Loew's Poli; New London, Conn., by Manager Ed O'Sullivan of the Garde Theatre.

'Destination Tokyo' Showmanship Target In Denver and Dayton

As engagements of "Destination Tokyo" increase around the country, more campaign activities come to light. Two of the most recent were staged in Denver and Dayton. Following are some of the most important stunts in connection with these engagements:

Denver. For the showing at the Denver and Esquire theatres, Manager Bernie Hynes and his assistant, Avalon Cummings, contacted the War Production Board and arranged to have "Destination Tokyo" stickers posted in industrial plants, schools and salvage depots, and also to be used by the Parent-Teachers Association as the basis for their tin drive in the city schools.

The local salvage committee used 40x60 signs on their 65 salvage trucks. Copy on the signs: "Salvage More in '44—Destination Tokyo—Denver and Esquire (playdate)."

The Rocky Mountain Arsenal supplied ten bomb craters labeled "Destination Tokyo" for display in the lobby.

Jumbo recruiting cards with the copy, "Join the Waves and Send a Sailor on the Way—Destination Tokyo," were affixed to telephone poles.

A special Wave recruiting booth was set up at the Denver-At-War Exposition. A recruiting booth was also set up in the lobby with incentive "Tokyo" copy. Theatre staff spotted DT stickers all over town.

Dayton. The manager of the Victory Theatre arranged with the Dayton Daily News to publish a tribute to the nation's submarine heroes, under the heading of The Silent Service, with a page layout of scenes from the picture taken by the newspaper's photographer right off the screen in the theatre on the opening day of the run.

The layout was designed to give "landlubbers" an insight into the fascinating technical aspects of submarine activity.

Idea for the stunt came from M. E. Scott, photo editor of the Daily News, who worked it out in collaboration with Man Kohnoopf, Sunday editor. The feature appeared in the paper's Sunday magazine section.

Julia Neal (seated) of Young America magazine, looks at the prize Collie pup presented to Doris Kamman of Staten Island, through her cousin, Caroline Gerhard, at the Young America office while Capt. Volney Phifer, MGM special traveling exploiteer (remember when he visited your town with the Traveling Studio, the Trackless Train, Leo the Lion, etc.?), looks on. The contest, conducted by the magazine in tieup with MGM's "Lassie, Come Home," was on "Why I Like Dogs" and brought in over 3000 entries.

Horne Praised for 'Bernadette' Campaign

Louis Schine, Rick Ricketson, B. V. Sturdivant and Charles Skouras. These exhibitors and many others who came from as far West as Denver were the guests, at the premiere, of Spyros Skouras and Tom Connors. Murray Silverstone played host to several members of the Foreign Field force, including J. C. Bavetta, Joseph Mullen, William Morgan and Robert Kreier.

The Rivoli premiere of "Bernadette" was one of the most spectacular ever witnessed by New York crowds. Giant floodlights lit up the streets leading to the theatre while throngs of spectators gathered to witness the gala proceedings. A cordon of mounted policemen was on hand to guide the arrival of motion picture stars, notables and social leaders.

The huge radio hook-up and loudspeakers in the brilliantly decorated Rivoli lobby relayed the messages and greetings of the stars to the vast unseen radio audiences as well as to the spectators who were on hand for the gala proceedings. A contingent of news photographers and cameramen, representing leading newspapers, fan magazines, syndicates, national magazines and wire services, was stationed in the lobby to capture on celluloid the story of the "Bernadette" premiere in New York and to photograph the notables and celebrities who were present .

The campaign—advertising, publicity and exploitation—which preceded and led up to the gala invitational premiere was the most tremendous in the company's history and was launched on a gigantic scale many weeks in advance of the opening. The biggest features of the campaign centered around newspaper display advertising, billboard and poster coverage and radio pre-selling. Newspapers and magazines gave "Bernadette" a most amazing showing with photo feature layouts, feature stories, column items, etc. Special preview showings netted the picture an impressive amount of free linage, whole commercial tie-ups blanketed stores with window sills, publicity cards and other types of advertising material. No advertising, publicity or exploitation avenue was overlooked by Horne in capturing for "Bernadette" the most extensive representation ever accorded a picture in the way of expert showmanship and superior merchandising.

'Cross of Lorraine' Campaign Based on The Fighting French

Scarcely an angle was left untouched by Manager George Peters of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, in staging his campaign on "The Cross of Lorraine."

Assisted by Vivian Brown and Tom Baldridge, MGM exploiteer, Peters used various avenues of exploitation to inform his public of the picture's showing. He based his campaign on the film's adaptation from the best-selling novel by Hans Habe, its story of the Fighting French, the title, cast, etc. These angles were embodied in the front and lobby displays, and a Free French Flag was used in the lobby.

A week in advance Organist Eddie Weaver dedicated a medley of French songs to the Fighting French, and on opening night he introduced to the audience several officers of various French organizations and relief societies. The picture received several good radio plugs and was extensively publicized and advertised in the Times Dispatch and News-Leader.

Displays were promoted in windows of book stores and in book departments of department stores. Libraries distributed 5000 bookmarks. Posters were placed on high school bulletin boards and a language department contest was given in grade schools.

Through the cooperation of Mrs. Branch Johnson, co-chairman of the French Prisoners of War in Germany and vice-president of the Fighting French, both organizations under the French Consul of Relief Society, members and financial supporters on their roster were telephoned and urged to see "The Cross of Lorraine." On opening night, Mrs. Johnson and officers and members were guests of Manager Peters.

To 2300 families on the Richmond Grand Opera mailing list went post cards containing the theatre management's endorsement of the picture.

Counter cards plugging French wines, together with stills from the picture and credit lines, were used in four restaurants.

One thousand newspapers overprinted in red were distributed two days before opening and on opening day.

Teaser classified ads in the newspapers carried this copy (sample): "Dear John: Don't forget to see 'Cross of Lorraine' tomorrow. It gives us the lowdown on the real Fighting French.—Eddie."

Special permission was obtained to place 14x28 cards on 100 downtown street trash cans (see cut at top of center column).

This colorful, eye-catching lobby setpiece on 20th Century-Fox's "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" attracted attention at Shea's Theatre, Toronto.

PLAN OF ACTION TO CAPITALIZE GLAMOR

"THE FIGHTING SEABEES"

A Republic Picture
Directed By EDWARD LUDWIG
Starring JOHN WAYNE
SUSAN HAYWARD

The Seabees today rate next to the Marines for popular glamor and enthusiastic publicity. They are a new branch of the service founded since the start of World War II. The Marines themselves have acquired a healthy respect for Seabees and many quips to the effect that the Seabees are always on hand to welcome the Marines on enemy soil has served to heighten the romance of their "Can Do" reputation.

This picture is the screen tribute to the men of the U. S. Naval Construction Battalions. It will prove a highly concentrated stick of box-office dynamite if you plant your showmanship explosives all over town. Here are some ideas you can use:

Lobby Display Items

Get together a display of construction and fighting equipment to include shovels, guns, heavy chains, machetes, hawsers, giant wrenches, steel cable, welding equipment, imitation sticks of dynamite, etc. A local construction company and armory should be able to supply the necessary items and your art shop or sign man will be able to glamorize the display with, "Can Do"—"We Build and Fight" copy and atmosphere. A cutout of a shattered palm tree with a fan-blown miniature American Flag fastened to the top will provide ideal background. If you can locate some hobby fan who has made miniature bulldozers, airplanes, tractors and cranes, you might erect a miniature airfield in the course of construction. Use a tropical background of painted, shell-smashed palms with fires raging and warships in the distance. Pin or paste up newspaper headlines of Tarawa, Guadalcanal, Roi, Kwajalein, Eniwetok, Makin, etc., attacks and run ribbons from each to points mentioned on a large war map of the kind that local filling stations supply free. No matter what your display facilities, it will be an easy matter to create an eye-catching set-up with a few litho cutouts used to tie in the picture. Stills should also be used and you might add ribbons of paper to tie them in with the headlines.

Teaser Ads

Many people do not know where the name "Seabees" originated and you might want to capitalize on the curiosity of such people.

Here is a suggested routine:

1st Ad . . . Just the large bold initials
C. B.

2nd Ad . . . Tarawa! Makin! Kwajalein!
C. B.

3rd Ad . . . Eniwetok! The Road to Tokyo!
C. B.
(Construction Battalion)

4th Ad . . . Romance of the Seven Seas—
SEABEES stands for C. B.
(Construction Battalion)
See "The Fighting Seabees"

Use the insignia cut with this ad and follow with regular display.

Honor Local Seabees

Get photographs of all the local boys serving in the Seabees and make an attractive Flag-draped display in their honor. You might make the unveiling of this display an important event, with the mayor doing the honors and a Seabee, home on leave, assisting. This should be good for a picture break in the press and a photo of the event could be mailed to each of the boys in service with the good wishes of the theatre and its patrons to let them know they are being honored. This angle is swell for post-war goodwill, and current publicity. If you can round up a Seabee home on leave, have him deliver a labeled print for the benefit of press photographers.

Special Heralds

Prepare a special herald addressed to "Home Front Seabees"—the War Workers Construction Battalions of Your Town who supply the tools for the "Fighting Seabees." Tell them to see the Japs feel the wrath of these courageous, romantic, battling builders; see the things made in your town in action. Stress the romance angle.

Window Tieups

By referring to the war plant workers as Home Front Seabees, you can land windows in stores which sell women's slacks, coveralls, and other accoutrement used in the factories of your town. The copy could be headed: 'What the Well Dressed Home Front Seabees Are Wearing." This can apply to men as well as the ladies and local war plants should be glad to furnish technical equipment to add interest to the displays, including welders' masks, riveting machines, drills, etc., which could be used with an assortment of stills to complete the tieup. Make 'em "Can Do" conscious.

Contests

You can get a coloring contest featuring the Seabees insignia under way in the schools or through your local paper. A modelling contest of construction equipment might net some very worthwhile entries. The art department of your high school might have students compete in designing posters on the picture honoring the Seabees. A listeners' letter contest of 100-word essays on the subject: "Why I Admire the Seabees" could be handled by your radio station. Promote worthwhile prizes and give guest tickets to winners.

Ballyhoo

Almost every city has a construction company or highway department which has a bulldozer that could be promoted for use as a street ballyhoo. Paint the names of the Pacific Islands along with sales copy for the picture on the front pusher and use compo board cutouts of the Seabee insignia on the sides. Park a bulldozer in front of the theatre. It will attract plenty of attention.

Stage Event

We like the idea advanced of conducting a "Honey Bee of the Seabees" contest along the popularity, good looks, figure, personality lines. Winners could be chosen by votes or audience applause. If you want to make the pitch you can no doubt use this method to get a bang-up opening or prolong the contest to build grosses. Promote the prizes, plant the idea and reap the publicity. It is a good bet for war plant activity.

Personalize Ads To Compel Readership

Copy That Talks To Patrons In Friendly, Free and Easy Way Proves Most Effective

Most showmen are so busy these days that not sufficient time can be devoted to the more creative or imaginative type of show-selling through the newspaper advertising columns. Such being the case, there is the temptation to try to offset the lack of "sparkle" by increase in the size of the advertisement.

Assuming that a theatre has got the extra money for enlarged space, there is the growing restriction on the size of space the newspaper will accept, due to paper conservation. Thus, the big ad has two strikes against it before the comparative test is made as to the big space (sheer impressiveness) vs. the punchy ad with a line, or an illustration that makes the reader take in what it has to say about the show.

Unfortunately, the average press book does not provide that great majority of exhibitors, who must use relatively small space, with the snappy displays that are worked up for the larger advertisements. When it comes to the smaller displays, the press books, mostly, offer what looks like an abbreviation of the bigger displays. That's the fault of many varying things—the need for proper billing for all the producers, associate producers, players, directors, writers—and so forth. Nevertheless, exhibitors for years have been emphasizing the necessity for more attention to smaller displays of a ready-made nature. Now more than ever they need that service.

We have no aversion to big ads in their proper place, but the practice of using space rather than ingenuity is a costly, habit-forming, easy-way-out-formula which, when administered in frequent doses, tends to make even the large displays become commonplace in the readers' eyes. It is our considered opinion that personalized, localized ads which talk to the reader in a friendly, sincere, common-every-day vein get the greatest results. Cleverness is also another requisite of personalized approach.

In all our years of theatre experience we can never recall an instance in which a friend or customer stopped us on the street or in the lobby to remark about the big ad that appeared in the paper on this or that picture. We do recall being told by innumerable friends of the cleverness or "cuteness" of a small ad which got under a prospect's skin and made him want to see a picture. This positive reaction, expressed in personal comment, speaks volumes in behalf of careful, realistic evaluation of copy vs. space. The space is always secondary to copy.

With the paper crisis forcing cuts in advertising linage no theatre need suffer if care and thought are given to copy planning. Small ads can speak for themselves.

In using smaller space, the personalized touch becomes especially effective, and as an illustration thereof, we are submitting some original examples of personalized advertisements composed of elements from press book displays. These, it will be readily seen, can be made up with type or art lettering, supplemented by portions of mats available and as illustrated in the press books. Theatre sig cuts and pertinent policy copy have been omitted and fictitious manager or theatre names have been used to get across the idea. No matter what your facilities for ad production may be these ads can be duplicated by any theatre and the ideas are flexible to the end that they can be warped to apply to any similar pictures. We would like to hear your reactions to this theory of creativeness vs. space. If you use the ideas set forth we will appreciate seeing tear sheets and also some of your own ad creations which bear out this commentary.

Proud to be in show business and to be Boomtown's representative of an industry that can make such a stirring, human, lovable picture about such honest-to-goodness people as the Sullivan boys. Proud of the fact that this is a story about typical American boys who are just like their fellow American lads here in Boomtown; fellows who enjoyed going fishing when they were kids and are now out there pitching for all their worth to keep Boomtown (the place nearest their hearts) just the way it is to come back to. Yes sir, I'm proud that on Friday the Victory Theatre will have the privilege of bringing you . . . "The Sullivans" . . . a picture I'll proudly stack my reputation on!

Being an old hand at picking pictures his patrons will enjoy, praise and remember, he gets all excited about this one for his theatre. To make sure of his opinion he reads the critics and finds them all raving and saying "Lifeboat" is "A Corker; To Be Treasured Among The Best; Chockful of Suspense and Bright Humor," etc. That's pretty good evidence. And then he reads where it is breaking all records at the famous Astor Theatre on Broadway. At this point he concludes that he is not only right about the picture but should book it and start doing a bit of raving himself. When the date is set he puts on a big advertising campaign to let you know about it here in Boomtown.

Philadelphia and Buffalo Give 'London' Exploitation Buildups

Two recent campaigns featuring some angles that might be adapted to subsequent-run campaigns have been put over in Philadelphia and Buffalo on "Jack London."

Philadelphia. For the showing of the film at the Stanton, Irving Blumberg, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros. Theatres here, Milt Young, Ed Muehlmann, manager of the Stanton, and Phil Engel, United Artists representative, all worked together to exploit it in a most comprehensive manner.

Tieup was made with the Adam Hat Store for a window display, and the hat company also ran a series of ads featuring Michael O'Shea, who stars in the picture. In another tieup, Bookbinder's Seafood Dinner Cafe used a blowup still of Virginia Mayo at their entrance door and also in their 16-inch newspaper ad. Basis for the tieup: the girl is known as the Queen of the Oyster Pirates in the picture.

A display of Jack London books was promoted from Gimbel Bros.' department store. Other stores also came through with displays. Well-known bookstores and circulating libraries were contacted for windows.

Jewelry stores used attractive cards showing the stills of Osa Massen wearing beautiful bracelets, rings, etc.

Spot announcements and transcriptions over three local radio stations were promoted free. The librarian of the City Library sent a letter to all branch heads asking them to post the letter on bulletin boards. Letter stated that Jack London books were available, and recommended the picture to readers.

Manager Muehlmann used special displays in the Stanton lobby, also ran a newspaper teaser campaign and projected the "Jack London" trailer two weeks in advance of the picture's opening. The Philadelpia Record ran a layout of pictures comparing Mr. and Mrs. London with Michael O'Shea and Susan Hayward, who are their counterparts in the film.

Buffalo. Full cooperation of Mayor Joseph J. Kelley, several effective tieups and numerous attractive window displays were among the exploitation highlights put over by Manager Charles Taylor of Shea's Buffalo for the local "Jack London" opening.

With the theatre celebrating its 18th birthday, Taylor got the mayor to issue a proclamation declaring the week as "Jack London Week," urged all citizens to see the picture and requested all merchants to display flags and banners in honor of the men of the Merchant Marine. Stunt got the picture an abundance of local newspaper publicity and radio plugs.

Special half-sheet cards were placed in all book store windows throughout the city. Best book window display, that obtained in the H. B. Hengeres department store, consisted of 22x28 stills with appropriate credit cards. The Adam Hat tieup accounted for extra window displays utilizing a special one-sheet in addition to the regular cards arranged for this national tieup. The Adam ads on Michael O'Shea broke in local dailies, and underneath each ad was a line urging the reader to see the picture at the Buffalo.

An enlarged photo of Virginia Mayo billing her as the "Queen of Oysters" was on display in the largest seafood cafe in town. Osa Massen photos were used for several jewelry store window tieups. Royal Crown Cola got out special ads plugging "Jack London" and bannered all of their delivery trucks.

Special bookmarks were distributed at all public libraries. More than 3000 paper napkins were distributed at restaurants, drug store counters, and 200 tack cards were placed on all newsstands. The regular window cards were displayed in all merchant windows along the main street.

The front of the theatre displayed a blowup of the mayor's proclamation and used special setpieces in addition to several shadow box displays.

Manager Rodney Toups of Loew's State Theatre, New Orleans, arranged a book tieup with Merchant Marine Library Association for the opening of United Artists' "Jack London." Youngster on the left may be Toups himself, but no confirmation of this came with the photo.

'Curie' is Exploited In Omaha Territory

An extensive campaign is being carried on in the Omaha territory for "Madame Curie." Manager Donald Shane of the Paramount Theatre, Omaha, used it as a bond premiere attraction which filled the theatre's 2776 seats and netted $200,000 in bond sales.

Exploitation, outlined by Jack Connor of MGM, included a full-color page of Greer Garson art in the World-Herald's magazine section and daily stories running from January 16 to 25. Special displays were featured by department stores, lighted marquees were arranged for the Ak-Sar-Ben bridge, the Union Bus depot, a department store, five hotels and three other firms.

Six department stores used cooperative ads. Four hundred cards were placed on the fronts and rears of street cars.

The radio and motion picture committee of the Omaha Federation of Women's Clubs was invited to a special screening at which Connor spoke. A discussion of the picture followed the screening. The chairman was well pleased with the picture and sent her report to members in the city.

In Sioux City, Ia., the Capitol Theatre, managed by Ira Crain, held a screening for school principals, the school superintendent, women's clubs, the Boy Scouts and representatives of three colleges. Five hundred heralds featuring Madame Curie's declaration of faith were sent to all class rooms in the city school system. Book stores tied in with window displays, and the picture was advertised in the lobby for four weeks.

A similar campaign was staged by Manager Dick Phillips in Cherokee, Iowa.—Om.

Pasted Posters on Pavement

Mollie Stickles of Loew's Poli Strand, Waterbury, Conn., pasted one-sheets on the sidewalk and sold a block of tickets to the local Polish Relief Society as part of her campaign on "Hitler's Madman."

Helm's Campaign on 'Army' Deserves a Flock of Chevrons

Walter Helm's campaign on "This Is the Army" for Premiere Operating Corporation's Avon Theatre, Stratford, Ontario, rates an arm-length of chevrons.

Walter's report reads in part:

"I started the bally on TITA two weeks before playdate, rounding out displays through several channels. Special windows were built for the Canadian department store, Gordon's Men's Shop, S. S. Kresge, Meier Novelty and Music Co., and the Stratford Bus Co.

"The C. O. of our local military training center gave me 100 per cent co-operation. We received permission to banner the Army trucks, and a quantity of special shields were especially made up for use on the trucks and marquee.

"The newspaper came through with a bang, too, with the advertising department selling a co-op double-truck spread, which appeared on Saturday prior to our Monday opening. Charlie Dingman, the Beacon-Herald editor, assigned his ace photographer to cover the opening night's fanfare. A special ad campaign, stressing that the Canadian Army Show and Recreation Fund shared in the take, was used for a week in advance.

"The Stratford War Service Committee mailed strong letters to more than 50 service organizations in this area, accenting the benefits to the Canadian Army Fund.

"We started our radio campaign with a lineup of teaser spots 10 days before opening, followed by longer announcements carrying playdate credits. A special broadcast had been arranged for our opening but the portable equipment went haywire at the last minute and S. E. Tapley, CJCS manager, quickly arranged a half-hour studio show which subbed well under the circumstances.

"We went in for spectacle on opening night, both in front and inside the theatre. The Perth Regiment Band and the Stratford Boys' Band built up a crowd of 1500 persons during the outside bally. A military precision drill was also staged by a picked squad of regulars. Police barricaded the street for the block in front of the Avon. Demonstrations of anti-aircraft tactics and gas drills were held outside and repeated on the stage."

Here is the right-hand section of the front-of-the-house display on Warners' "This Is the Army" at the Warner Theatre in London. The 16 wooden exit doors which now replace the ornate glass-and-metal structures blown out during the German air raids of 1941, were decorated with cut-out cartoon heads of GIs and panels of critics' excerpts. In England, it's against the law for any motion picture theatre to use stills, photographic enlargements or any form of display involving photographic material. Therefore, the Warner had to work with original oil paintings for star, scene illustrations.

Edward Sparks, with Variety Club, Tent No. 6, and more recently Tent No. 21, died.

BOSTON

Phil Engel, publicist in the New England territory for Warners, managed to work in a visit to his family here, after a strenuous week visiting various cities, but was off again Monday for Worcester, Albany and Pittsfield.

Matt Sullivan, United Artists branch manager at Buffalo, and Bill Scharton, same position at New Haven, came to Boston this week to confer with District Manager James Winn. John Durven, Boston branch manager, also sat in at the conference.

Max Melincoff, Warners head in this area, entertained a group of friends at luncheon in the Statler again last week.

Gertrude White, United Artists cashier, married a Corporal in the United States Army and is currently on honeymoon tour in New York. She will return to her work here.

James Winn, district manager for United Artists, spent several days last week at the home office in New York.

Joe Carroll, office manager of United Artists, is the proud father of a new-born son.

Art Moger, new publicist for Warners in this section, is on a trip to Buffalo, Syracuse and Rochester.

Lieut. Abe Levine—"Habeas Corpus Levine," as he was known to all in the local film colony—again writes and implores that he receive mail from the friends back home. His address is: Lieut. Abe Levine, H6-403. A.D. APO 636, care of Postmaster New York City. He was formerly with Columbia.

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Russo visited the film district this week. Mr. Russo is projectionist at the Star Theatre in St. Johnsbury, Vermont.

James J. Dempsey, manager of the Paramount in Lynn, staged a $500 War Bond dinner at Pythian Castle there, and had prizes presented from the local merchants to the theatre men who had sold the greatest amount of bonds.

Vandalism broke out in New Bedford, resulting in the breaking and entering of the Casino Theatre and the robbery of several dollars in cash and much merchandise from the candy machines.

Nathan Yamins, independent chain operator, has broken a wrist in a fall, but is rapidly recovering.

Sergeant Al Rudnick, formerly assistant manager of the Coolidge Corner Theatre in Brookline, is now stationed in England and writes friends that he is well and happy. Andrew Poltack, former assistant manager, also at the Coolidge Corner Theatre, is now with the Army in Italy.

Mona Lightower did a great job of pinch-hitting for Red King as publicist at the Keith Memorial and Keith Boston while King was on tour with the motion picture stars in this territory.

The Ralph Snider Circuit officials now occupy new offices on the fifth floor of Hotel Bradford, directly across the street from the Metropolitan Theatre.

The Maine Theatre in Waterville, Maine, has been purchased by the Kurzon circuit.

Pfc. John Hargreaves, aide at the State Theatre in Nashua, has been killed in action in the Pacific battles.

Private Bill Koster, formerly one of the Boston Variety Club's most active members, again begs for letters from his friends here. His address is Pvt. Wm. Koster. 31367995. Co. D. 52BN. 11th Regiment. Camp Fannin, Texas.

The Idle Hour Theatre in Palmer, Mass., has been leased to Ralph E. Snider, and will be operated by the Snider circuit hereafter.

Seth Fields will succeed Kenneth Kurzon as manager of the Graphic Theatres Circuit, when Kurzon, third brother to enter the service, leaves within the next two weeks.

Walter Bell, formerly manager of a Kurzon-operated theatre in Maine, has been appointed manager of that circuit's Reading Theatre at Reading, Massachusetts.

CHARLOTTE

Charlotte made the most of its first world premiere, a showing last Saturday night of MGM's "See Here, Private Hargrove." The celebration began at daybreak with the arrival on Charlotte's main streets of the bugle corps from Camp Sutton to wake up the town for its big day, and ended at midnight with the conclusion of the formal premiere at which the best-known private to date of World War II was present by telephone. The Governor of North Carolina headed the guest list, and the Mayor was master of ceremonies.

Two characters in the book and the play were present in person, Brodie Griffith, managing editor of the Charlotte News on which Hargrove began his writing career, and Lt. Thomas Mulvehill, who came from Lake Charles, La., to be present at the first showing of the first strictly humorous World War II picture (for which he helped to make the humor).

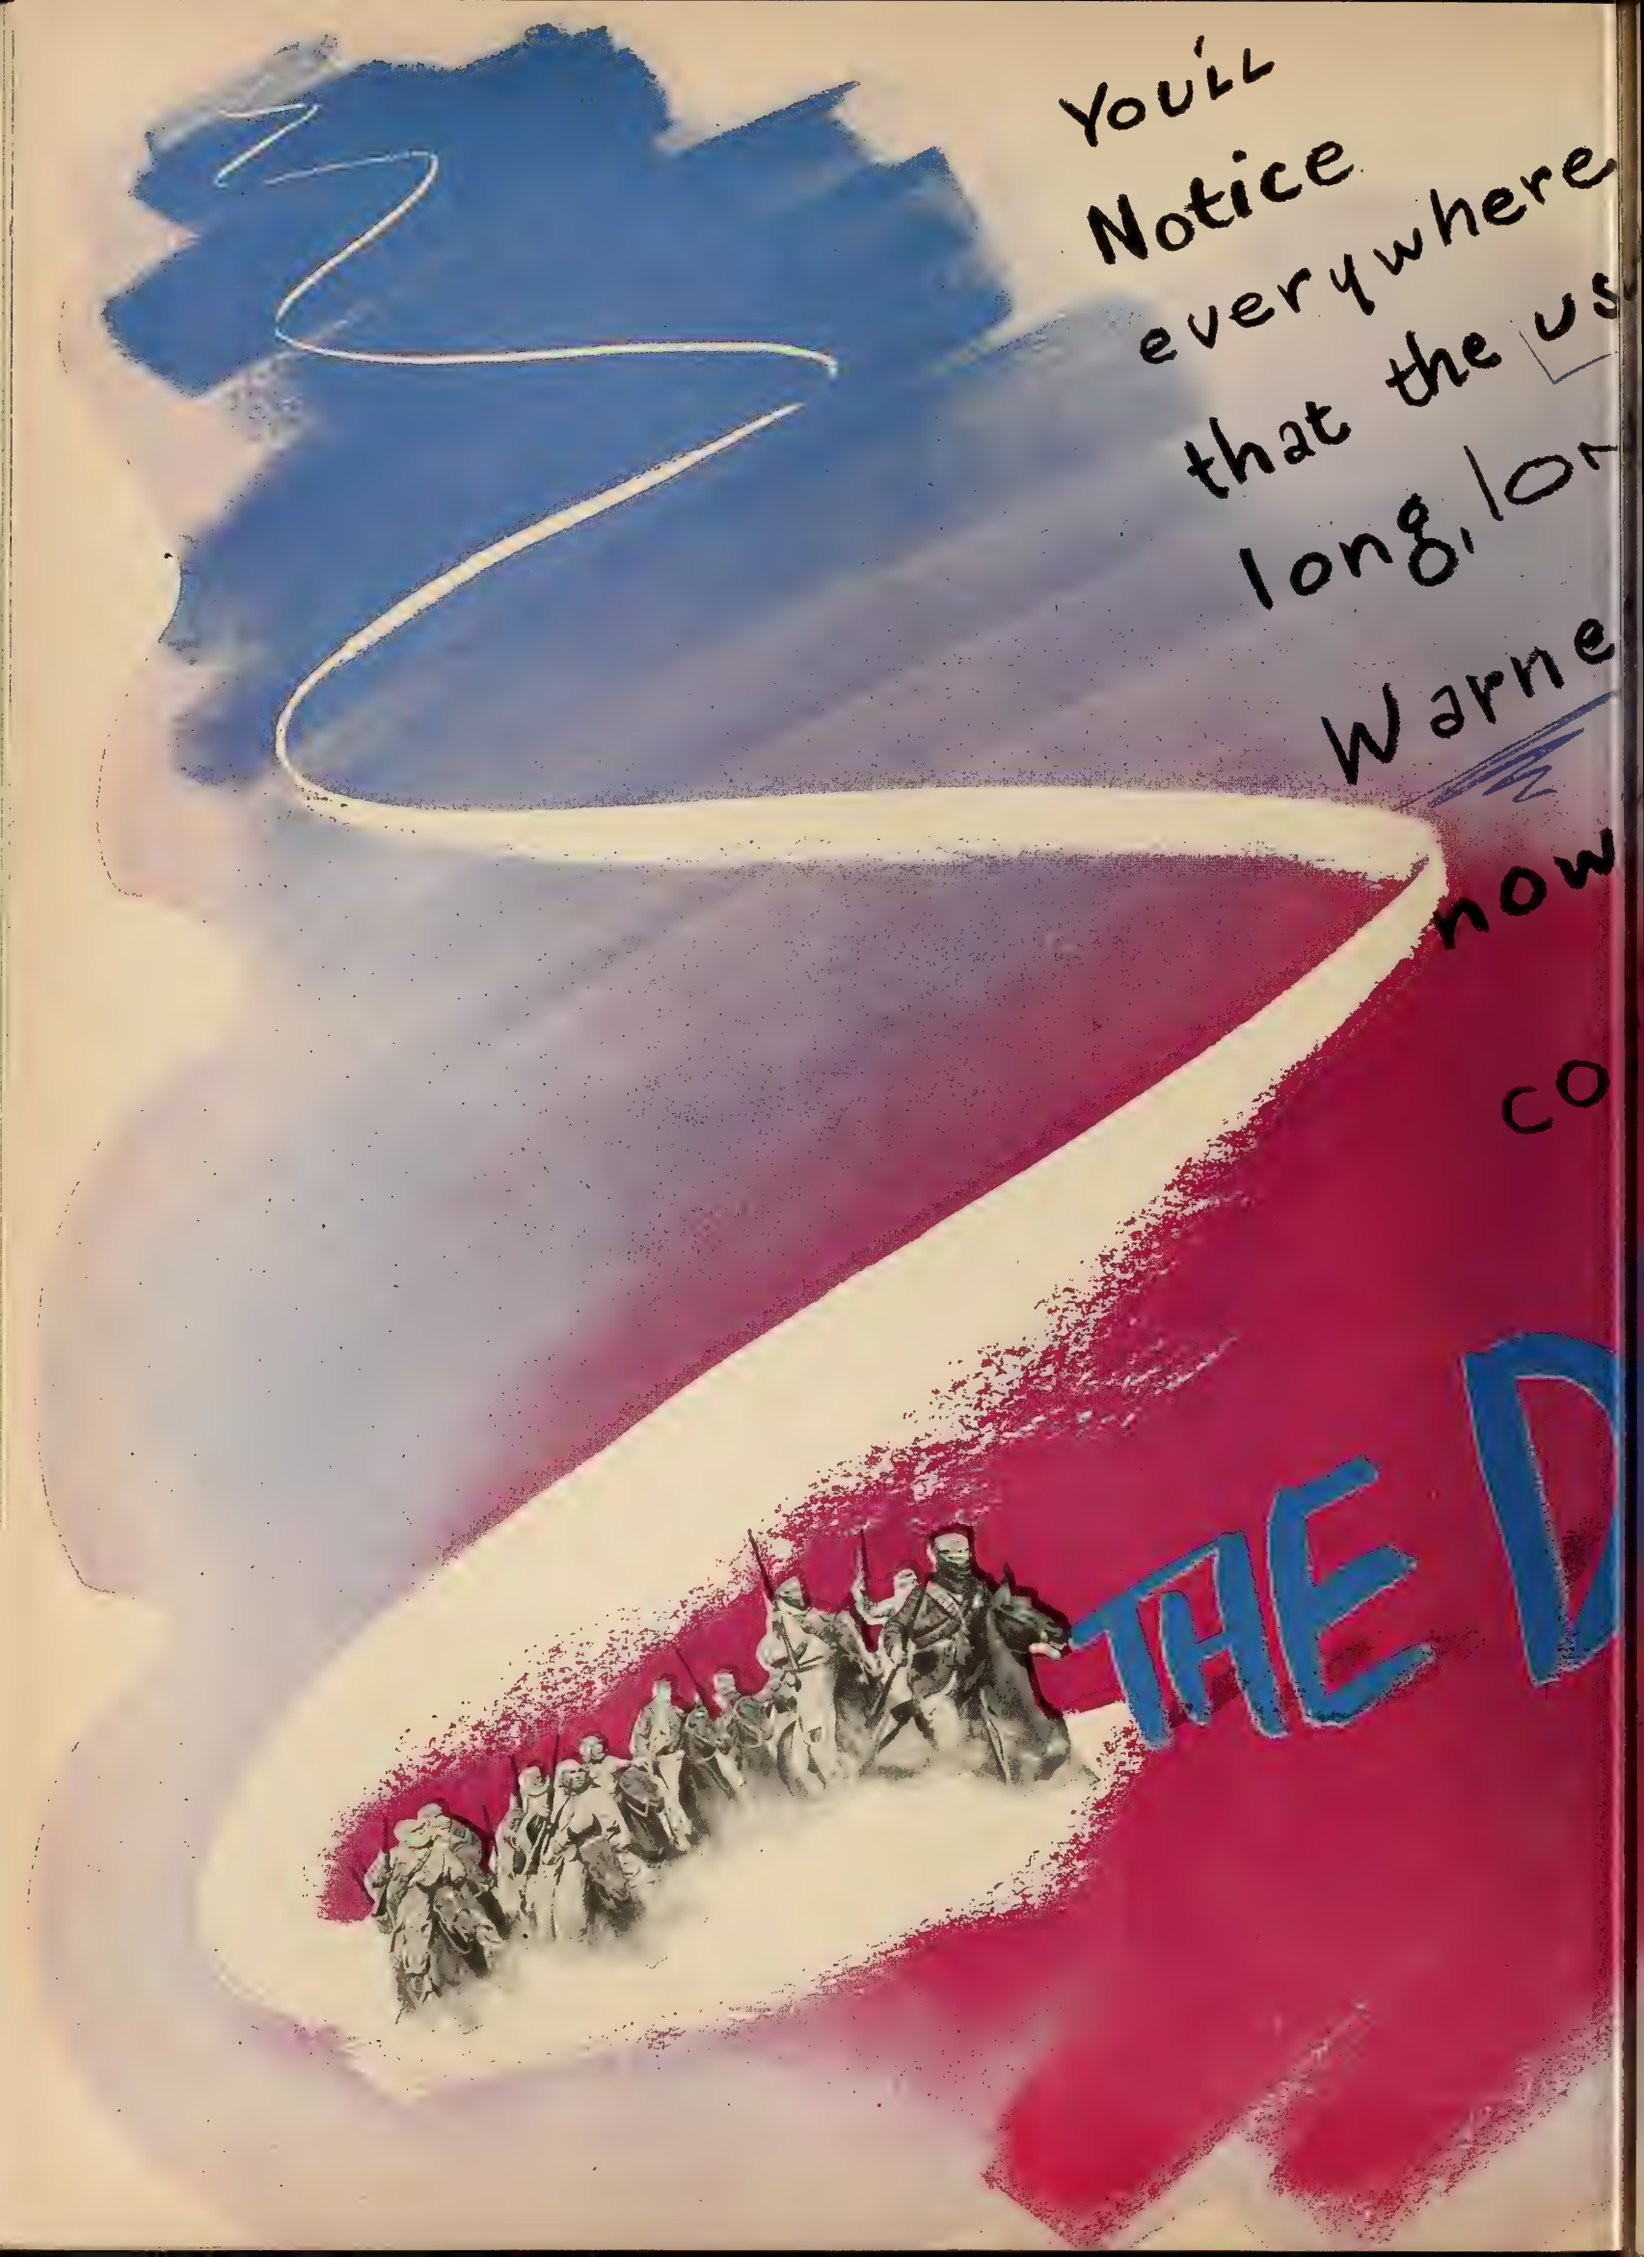
War workers on the swing shift were the first to see the film at a special reveille program, after which it ran continuously until 8 p.m., the hour of the formal premiere for dignitaries of the state and city. Present then were Hargrove's mother and two sisters, Cheryl and Daphne Hargrove of Mount Olive.

A. B. Craver, theatre chairman for the Fourth War Bond campaign, reports that three theatres, the Charlotte, Visulite, and Plaza, on their special bond day sold $85,000 worth of War Bonds.

T. D. Kemp, Jr., president of Southern Attractions; Jack Austin, city manager for the five Wilby-Kincey theatres; John Bachman, Warner Bros. manager in Charlotte; A. B. Craver, manager of the Plaza Theatre, and Ben Rosenwald of MGM were in charge of arrangements for the appearance here Thursday evening of Joe Howard and his "Gay Nineties Revue."

John E. Holston, manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in Charlotte, spent part of the week in Asheville and Hendersonville.

Sam Fletcher, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Kannapolis, was a recent caller at the Warner Bros. exchange.



CHICAGO

New officers of the Stage Hands Union, IATSE 110, will be nominated April 5 and voted upon May 3. Larry Cassidy is president of the union, but he has been ill for some time and is not active. Will Schraut is vice president and Frank Olson is secretary, treasurer and business agent. However, there has been some conflict in union affairs, and Tommy Kerns of the State Lake Theatre may head the opposition ticket. The union now has 390 members, virtually all working, and they recently received a five per cent wage increase, retroactive for seven months.

Film men who have occasion to use the Federal courts in the future will be able to obtain copies of official court reports, for the last Congress passed a law to permit the employment of official court reporters.

Balaban and Katz, in cooperation with the Herald-American, staged a War Bond premiere at their ace house, the Chicago Theatre, the night of February 20, with "A Guy Named Joe." a sell-out was predicted, scaled to a million-dollar gate.

Three hundred attended the Louella Parsons luncheon at the Hotel Sherman last week. Johnny Jones, Variety Club prexy, presided, while among the guests were John Balaban, Jules Rubens, Jack Kirsch, James Coston, Will Hollander, "Skeets" Gallagher, Stuart Erwin and Sally Eilers. Bill Baker of Republic was film ticket chairman and Ben Eisenberg of Monogram did the publicity.

President Richard Walsh, IATSE, was inducted into office last Thursday.

The delinquency problem is being attacked in Chicago by the young people themselves. The subject will come under close survey at the next meeting of the Chicago Youth Conference to be held March 3 under the direction of Raleigh Spink.

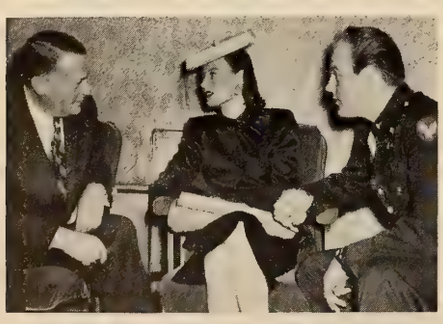
James Gorman of the Pantheon Theatre was elected president of the Chicago Operators Union last week. The other officers elected were: Frank Galluzzo, vice-president; Ora Beb, secretary-treasurer; Gene Atkinson, business agent. Arthur Tuckman, Samuel Klugman, Charles Funk, and Charles McNeill comprise the executive board, with Edward Schultz and Edward Riley as board trustees. The reform ticket won out.

Jack Kirsch, Allied prexy, reports bond sales to date of $315,000 and March of Dimes totals exceeding $40,000.

Burton Holmes, pioneer travel lecturer and producer of one of the first film travelogs, has opened his 51st season to record-breaking business at Orchestra Hall.

Norman A. Korfist, attorney for the Jackson Park Theatre, has gone in the Army, as have Tom Smyth, of the William Morris agency, and Arthur Goldberg, Balaban and Katz attorney.

Hank Porter of National Screen Service has gone to Phoenix, Arizona, for his winter vacation.



Joe Freedman has been named country salesman by MGM.

Lt. Bob Elson is now amusement director at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

The Parent-Teachers Association held its 47th anniversary meeting at the Stevens Hotel last week, and among the problems discussed was that of youth delinquency. The value of films in this work came in for much praise.

Business agent Sam Lamansky, Film Workers, B 45, reports the union has accepted a 44-hour work week, effective February 21. Time-and-a-half will be paid for work over 40 hours.

The premiere of the Thomas-Pine-Paramount "The Navy Way" has been set for March 24 at the Waukegan Genesee Theatre, although the time may be changed, owing to wartime situations.

CINCINNATI

Lee Goldberg, whose new exchange, Popular Pictures Company, is now firmly established, has with him as booker his sister, Sarah Goldberg, formerly with him at PRC in the same capacity. Goldberg's new secretary is Ann Breeze, and Dan Brodolf has taken over as shipper. Goldberg has found it necessary to increase his storage space in the three weeks since the inception of Popular Pictures. Among other product he has obtained new prints of RKO's reissue of "Last Frontier" and a number of reissues from other companies.

Among visitors to the Row last week were William T. Cain, Louisville, and Jim Chakeres, Chakeres Circuit, Springfield.

Metro's Josephine Gillhan, inspectress, has put her vacation to excellent use and is visiting her husband who is stationed on the West Coast.

Herb Byrd, Dayton, Ohio, exhibitor, has returned after a rest period at Hot Springs.

Among exhibitors who came in for the Cinema Club's installation dinner on Valentine Day were Milt Levine and Roy Letzinger, West Virginia; A. J. Sexton, junior and senior, Ashaland, Kentucky, and Fred Krim and Roy Wells, who brought in a large group from Dayton. About 150 exhibitors and members attended.

United Artists local exchange is looking forward to the new road show which is coming soon, "Since You Went Away," a three-and-a-half-hour performance.

Universal is doing early spring housecleaning, which will include new lighting in the office.

Universal's Jack Desmond, inducted district booker, was succeeded by Irene Lowe.

Present War Bond sales in Cincinnati theatres exceed all other drive returns, according to reports from the committee.

Fred Strief, who resigned as office manager at RKO, has been succeeded by Lou Seibert of United Artists sales department.

Al Sugarman, formerly sales representative for Columbia at Columbus, Ohio, has joined the Leo Yasenoff Circuit. Sugarman's only son is with the armed forces in Alaska.

George Boudot, who has been associated with Ralph Kinsler, chain theatre operator, is joining United Artists as office manager, effective March 6.

John Galvin, formerly United Artists office manager, has been promoted to salesman, covering West Virginia and Kentucky, according to an announcement by Harris Dudelson.

Ohio openings include Orville Woods' theatre at Camden, Ohio, closed since Woods joined the armed services. The theatre will be operated by Woods' former bookkeeper, Mark Keller.

Twentieth-Fox held a farewell party for Bill Graham, office manager, leaving to be branch manager at Buffalo's 20th-Fox exchange. Graham was presented with a handsome desk set.

Floods in Central Kentucky did not disrupt theatre business in that area.

CLEVELAND

George W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, in a recent bulletin asked the association members to cooperate with the Public Safety Department in devising ways and means to keep school children out of theatres during school hours.

Mrs. Dora Leslie, sister of P. L. Tanner of Film Transit Company, died here suddenly last week.

Howard Reif, member of the Scoville, Essick and Reif circuit, is vacationing in Florida. James E. Scoville of the same circuit leaves the end of the month to spend several months on a ranch near Tucson, Arizona.

James J. Grady, 20th-Fox district manager, spent a couple of days in the local exchange visiting with Branch Manager I. J. Schmertz.

L. F. Blumenfeld, RKO office manager, has joined the William N. Skirball organization as booking manager, with Otto Braeunig, auditor, returning to his old post as Blumenfeld's successor.

Nate Gerson has resigned as Vitagraph booker to join Nate Schultz' Monogram exchange, where he succeeds Frances Kates, who is taking an extended vacation in California.

Local theatre publicity and exploitation men are wondering how they can sell their wares with the present curtailment of newspaper advertising availability. In Cleveland the Plain Dealer and The Press have cut local display space 30 per cent from that used last year at this time, and are not accepting national display space at all. The Akron Beacon Journal has inaugurated a 35 per cent cut of last year's local display space, with none for national display. The Youngstown Vindicator is holding both local and national display space to last year's levels. Result is more extensive use of radio and street car advertising.

Henry, Sam, Jack and Leo Greenberger, all of the Community Circuit, were called to Trenton, N. J. last week by the sudden death of another brother, Joseph, 59, who succumbed to a heart attack.

Irving Ruben, former Hippodrome assistant manager, is back home from the Army with a physical discharge. He had completed his basic training.

E. F. McBride, manager of the Falls Theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, promoted 120 articles for his bond auction premiere, expecting a full house. The heaviest snow storm in ten years reduced the anticipated 1,000 patrons to 300, but it did not reduce their enthusiasm, for they pitched in and ran the bidding up to $131,000 in war bonds.

After waiting eight months, Ray Wallace now has new carpeting in his Morrison Theatre, Alliance. Ditto Dan Stearns at the Willoby Theatre, Willoughby. Both of them had placed their carpet orders with National Theatre Supply back in June.

Hugh Owen, Paramount division manager, and Duke Clark, district manager, made a tour of the district exchanges last week.

Charles Rich, Vitagraph district manager, returned late in the week from a visit to his Cincinnati and Indianapolis offices.

Jane Meisel Simon, Warner theatre assistant publicity director, is back from a three-week honeymoon in California.

Shirley Sogg, daughter of MGM Branch Manager and Mrs. Sogg, last week announced her engagement to Dr. Fred Soldow, a medical reserve officer, now interning at City Hospital.

Variety Club held its annual installation of officers party last Saturday when Bernard Kranze, RKO branch manager, took over the club's leadership from Vitagraph District Manager Charles Rich. Other officers for the year include Meyer Fine, first assistant barker; M. B. Horwitz, 2nd assistant barker; Edwin R. Bergman, secretary, and I. J. Schmertz, treasurer.

DES MOINES

Mel Evidon, Columbia manager at Des Moines for the past nine years, will be transferred to Kansas City as manager, effective April 1. Evidon, a veteran of more than 23 years in the film business, has been with Columbia in Minneapolis, Omaha, Columbus, Ohio, and Des Moines. He formerly was sales manager in the twin cities. in Des Moines have not been announced.

Wayne Dutton, veteran exhibitor, has passed another milestone in the theatre business. He recently completed his 26th year in the theatre business at Manchester, Iowa.

W. L. Hill, manager of the Vista Theatre at Storm Lake, took advantage of the tie-up of juvenile delinquency and the picture "Where Are Your Children?" by inviting the parents of 'teen-age boys and girls to a preview screening. He printed an open letter in the Storm Lake newspaper inviting the parents to attend the screening of the picture, which will be shown at a later date.

Bill Green, MGM exploitation representative at Des Moines, has entered the clinic at Rochester, Minn., for a physical checkup.

Arnold Johnson, Onawa exhibitor, is also reported as back on the job at Onawa following a visit to the hospial.

One of the most successful publicity campaigns was put on in Iowa in connection with MGM's "Lassie Come Home," with Bill Green, exploitation expert, in charge. Most of the promotion was covered through arrangements with more than 300 Iowa grocery stores in connection with the sale of a nationally-known dog food. Ten thousand four-page heralds were distributed to these grocers, all carrying "Lassie" ads. In addition, essay contests were held in various Iowa cities, with the winners getting a copy of the book from which the picture was made. A tieup was arranged with Dogs for Defense whereby recruits for the K-9 corps were accepted through the MGM office in Des Moines. In Des Moines several downtown firms decorated their display windows with "Lassie" and other dog displays.

DETROIT

Smoke filled the corridors in the Film Exchange Building on February 14, sending firemen scurrying around the building. They finally found the blaze in the seat of a pair of pants—unoccupied. The pants were hanging in a washroom and smoke was being wafted through the office building by the ventilating system. Firemen blamed spontaneous combustion for the hot pants.

Among entertainers who appeared at the Broadway Capitol's "Bond Wagon" show last week were Phil Brestoff and his Michigan Theatre orchestra, Vaughn Monroe, band leader and singer; Phyllis Lynne, vocalist with Monroe; the Yacht Club Boys, now appearing in Detroit at the Grand Terrace Casino, and Del Parker, songstress.

Ty Tyson of Station WWJ—The Detroit News—conducted the Bond auction at the Cinderella Theatre February 15.

A tragedy struck the Detroit theatre world February 14, when the body of Wilbert McCary, 41 years old, manager of the Rainbo Theatre, was found hanging from a pipe in a basement office in the theatre building. An employe found the body after having noticed a note pinned on the office door. It read: "Call the police." Friends said that McCary had been ill.

manager, promoted several cases of a soft drink for his many juvenile patrons. Nevertheless, Sam through his aggressiveness has succeeded in increasing his matinees almost 100 per cent.

George Fairley, assistant manager of the Capitol, has received the second prize of $25 for second highest sale of Xmas tickets in the Famous Players circuit across Canada. George sold $3,535 worth.

Probably one of the largest advertising budgets used in promoting a picture in a long time goes to Columbia and the Elgin Theatre for "None Shall Escape," which is currently playing to capacity. Both radio and newspapers are being exploited heavily.

Speaking of newspapers, last week the advertising department of the Citizen had letters sent to all advertisers drawing to their attention a 3 o'clock deadline for day-before copy. The attitude of the local newspapers (Citizen and Journal) have caused much consternation among local theatre managers, so much so that at times a theatre might be missing from the daily pages because of these rigid rules.

PHILADELPHIA

A 33-year-old New Jersey statute invoked last week as a move to curb juvenile delinquency and to "protect young children from molestation" by Camden County Prosecutor Gene R. Mariano was cause for a meeting among theatre men in the county with the prosecutor. Representatives of Camden's two large motion picture house chains met with the prosecutor and promised the cooperation of the theatres. The drastic order barred unaccompanied children under 14 from movies at all times. Representing Warner Bros. were Morty Levine, Warner district manager for Jersey, and Joseph Murdoch, manager of the Stanley theatre, and city manager for the Warners in Camden; and Joseph Varbalow, secretary of the Savar Amusement Company. The ruling was invoked by the sentencing of 70-year-old George Billetter to serve one to two years in the New Jersey State Prison on a charge of molesting an eight-year-old girl in a Camden theatre.

The Film Exchange Empoyes' Union, Local B-7, rejected a proposal that the exchanges go on a 44-hour week, which would give them four hours of overtime weekly. The union voted to stick to the 40-hour week.

Sam Rosen of Monogram pictures was delighted by the business done by "Where Are Your Children" at the Stanton Theatre. Opening with a midnight show on Friday, the business including Saturday and Sunday broke the house record. Preliminary work on the campaign had been worked out by Mark Freeland with the Warner Publicity Dept.

Film Classics has just opened a new exchange at 1225 Vine Street to handle re-issues. Jack Engle, former RKO salesman, will be the new exchange manager. Jack Greenberg, South Jersey exhibitor, and Saul Krugman, former United Artists salesman just inducted into the Navy, are said to be interested financially.

Mick Felt of Affiliated Theatres has passed his physical examination, as did Si Cohen, amusement advertising solicitor for the Daily News.

Milt Young of Warners received his 1-A classification just two days after his boss, Irving Blumberg. They are both scheduled to go up for examination in mid-March, and if they both pass there'll be some changes made.

The will of William E. Butler, prominent exhibitor who died recently, was probated this week, and one of the provisions of the will provides an annuity of $300 for the rental of films to be shown at the House of Good Shepherd.

William Huffman, former manager of the Warner Theatre in Atlantic City, was in town on leave from the Army.

The Victory Theatre in Trenton, dark for many years, has been sold as a commercial property. Mary Loretta O'Malley was listed as the owner of the property.

Stanley Benford, manager of the Colonial Theatre, is leaving Warners to take a position in New York with an independent circuit.

Esther Muchnick of the Warner publicity department had happily ordered a new fur jacket, when she decided to take advantage of the assistance offer being made by two deputies from the Internal Revenue Department who had kindly come to the Warner offices to help the employes in preparing their Income Tax returns. 1943 being the first complete year that she had worked, she was shocked when the deputy finally told her how much tax she would have to pay. "Well," said she resignedly, "there goes one sleeve off the jacket."

The Bellevue Stratford was the scene of Monogram's big party celebrating 50 years of Independence—Ray Johnston's thirty years, and Steve Broidy's twenty years. Sam Rosen acted as host.

PITTSBURGH

Local film exchange employes went "over the top" in the Fourth War Loan drive, virtually every company reporting that its employes had purchased more bonds in this drive than in any previous one.

Employes of the Coraopolis and Lyric theatres, Coraopolis, Pa., which are operated by F. E. McGillick, have settled their strike for higher wages and better working conditions and have returned to work.

The new booking and buying combine headed by Bert Stern, former branch and district manager for United Artists, and which recently opened an office on Film Row, has not yet started to function. In the meantime there are persistent rumors that another booking and buying combine may be organized, to be headed by a prominent branch manager of a large film distributing company. So far, however, nothing definite has been reported.

Martin Seed, son of the Mid-Western district manager for Warner Bros., Harry Seed, is a new addition to the staff of the local 20th Century-Fox office. Seed is acting in a booking capacity temporarily and later will be appointed student salesman.

Milton Lefton, salesman for PRC here, has signed up with the Navy, and Al Skegan, manager of the Cameraphone Theater, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, will be inducted into the Army very soon.

ST. LOUIS

The purchase of the Maplewood Theatre Building by the Sam Komm Movie Circuit for approximately $200,000 has caused much speculation in motion picture circles here. The Maplewood is under lease to the St. Louis Amusement Co., being managed by the Fanchon & Marco interests. This is the second theatre under lease to the St. Louis Amusement Co. to be purchased by Komm. It is presumed that when the leases on the Aubert and Maplewood expire those houses will join actively with Komm's circuit which now includes the Brentwood, Ivanhoe, Longwood, New Merry Widow, New Shenandoah, Peerless, Maryland and Whiteway.

Motion picture theatre owners and managers and the managers of the local film exchanges are watching with much interest the results of an experiment being conducted by the Fanchon & Marco interests at their Fox and Ambassador theatres. On Saturday, Sundays and holidays only one of the two feature pictures are to be shown at each show. This enables each house to provide more shows per day and play to more cash customers. For instance on Sunday, February 20, "Jane Eyre" was the sole feature at the Ambassador, while "The Fighting Seabees" was on the Fox screen. In the downtown sector the Ambassador has stiff competition from the two Loew's houses. Rex Williams, city manager for the Loew's theatres, has stated he will not follow the changed policy at the Ambassador and Fox and will continue to show two features at all shows.

The Maplewood Theatre, a St. Louis Amusement Co. house, reported the sale of $141,000 in Series E bonds. It had a bond premiere the night of February 15.

Richard F. Walsh, IATSE international president, has been here the past week on union business. The local stagehands have been seeking to force some of the motion picture theatres without stages to employ additional stagehands and hike wages. This controversy has been referred to Washington.

Members of the Boy Scouts in St. Louis who earned service ribbon awards in the Fourth War Loan drive are to be guests at the St. Louis Theatre on Saturday, March 11. Boy Scouts in St. Louis and St. Louis County obtained bond pledges for more than twice their $3,000,000 goal.

The manager of a St. Louis film exchange requested an Illinois theatre owner to view the film "Destination Tokyo." "Sorry to turn you down," read a return wire, "My destination is Tokyo, all right, but it is in the armed forces, not in my theatre."

Frank B. Warner, 79 years old, former member of the Missouri General Assembly, died of infirmities recently at his St. Louis home. Senator Warner was well known to motion picture theatre owners of Missouri and especially in St. Louis, where with his brother, the late Ferd Warner, he operated the old North Grand Theatre on Grand Boulevard near Natural Bridge Avenue some years ago. They also operated a large airdome in conjunction with the theatre.

Lester Kropp, chief booker for the Fred Wehrenberg Circuit and manager of the Melba Theatre, who recently underwent an operation at St. Anthony's Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to return to his home, where he will rest before resuming his duties.

Incomplete returns to the March of Dimes campaign have raised the total for motion picture theatres in Eastern Missouri to $65,502, with some 100 small houses still to be heard from.

One night recently ushers at a neighborhood theatre in South St. Louis were endeavoring to direct an overflow attendance "to the quickest possible seating." Mechanically they were chanting "Please take the next aisle to your right, the next aisle to your right for immediate seating." Suddenly there was pounding on an exit door. An usher hurried to the door and threw it open to find some 20 or 25 much embarrassed and annoyed patrons standing in the alley outside.

TULSA

Tulsa is looking forward this week with great anticipation to the "homecoming" Thursday of Jennifer Jones star of 20th Century-Fox's "The Song of Bernadette." Jennifer, who was known in Tulsa during her childhood and junior college years as Phyllis Isley, daughter of Phil Isley, theatre owner, will come from Hollywood with her two children, Bobby and Michael, to make a personal appearance at the Southwest premiere. The premiere will be held simultaneously at the Orpheum and Ritz theatres, with Jennifer appearing briefly at both performances.

Funeral services were held Thursday for Mrs. Willah Talbot, 53, wife of Ralph Talbot, owner of Tulsa's first-run motion picture theatres. Mrs. Talbot died Tuesday in a Tulsa hospital of uremia, resulting from a heart ailment which had confined her to bed since before Christmas.

Warren Patton, director of service in the four Talbot theatres in Tulsa, will report Tuesday for induction into the Army. Patton has been with Talbot theatres for eight years.

Warren Dial, chief usher at the Orpheum Theatre, has joined the Army Air Forces. He reported for training Saturday.

The call to duty in the armed forces, which has thinned ranks of the Griffith theatre organization in Tulsa considerably recently, took three more men last week. Jack Campbell, manager of the Pines Theatre, has joined the Seabees. Lee Dunham, assistant manager of the Delman, has left for training in the Army Air Corps, and Gene Porter, chief usher of the Delman, has been taken by the Army.

Due to increasing difficulty in employing cashiers, doormen and ushers in its chain of nine theatres, the Griffith system has closed the Pines, Will Rogers and Plaza until 6:45 p.m., eliminating matinees. The theatres formerly opened at 1:45 p.m. If the manpower situation grows worse, as is anticipated, the same policy may be extended to the other showhouses, it was learned.

VANCOUVER

The Municipal Theatre, Bow Island, Alberta, is making quite a few changes. The lobby and outside is being done over and the theatre will be reseated. Last year the inside was completely renovated.

Frank Philips, head of F.P.C.C. art department, is a real old-timer in the amusement business, starting 33 years ago in Toronto with Jerry Shea and Loew's theatres. His fronts on the main stem here are always outstanding and create plenty of attention.

"Women in Bondage" and "Melody Parade," a twin bill of first-run pictures, did so well it was held over for a second week at the Paradise Theatre, Vancouver.

W. R. Carr, traveling auditor for Warner Bros., spent the last two weeks checking over the local branch. From here he will go to Calgary, Alta.

A completely revised code of Ontario regulations for handling and distributing films is scheduled to go into effect next month, according to information from a most reliable source, following the adoption of amended rules resulting from the recent film exchange fire in Toronto's film centre. It is also now decided that film exchanges will not be compelled to move outside of Toronto.

Jimmie Davie, RKO booker, is very proud of his brother, Spike, who is overseas with the H. Q. staff. Spike had his picture in "The Picture of the Week" in a recent issue of Life magazine. Spike has been over there for three years.

Al Gold has sold out his interest in the Kinema and Tivoli, Calgary suburban theatres. Bud Goldin, who did a spell in the Army, has resumed control of both houses.

Jack Barron of the Grand Theatre, Calgary, is the father of a son born last week. The Grand is an Odeon unit playing first run pictures in Calgary.

Ivan Ackery of the Orpheum (F.P.) is running another contest to find "Vancouver's Dinah Shore." 200 girl vocalists have entered the contest and Ivan is busy sorting them out. Finals will be held on the Orpheum stage March 3-9. The Van Sun has donated a $50 prize (cash) and an evening gown to the winner and a local music store is putting up another $100 in prize money. The contest will be broadcast over a local station daily and two contestants will be selected during each broadcast to appear in the semi-finals at the Orpheum.

Vandalism is still a problem in Western Canada. Mike Healey of the Eagle and Lyric theatres, Swift Current, Sask., has offered a reward for information leading to the conviction of vandals who slashed a number of new seats in his theatres recently. Razor blades were found near the damaged seats.

"Madame Curie" opened to tremendous crowds at the Capitol last week and it looks set for a run of several weeks. "The Lodger" at the Orpheum also doing better than average business. Nasty weather kept the grosses down last week.

From a reliable government source it has been learned that the scheduled meeting at Ottawa between the National Council of Independent Exhibitors of Canada and officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board on trade grievances has been indefinitely postponed, pending developments in negotiations between branches of the industry. This is the first indication of a tangible nature that agreement and unity is in sight within the industry across the Dominion. What is wanted is an agreement for a new industrial code, incorporating exchanges, circuits, and unaffiliated exhibitors, and for a basis on which to approach the government to ask the lifting of restrictions which the industry believes are outdated. But before action can be expected the industry must show a united front.

Lieutenant John D. Gerrard, formerly assistant manager of the Atlas Theatre, Victoria, now serving with the Canadian Navy, has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Commander.

GINGER'S RECRUITS. Immediately prior to the premiere of "Lady in the Dark" at the Hollywood Paramount Theatre, nine young women from the Los Angeles area were inducted into the Women's Reserve of the U. S. Marine Corps under the sponsorship of Ginger Rogers, who is married to a Marine and whose mother, Mrs. Lela Rogers, was a member of the Marine Corps in the last war.

WASHINGTON

Loew's Capitol Theatre and the Del Rio Restaurant and Supper Club staged a War Bond Rally last Friday night, at which 1000 pairs of nylon stockings were auctioned off to Bond buyers. Kathryn Grayson, Metro's young singing star, took part.

Phyllis Hammerschlag, secretary to A. Julian Brylawski, at Warner Bros., entertained a group of girls on Valentine's Day, with a fried chicken supper. Those who attended were Anne De Mello and Dorothy Kolinsky, of the advertising and publicity dept.; and Kitty McGlynn and Frances Shafer of the booking dept. Pat Story, a friend of Miss Hammerschlag's was also present.

The Apex Theatre of the K-B Amusement chain is the third Washington Theatre to exceed its goal during the 4th War Loan Drive. The Apex sold 1150 individual bonds against a seating capacity of 1050 seats. Charles Demma, manager, ranks with Jack Foxe, of Loew's Columbia and Fred Thomas, of Warner Bros.' Earle, in reaching the capacity for his theatre.

Jack Foxe, manager of Loew's Columbia, had an auction sale in his theatre last Thursday night. Fifty gifts, ranging all the way from nylon hose to a double room with bath at a downtown hotel, were presented. This was made possible through the courtesy of downtown merchants, who donated the items to further the sale of War Bonds.

John Allen, branch manager of MGM, announced that his company was cooperating with the 4th War Loan Drive by dating in a number of top bracket features for War Bond premieres throughout the Washington territory.

Representatives to the National Convention of the Variety Club: Hardie Meakin, National Convassman; J. E. Fontaine, National Delegate; Nathan Golden, National Delegate; Fred S. Kogod, National Alternate; Harry Backman, National Alternate; Rudolph Berger, Special Welfare Representative.

New members of the Variety Club inducted recently were: Charles V. Grimes, district manager of Warner Bros. theatres; Jack Morton, owner of Jack Morton orchestras; Maurice H. Kafka, business manager of Sidney's Orchestras Inc.; Leslie B. Halper, branch manager of Decca Records.

Metroites who attended the Valentine luncheon at the Variety Club were: the Harry Cohens, the Harry Bachmans, Jack Goldberg, Mrs. William P. Herbst, Marge Allen, Virginia Russell, Buddy Hill and Tom Baldridge. MGM branch manager John Allen took his place at the head table as presiding Chief Barker.

Charlotte Duncan, secretary to Frank La Falce, director of advertising and publicity at Warner Bros., is back at work, after being out ill.

Lamar Keen of the Capitol, Winchester, working with Robert Y. Conrad, Post 21, American Legion, arranged a full page ad in the Winchester Evening Star, asking for support of the 4th War Loan Drive. The ad was made possible by various merchants.

Joseph Bernheimer, 20th Century-Fox, has been inducted into the Army; also Ned Bord, Associate Barker of the Variety Club. Captain Edward A. Byron, former radio writer and producer, has returned from New Guinea.

Deepest sympathy to Norma Van Osdale of MGM upon the death of her father.

The first meeting of the Variety Club Publicity Committee was attended by Sam Wheeler, Chairman; Frank La Falce, Vice-Chairman; Jay Carmody, Evening Star; John Maynard, Times-Herald; Tom Baldridge, MGM; Lawrence Heller, Station WINX; Lollie Feldman, Secretary of the Variety Club; Ray Bell, Pennsylvania Central Airlines.

New face at Metro is that of Evelyn Applebaum of the contract dept.

MGM Pep Club President, Catherine Murphy, has returned to her booking stall after a few days' illness.

MGM district manager Rudolph Berger spent a week in the Charlotte territory. While there he attended a going-into-the-army party for salesman Pete Prince, former Washington exchange booker. Also in attendance at the party was Sidney Eckman of the Army, former Washington student booker.

PORTLAND

Oregon has gone over the top in a big way, and to date the Fourth Bond score reads $115,-230,000, or 116 per cent, with E Bonds of this amount totaling 31 millions or 82 per cent of quota.

The Rose Theatre at Roslyn, Wash., suffered a loss of $50,000 in a fire which totally destroyed the house on February 12.

George W. McMurphy, for some years leading Portland theatre executive, is now serving as Government co-ordinator of professional sports in his post as chief of recreational section of office civilian requirements.

Free Movie Day in connection with Fourth War Loan drive activities is announced for first-run houses by Albert Fink of Evergreen, and Mrs. J. J. Parker of Parker Theatres, and Bob White, exhibitor chairman for the state, effective February 24.

Peter David, of Tacoma, Wash., for some years operating a string of motion picture theatres, died at his home from a heart attack.

Walter Lee Casey, Jr., of the Rex Theatre, Bonners Ferry, Ida., is another theatre manager who carried out his pledge to sell a bond for every seat in his theatre.

Lieut. Roy Brobeck, in the Army at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., made a surprise visit to Seattle Film Row.

Whitney (Cy) Young, Warner salesman for eastern Washington, has resigned to operate the Turf Club of Spokane.

The State Theatre of Red Bluff, Cal., owned by T & D Jr. Amusement Enterprises, was destroyed by fire February 18 with loss of $100,000. Origin undetermined.

Herman Wobber, general sales manager on coast for 20th-Fox, visiting Seattle and Portland exchanges.

Wayne Christy is the manager of the newly-opened Rivoli Theatre, Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moyer of the Sellwood and Gresham theatres, made a second tour to Florida and Southern points.

Lester Holmes, after a number of years in California, is back in Seattle as assistant to Bill Houck at the Telenews Theatre.

Chet and Sue Perunko of the Kay St. Theatre, Tacoma, off to Palm Springs.

Buck Seale, salesman for Columbia Pictures, has been classified 1-A by Uncle Sam.

Oscar Nyberg of the Fox Spokane, put an extra heavy campaign for "For Whom the Bell Tolls," with increased evening prices to $1.15.

Jerry Safron, Western district sales manager accompanied by James Beal, Oregon, went to Seattle for regional conference with Manager Walton.

Maude Richards has resigned as business agent for Seattle Film Exchange, Local B-21.

Wayne and Harvey Johnson of Battle Ground, Wash., announce they have taken over operation of North Tillamook County theatres, including the Rose Theatre at Garibaldi, Ore., Roseway Theatre at Wheeler, Ore., and the Rockaway Theatre at Rockaway, Ore.

BACK FROM WAR FRONT. Pathe News Correspondent David Oliver, returned after nine months overseas with the RAF and the Fifth Army, as he appeared at a trade press conference this week at Pathe News' home office. A newsreel cameraman for 23 years, and with Pathe since 1936, Oliver had a number of narrow escapes while in England and Italy. A 16 mm. mobile unit, in operation in Africa then transferred to the Italian front, has provided movie entertainment for our fighting men. The boys don't complain about the movies, Oliver said, "they look at anything." Biggest hit in the USO camp show tours, he added, was Bob Hope.

SAN FRANCISCO

"Yippee, yip, yip!" The wild and woolly west comes to the West with Robert L. Lippert's unique little film house, perched right in the heart of San Francisco's downtown Market Street. Nestled between two other theatres, the Round-Up opened February 12. It sports no marquee, but has a sign flush with the front of the building, showing a rider astride a bucking horse, and the foyer has murals of covered wagons. No effort is made to corral the patrons, who patiently await their turn at the rustic-looking box-office, and the waiting line gradually lenghens out and wavers onto the other theatres' territory. Complete Western atmosphere is in evidence inside the film house, with a panorama of the West covering the walls; a downstairs lounge all done in rustic detail and the entire personnel, including ushers and cashiers, attired in Western style. Picture policy of the house is two horse-operas per day and a change every day, and is proving to be popular with the theatre-going public.

Affiliated Theatres, Inc., has added a twenty-second theatre to the Robert L. Lippert northern California chain by the opening of the Encinal in Alameda, Cal. The regular double-bill policy will be followed.

Interesting to note that thirteen Market Street theatres have adopted the new-style silhouetted marquee lettering. Among these are: Fox-West Coast Circuit's Warfield, Paramount and Fox; Blumenfeld's Orpheum, Esquire and United Artists; the Embassy, Telenews, Newsreel and the RKO Golden Gate; all of which have black letters on a glowing white background. Included, too, are the Strand and Robert L. Lippert's Studio and Round-up film houses, which decided to be a little different and have red plastic letters instead of black. Three theatres have kept the old-style marquee lettering with a white stencil-like effect on a black background, including Fox-West Coast's two second-runs the State and St. Francis, and the Regal.

T & D Junior Enterprises, Inc., in San Francisco, is mourning the loss of the State Theatre in Red Bluff, Cal. Fire destroyed the building, which also housed the Elk's Club, U. S. Employment office, several shops, and the highway patrol office, with an estimated loss set at more than $200,000.

Something new will be added to attractions at the Telenews Theatre, downtown, by means of a planned series of exhibitions by noted Bay area artists to be held in the gallery (formerly called the downstairs radio lounge, where interviews were held). First exhibition will be silk screen work by Marion Cunningham of San Francisco, with a sort of "art in action" being demonstrated.

A double-premiere was held at the Larkin, an international language film house, to introduce two new Russian films, "Leningrad Music Hall" and "Day After Day."

Another tribute was paid the theatrical arts, when the S.S. Augustin Daly, named after the playwright, was launched at Richmond, Cal., after being christened by Spar Lieutenant Katherine Stuurman.

PALM SPRINGS

The spacious lobby of the Desert Inn was packed with golf and betting enthusiasts last Friday night at the Calcutta Pool of the 9th Invitational Golf Tournament. Director Dave Butler proved the best auctioneer of the evening, selling Johnny Dawson, champion amateur, for $2400. Don Ameche was a consistent bidder on practically every player.

Arlene Judge, the former Mrs. Dan Topping, was seen in a sun suit, bicycling down Indiana Avenue.

Sonja Henie, the present Mrs. Dan Topping, with the Captain dining at the Doll House.

Rotus Harvey of the Harvey Circuit, San Francisco, his wife and little daughter here for a rest after a sojourn to Washington on the consent decree matter. Mr. Harvey is head of the Northern California Independent Exhibitors Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielson, Tacoma, Wash., exhibitors here for the season.

Wes Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, Eugene, Ore., exhibitors down for a short stay.

John Hamrick, Evergreen Circuit, Seattle, played in Invitational Golf Tournament.

There was a packed house at the Plaza the last night of the War Loan drive. The picture, "The Sullivans," was well received—not a dry eye in the house. Many screen celebrities were there, including Mr. and Mrs. William Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lukas, Mr. and Mrs. Don Ameche, Ricardo Cortez, Sonja Henie and Charles Butterworth. Walter Kofeldt was master of ceremonies.

Fred Astaire has been in town looking chipper.

Looks like John Hamrick is here for keeps. He was made a Lion at the last luncheon meeting.

Loew's Sell $10,082,628 Bonds

Total 4th War Loan Bond sales for Loew's circuit through February 13th, stand at $10,-082,628. This represents sales of 126,387 individual bonds. Leading the circuit is Joe Samartano, manager of Loew's Poli Palace, Meriden, Conn. who has sold 5½ times his capacity. Loew's Columbia, Washington, the Astor, N. Y., and Loew's American, Bronx, have doubled their capacity quota.

A MESSAGE FROM THE AMERICAN EXHIBITORS

to the Red Cross

We in the American Motion Picture Industry, all of us, are keenly and constantly aware of our patriotic duty. And willingly we meet it. But all that we do — as often as called upon — is still small in measure when compared with our fighting sons who are giving their last measure of devotion.

Yes, there was a lot of hard work in the March of Dimes and in the Fourth War Loan and all the others. But the war goes on and we want to go on helping.

. . . so bring on the Motion Picture Industry's Red Cross Week, March 23 — 29.

We know what the Red Cross means to our Boys. Those Boys never say "no" when they've a job to do. The Red Cross never says "no" when they've a job to do. We Exhibitors won't say "no" to the job we've got to do.

Short Subject Reviews

With the Marines at Tarawa (Great)

WAC-Univ.—Documentary 19 mins.

The most dramatic American film released for public consumption since the start of World War II, this Technicolor Official Marine Corps picture is the eye-opener which all America has been eagerly awaiting. Produced by the U. S. Government with the cooperation of Warner Brothers and "shot" by Combat Photographers of The Second Marine Division, the film is being distributed by Universal on a non-profit basis. Here is the thrilling, inspiring, real-life story of our debt to almost a thousand brave Marines who gave their lives to win a stepping stone toward Tokyo. It is the story from the time of embarkation for the objective to the ascension of Old Glory atop a shell-torn palm tree and the burial of some of our heroes at sea after the Atoll had been won. In daring camera shots under fire, the battle scene unfolds—men die, the wounded are evacuated, tanks go into action, bulldozers and steam shovels operated by the fearless Seabees rehabilitate the airfield while gunfire continues roundabout; the first plane lands, flame-throwers smoke out the resisting Japs, Japs die before your eyes, and no attempt has been made to hold back those pictures of our dead which show the price of war. Jap dead float in the surf, cover the beaches, the blasted pillboxes, and their price is lost in the satisfaction of the knowledge that they will never kill another American boy. It is a masterpiece of film reporting of a magnificent victory for American Arms.

Amazing Metropolis (Fair)

Universal (8355) Variety Views 9 mins.

This film gives the impression of great strides being made in Hyderabad, India, under the Nyzams' rule. It shows the imposing university with its students arriving in modern busses, a tremendous hospital with fine facilities for the physical uplift of a great many people, the enormous palace and Government buildings. What it fails to deal with are the common people of India of which we read so much, the little people whose plight has brought about controversy. Without getting involved as to whether this is a propaganda reel we must admit that it is an interesting look-see at a much discussed place on the earth which will become a world problem in the post war era.

Tom Turk and Daffy (Excellent)

WB (9702) Looney Tune 7 mins.

Leon Schlesinger's staff of cartoonists and animators (according to the title card) cooked up the plot for this Technicolor cartoon: Pilgrim Porky Pig seeks a turkey that has begged Daffy Duck to hide him from the hunter. At first the Duck is happy to comply, but when Porky offers to share roast turkey, Daffy's good intentions are torn asunder by the temptation. He reveals where the turkey is hidden. The turkey eludes Porky, then has his revenge on Daffy. Laugh-provoking gags and clever animation make this an excellent cartoon to point up the entertainment value of any program. A cartoon for the entire family.

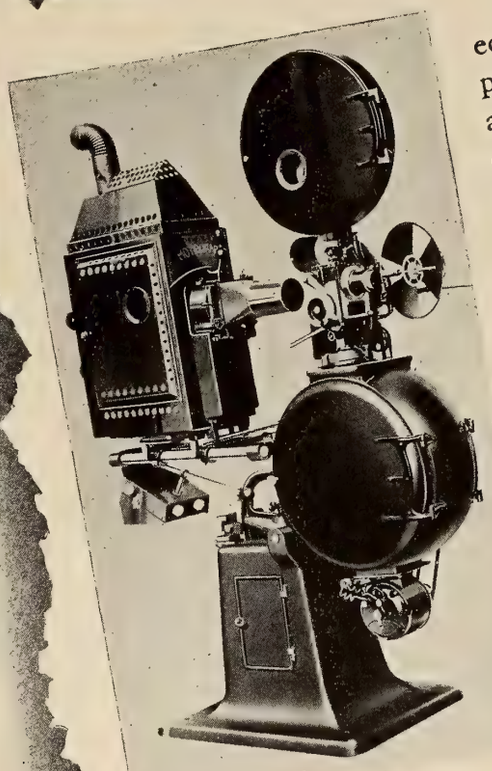
SOMETHING WORTH TRYING

OVER in England, where motion picture producers, distributors and exhibitors have had long experience of the need for getting along with less by making what you have last longer, there has grown up a movement which might well be emulated over here.



In a number of districts, the projectionists' groups have set up "film-care committees," on which, in many instances, there are representatives of the distributors. Such committees, as we understand it, work chiefly through a policy of discussion of ways and means of eliminating practices which cause film mutilation all along the line.

How much good can come of any such "educational" work is, we think, rather well illustrated by the report that there is in preparation a series of "lecturettes" written by experts and to be made available for reading and discussion at local meetings. Further refinement of the work, and what undoubtedly will prove a most effective extension, is the plan to produce a film to illustrate points which are of importance in the handling of film by the projectionist. Such educational work can have only the finest benefits, not alone to the immediate problem of conservation of film, but also in assisting the conscientious projectionist to gain even greater skill and knowledge of the kind of work by which he earns his living and through which he can continue to progress in his chosen vocation.

Over here in the U. S., there are the facilities for some such educational program, handled on a well-planned and executed basis. Over here, too, theatremen as well as projectionists have had many reminders of the value of the educational campaign which was put into action and carried far, considering that it was done practically single-handed by a well-known figure in the field—P. A. McGuire, for many years associated with International Projector Corporation and for all of said years a tireless drum-beater for the cause of better projection.

We think it worth suggesting to both theatre owners and the projectionist organizations that they canvass the possibilities of getting something organized on a national basis—to be put into action locally of course—for the further extension of discussion, forums and meetings at which the whole matter of giving the people who pay to see picture shows the best possible reproduction of Hollywood art and talent, the war scenes from the battle fronts and all the action which is captured by the cameras for the information, enlightenment and entertainment of the public. The print situation would be merely one of many items. Over here there is no acute print problem, though of course in wartime it is a patriotic duty as well as a necessity to make every last bit of celluloid last as long as possible. But above and beyond the prints are the matters of projector care, but even beyond that is the most important of all—Better Projection.

A Motiograph Ad of 1916 said:

The daily delivery of service, easily, economically, uncomplainingly, the dependable readiness to do everything and anything that a motion picture projector ought to do when placed under exacting conditions, is the supreme test of a projector.

And this kind of service is possible only from projectors that are designed and built by builders with many years of experience in the projector industry and vast resources of organization equipment.

Building projectors over 20 years, we claim we have in the Motiograph De Luxe a projector unrivaled in beauty, projection and endurance.

We stand ready, and our distributors everywhere stand ready, to prove our claim for perfect projection, long life and small upkeep.

And you can say that again in respect to the brand new Motiograph Projector which will be offered as soon as we have won the Victory . . . and you can help hurry that Victory by buying more and more War Bonds NOW!

Little reminders that will help to keep the physical operation of your theatre running at peak efficiency.

FEBRUARY 27th to MARCH 25th 1944

SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
27 March winds ahead. Check roof cornice for bricks or tile loosened by ice. Prevent accidents.	28 Check water tower. Repair leaks, make sure roof is tight and supports firm. Paint rusted areas.	29 Check upright sign supports, cables and wiring to obviate wind damage. Paint rusted stanchions.	1 Test fire escapes of counterbalanced type to make sure they are in proper working condition.	2 For maximum light, oil generator and clean brushes and commutator weekly with rough paper.	3 Are voices of the boys in the booth annoying patrons? Make sure ports in booth are closed.	4 Set up a lighting schedule for staff to conserve power. Plan minimum light after closing B.O.
5 Have cleaners dust or wash all ornamental bric-a-brac and statuary. Also polish furniture.	6 Clean upholstering of foyer, lobby or lounge room furniture. Have broken parts repaired.	7 Caution employes on need to report all accidents at once to manager, no matter how slight.	8 In bad weather do you make it policy to open the house early for convenience of patrons?	9 Check your picture for stray light on screen, proscenium or walls which can distract audience.	10 Examine all carpet for tears or loose sections which may trip patrons. Make this a daily duty.	11 Are your staff on the alert to pick up ticket stubs and candy wrappers at all times?
12 Check all lighting fixtures for dirty glass and burned out globes. Relamp with new spring colors.	13 Check all outside exist lights after closing B. O. Make sure they're kept on thru last show.	14 If your balcony is closed during the day have an usher check it regularly as safety measure.	15 Order style chart of summer uniforms for staff to avoid delivery delays by ordering early.	16 Examine all lobby and lounge mirrors. Resilver, replace or eliminate any in bad condition.	17 Does your doorman have the schedule of show times and a list of coming attractions handy?	18 Replace pictures and drapes in rest rooms to provide fresh atmosphere as spring tonic.
19 Sticky candy when tramped into your carpet invites a rodent invasion. Take precautions!	20 Is your first aid kit well supplied and available at all times in event of an emergency?	21 Has the standrail become shabby and in need of paint, varnish or a new fabric covering?	22 Get billposter to bring in outdoor poster stands for painting and repair. Avoid shoddy look.	23 Auditorium floors should be cleaned of all gum before paint is applied. Check your floor!	24 Paint damp areas, corridors, exits to freshen up and eliminate odors. Use light colors.	25 Batteries used in emergency systems require a regular check up schedule to prolong life.

Projection

Become a Better Projectionist by Practicing the A B C's

Observe Simple Rules of Wartime Economy in the Booth

"Economy" must continue to be the watchword in the projection department of motion picture theatres, "Economy," that is, which effects savings of equipment life by reducing the ravages of wear, as well as careful expenditure of the supplies and accessories needed to operate the projectors.

From the standpoint of making the most of consumable supplies there are the following very obvious questions the projectionist can ask himself:

Am I getting the most possible burning life out of carbons? Or am I discarding carbon stubs which could be used for short reels or trailers?

Do my carbon-savers actually save money, or do they split and thus waste more carbon than they save?

Am I keeping a running inventory of all consumable supplies (carbons, oil, tubes, fuses, etc.) in order to avoid overstocking items or being caught short because certain items may become too low in the reserve?

Am I carefully dating all tubes when they are installed in the sound units, and are they marked as to date when they have outlived their usefulness, in order that a check may be kept on the life of tubes?

Am I servicing my various units of equipment thoroughly, giving each unit calling for definite periodic lubrication and cleaning the attention requisite to assure its efficiency of operation and the longest life possible?

In connection with each of these points of economy, of course, there are right and wrong ways to carry out the program. Proper lubrication, naturally, means the application of just enough of the correct grade of oil only at the various friction points and at specified intervals —and it does not mean an excess of oil "now and then" at such times as the inclination or inspiration strikes the man in charge of the equipment. Excess oil not only runs off the point to be lubricated without serving any purpose other than to waste the oil, but can do costly damage to the film by spreading into the film track of the projector.

Economy, also, means maintenance of the proper spring tension of the film gate—which should be adjusted to a minimum at which the film will remain steady on the screen at the standard projection speed of 90 feet per minute. Maintenance of this condition at all times will prolong the life of the intermittent star, cam and sprocket, the film tracks, the tension pads. Also, it will assure the projectionist that he is doing his part to conserve film prints and safeguard the lives of his fellow workers as well as the public whose patronage of his theatre is the one reason for him being the member of an important craft working in an important industry. Many fires start through film breakage; many cases of film breakage in the projector trace directly to improper tension. Much of the mutilation which ruins prints for the other theatres and causes waste at a time when the greatest economy of film stock should be practiced, results from improper tension.

Economy in the projection booth means careful handling of the vacuum tubes for the sound system. It means that the proper warm-up period should be allowed before connecting the tubes to the high voltage plate circuit, as well as very careful handling of the tubes upon every occasion when there is occasion to touch them.

Economy calls for careful handling of the cast aluminum reels to prevent bending due to unnecessary pressures or dents and bending from dropping the reel to the floor.

Economy means the burning of carbons only within the amperage range recommended by the manufacturer. The burning rate of the trim used, and the length of the positive and negative carbons required for the various-size reels, should be accurately determined. Such data will enable the projectionist to obtain the maximum service from each package of carbons—without sacrificing quality on the screen.

All of the foregoing, of course, is elemental —has been said and said over and over again. But the projectionist who takes the attitude that this repetition is "mere tiresome A B C's" of the job of running a show and the equipment necessary therefor, takes a different view than that which he will find to be a common attitude on the part of the vast majority of the leading men (the fellows with the big jobs and the national reputations) in the projection field.

It is a fact that this repetition occurs only for the reason that the best informed and most authoritative projectionists themselves stress and emphasize and repeat the fundamentals. They know the value of fundamentals and the necessity for being precise about the A B C's. They are aware of the importance of these elementals, for they know that, no matter how high they go in their responsibilities as projectionists, they cannot ever get away from the basic, the fundamental. Moreover, experience in supervising the work of many projectionists has demonstrated to them that it is the simple, the fundamental things that snarl matters for the younger, less experienced hands at the craft and that it is also neglect of attention to the fundamentals that accounts for the lack of progress shown by the more experienced men who do not seem to develop the efficiency their length of service and opportunities for practice has afforded them.

The observance of the basic rules; those tiresome little details which have become so only because they must be done over and over again (which is why they are so important) permits the more accomplished and resourceful projectionist to go on to the grasp of those refinements and more difficult accomplishments which mark the expert.

It is known to many who have had occasion to check up on complaints about equipment that in a great many instances the fault was not with the apparatus, but with the manner in which it was being handled and operated.

As a demonstration of this latter point, take the matter of sound quality. It is true that many auditoriums are so poorly designed that it is hopeless to deliver quality sound uniformly in the theatre. Such conditions are certainly not the fault of the projectionist or the equipment. Only corrective work to take the bugs out of the faulty acoustics can bring an improvement under these circumstances. However, it has been the experience of many and many an engineer that complaints about poor sound, particularly non-uniform volume, in a theatre was not (as per the complaint lodged with the equipment manufacturer or the studio recording the sound on the film) the fault of equipment nor recording. It was the lack of resourcefulness on the part of the projectionist.

Where an auditorium is too reverberant in particular spots, and, by contrast, too dead in others, there is certain to result an effect of too much sound volume in one portion of the house than another, particularly where deep male voices are accentuated. But the projectionist who really knows his equipment and his theatre can reduce the evil of ear-splitting sound for those patrons located in the sections where the sound echo, or reverberation, is excessive He can do this by fader changes made in conformity to his study of the particular film in relation to his knowledge of known faults in his auditorium. Now, it is far preferable that such theatres receive treatment for correction of the faulty acoustics, which is a job for the theatre owner to do. But the point is cited merely to emphasize that resourcefulness in the projection booth can accomplish many things. Such resourcefulness grows out of study of the equipment, and the theatre the projectionist is handling, as well as from a well-grounded understanding not only of the mechanics but the theory of projection and sound reproduction.

This brings us back to where we came in. The projectionist who pays strict attention to the little details of economy in the operation of his equipment, the one who never grows tired or bored with his A B C's, is the one who goes on to greater achievement, greater resourcefulness and is able to do those things which, in these days of limited supplies, even money may not be able to buy.

KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK WITH YOUR VICTORY CARBONS

EXHIBITORS and projectionists across America are to be congratulated for their splendid contribution to the war effort by conserving and recovering much of the copper plating of their "National" Victory Carbons . . . copper that would have been completely lost but for their cooperation.

Naturally the copper coating on Victory Carbons is as thin as practicable, because copper is a vital war material. This calls for strict maintenance of arc current within the recommended range, and careful adjustment of the carbon feed ratio.

Satisfied theater audiences everywhere are testimony to the constant attention being given to the current and feed factors.

In addition, tons of copper drippings and copper plate stripped from carbon stubs have been turned back into production channels as your Government urged.

Your continued cooperation in saving copper is still of utmost importance, for copper needs go right on expanding as America's war production grows. You've done a splendid job. Keep up the good work!

As a reminder, check the table below for carbon trim and current values specified for your equipment. A bulletin describing completely the operation of the Victory High Intensity Carbons will be sent promptly on request. Write for it today.

Use a 'Constructive' Approach In Curing the Vandal Illness

The Problem Requires Delicate Handling: Here Are Some Ideas

By Lionel Keene

There have been many suggestions as to ways and means for curbing vandalism—from the "soft" approach of appealing to the better nature of the miscreants, to strong methods of stopping them in their tracks by barring their entrance to the theatre and forcibly driving them away from its vicinity. But in its present manifestation, vandalism goes deeper than mere bad example by relatively few "bad boys." It poses a problem that must be handled with care, for there can be very detrimental results to the theatreman's business should things take a turn for the worse.

I once managed a very large theatre in the East, located in a section of the third largest city in our country, a portion of whose patronage were of a foreign element. They were so tough, the house was regularly policed by four special cops, and I found it necessary to dress down to their standard rather than that which is customary to show business. Most of the young ruffians carried stilettos, concealed on their persons, and attended in gangs, always seating themselves as closely together as possible. Their idea of fun was to "rough house it" among themselves during the vaudeville, knowing it would bring the "specials," when the "fun" would really begin. We usually spotted them when they entered the theatre, which would be the cue for the "specials" to locate themselves in advantageous positions about the house, ready for any emergency. Rough tactics on the part of the management finally cleaned up the situation as much as it was humanly possible. We "fought fire with fire." But, to try stopping them at the door, refunding their admission, would have placed us in a difficult position. For one thing we knew the ruffians would figure out some other annoyance, possibly the destruction of property.

Now, to bring the problem up to date. More recently, I owned and managed a theatre in a nice neighborhood that had about as mischievous lot of 'teen agers as could be found in any community.

These fellows took a special delight in annoying me. Knowing I was always around and on the alert, they'd hang out in front of the theatre and whoop it up, passing wisecracks as young women would approach the box-office. They'd try to carry on a conversation with the cashier. I had one cashier who claimed, because she knew them, she couldn't do anything about it. The youngsters would ride their bicycles in and out of the lobby and around the box-office. Once, I came across a lot of them shooting craps in the lobby. They would hang around the concession stand . . . and on inventory at the end of the week, a rather serious shortage would be revealed. One night on my return to the theatre, I discovered a kitchen knife had been thrown hard and straight enough to pierce the picture sheet. Another time, the lavatory in the Men's Rest Room was on the floor, in pieces. Deodorant door devices in the rest rooms were broken beyond further service. Over-ripe oranges were thrown at the screen, which left a discernible stain. Seats were not only cut, but the leather torn off completely. Lobby frames would be stripped of photos, which were torn up and thrown on top of the marquee. Loud talking, whistling at the wrong time, and unnatural laughter; anything to annoy me and disturb decent patrons, was their order of the day.

I was threatened with bodily harm time and again, and a challenge to fight was not unusual. Boy meet girl was perfectly all right, but these fellows made it a point to meet all the girls, what with the constant change of seats. The house was well lighted so that we could see what was going on at all times but the ushers were not much help in keeping order because they lived in the neighborhood . . . and naturally were afraid of retribution if they started anything with the gang.

So, it was up to me and the neighborhood patrolman, who worked with me, to correct conditions.

Police Action Boomerang

We found early in the game that having the patrolman prefer charges against them acted as a boomerang. The families would swoop down on the theatre, blame the management for the predicament in which they found themselves and make all sorts of threats, including the one to boycott the theatre.

I had heard that mass meetings of parents were being conducted with a view to enlisting sufficient sympathizers to jeopardize the business. It reached the stage where some protective, but constructive, action had to be taken to make friends of those who believed their children could do no wrong—and bring them to a realization we were for their boys and girls . . . not against them.

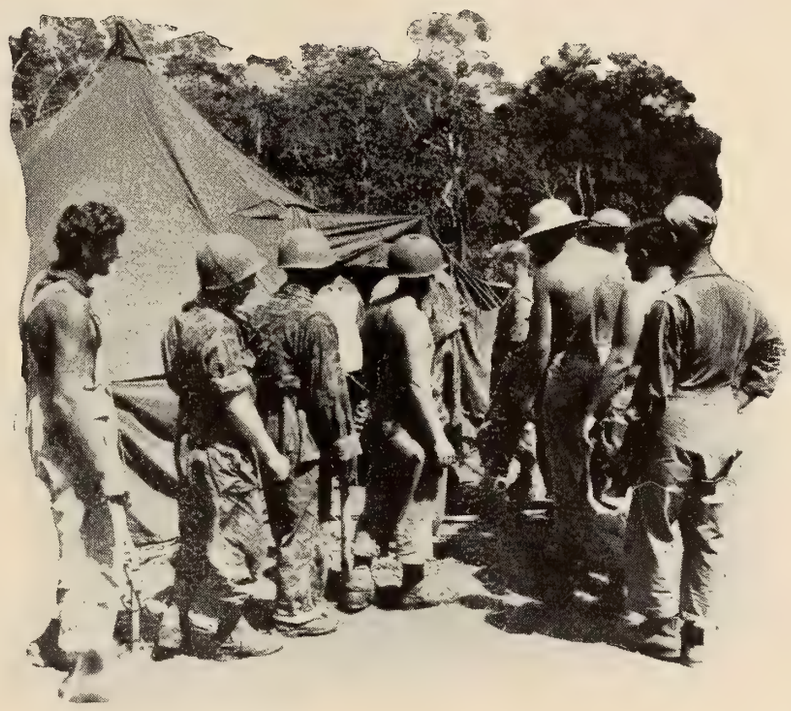
What was the answer?

I belonged to and was active in the neighborhood civic organization that was part and parcel of an international group. Its membership was comprised of business men of the community. They were fully cognizant of the juvenile delinquency which existed, and were anxious to do something about it. Numerous plans were tried, one of which was a dinner-meeting to which a considerable number of the neigborhood boys were invited. We had as a guest speaker an executive officer of the local Boys Club. There was the answer! A boys club! The movement was started, in a small way, and the idea grew and grew and grew.

Papers throughout the country were stressing the perils of juvenile delinquency. The radio buzzed with it. The picture screens carried its message. We then realized it was not just a local condition but that it was one born of wartime conditions. Now was our chance to do something about it for the benefit of the boys and for the material gain of neighborhood correction of vandalism. By this time, more than one hundred and fifty boys of the community were organized into thirteen boys' clubs, under supervision of the YMCA.

The boys meet each week for activities, such as religious education, softball, football, hiking, educational tours, craft work, swimming, gymnasium classes, and many other things boys like to do. During five months, the YMCA leaders met 243 boys' groups with a total attendance of 3843. To keep the program going needed money, so memberships were solicited of neighbors, offering twelve months of fun, education and religion for only $3.00. The movement was sponsored by the neighborhood civic organization and solicitations were made by its members. Delegates representing social and civic organizations of the city petitioned the city council to appropriate $75,000 to open and maintain during 1944 sufficient playgrounds to care for its juvenile population.

So, you see, Mr. Exhibitor, it's an ill wind that blows no good. Taking an interest in the civic welfare and activities of the community in which your house is located pays in more ways than one, and in this instance, resulted in a movement that is most helpful in reducing juvenile delinquency and vandalism.



The moral, it seems to me, is that perhaps more than any other present-day problem facing the theatreman, that of vandalism requires careful diagnosis of the particular condition existing in the particular situation.

To have handled the situation cited above in accordance with the "heroic" theory of strong methods would have meant—instead of a correction of the evil at its source, merely an isolation of the known offenders, with no guarantee that each day would find the infection spreading to more and more of the youthful population. Thus it is possible such a condition would demand a larger force of policemen than could be mustered to deal with the evil. It would have meant that the misled youths would be deprived of one of the few wholesome pleasures the neighborhood afforded—the motion picture shows.

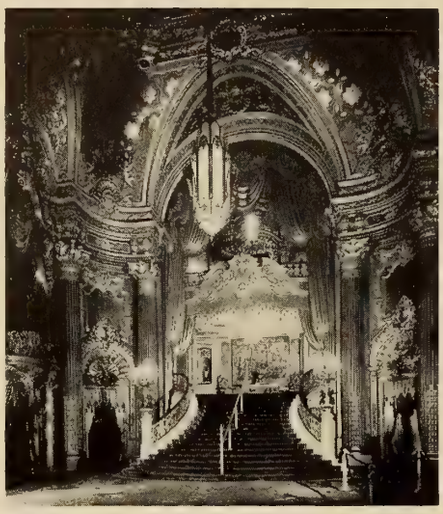
Landmark Theatres

Pacific Coast Palace, The Fox Theatre, San Francisco

One of the Few Sumptuous Large Houses to Carry On Without Change

"Be King For A Day At The World's Finest Theatre" referred to the opening of Fox-West Coast's $5,000,000, 5000-seat Fox Theatre in San Francisco on Friday, June 28, 1929.

Searchlights scanning the skies, an outdoor parade, top hats and glittering jewels paid tribute to this momentous occasion, remembered to this day by many who were present.



Construction of the palatial showhouse was under supervision of William Fox and Architect Thomas W. Lamb, who worked in collaboration with local engineers during the two year building period. St. Louis and Detroit acquired new theatres from the same chain at the same time but neither could touch the magnificence of the San Francisco structure. Mrs. William Fox had charge of the interior decoration of the house and took a personal interest in it, spending months in Europe accumulating antiques.

Balcony 10 Stories Above Street

Structurally this building has a maximum of space, convenience, beauty, equipment and wealth. Top of the balcony is ten stories above street level with two 24-passenger elevators to service it and the largest single beam ever made was used to support the balcony itself. The Diamond Horseshoe seats 350 people and has a Governor's box and a Mayor's box, which was first occupied by "Sunny Jim" Rolph. There is a hospital room, finished in white tile, on the lower mezzanine, completely equipped to meet any emergency. From the upper mezzanine, a vicarious thrill is felt on looking downward to the floor of the over 100-foot high lobby, the magnificently decorated ceiling of which is supported by giant golden columns.

As the house was originally built for comfort, nothing more can be done for the patrons; seats are the widest and the placing of them accords the best view of the stage and a large amount of leg room; many aisles make for as few interruptions as possible and only six persons will be disturbed in any direction at any one time. During the heyday of stage shows—and even now—eight floors of dressing rooms, replete with showers, are available for stars and chorus; the musicians have a spacious locker room with all facilities plus a music library room, and the waiting room for the vaudeville entertainers is serviced by special elevator. Luxurious executive offices are reached by private entrance with an exclusive elevator. Old moving picture machines, dating from the first Edison Kinescope to the present day projectors, are on display in a demonstration room with intended future use as a museum for public tours. The tenth floor was originally equipped for radio broadcasting but was never finished. Also on this floor is the preview room.

Two rooms, usually equipped with bare necessities, are given lavish attention in a manner befitting royalty. Ladies may retire to a room which is a copy of one in the Louis XV palace at Versailles, featuring opposing mirrors, which reflect the $5000 rock crystal chandelier imported from Europe. An Arabian style smoking room boasts one or two of the landmark stork ashtrays, originally numbering 150 and now reduced to ten. Tapestry on the chairs and a Joshua Reynolds painting gracing the wall present a site rarely seen. Gentlemen may feast their eyes on a $10,000 English-made grandfather's clock possessing three different chimes. (Two hours after the house opened the coast-of-arms was missing from the room.) Authentic antiques are on display in both retiring rooms and fireplaces with grotesque andirons are a feature of each.

GRANDEUR OF THE TWENTIES. The Fox Theatre stands as a striking example of the lavish decoration and spaciousness which marked theatres in what since has been called "the golden era" of the 1920's. This view of the grand staircase gives you an idea of its splendors.

Strict Policy of Maintenance

A house-decorator has had the sole job of keeping the theatre in condition so long that he has become a tradition. Strict policy of the Fox is to keep everything shipshape, including monthly washing of all fixtures—that this is no easy matter, consider just one detail, the massive chandeliers in the lobby. These huge masterpieces are lowered by winches, requiring four men for the job and taking eight hours to re-lamp and wash each pane. There are 18,000 lightbulbs in the house, no neon and all fixtures are in soft flame tints. The staff numbers 85, including approximately 35 usherettes, 7 doormen and regular operating staff.

Justice cannot be done to the richness and beauty of the interior and the Louis XVI period furnishings by mere words, so factual description must take their place. Paintings consist of murals and oils, outstanding of which are the ceiling murals done in the style of antique porcelain painting and as authentic old copy by Wm. Beechley of the original Mrs. Siddons' portrait. Marble-topped tables, one of which is inlaid with porcelain miniatures, and bronze figurines, many of which are original signed antiques and one of which has a gold medal imbedded in the base, and mirrors of all sizes are features of this palatial interior. Special notice must be given to the following collectors' items comprising a priceless part of the original furnishings; a $39,000 rug in the main lobby is the largest woven one-piece rug in the country; a $25,000 tapestry, also in the lobby, took four generations of a Persian to weave it and was recently cleaned by special cleaners; the sidewalk under the marquee sports a red carpet, costing $6000 per yearly change; originally from the palace of the Russian Czar come the 1849 Royal Serves and the Napoleonic vases (purchase price: $3500 apiece); a duo of light candelabra from a castle in Spain grace the grand stairway; hand-carved small Italian chairs valued at $5000; the Grand Drape, purchase price $10,000, bedecked with rhinestones, tassels, intricate embroidery patterns and designs in sparkle-dust; tapestry paneled walls, at $7.50 per yard, are an aid to acoustics, bringing to mind that the place is practically echo-proof. The original rug covering the floors was specially woven and cost $14 per yard; Bagdad velour, at a cost of $50 per yard was used to upholster some of the furniture, and the multitude of doorways were heavily draped with fabrics costing $12 per yard. Attention is brought to the gilt-edge finishings in the main foyer, in the making of which $20,000 worth of gold leaf was used.

Huge Water Supply

A large part of the engineering equipment is two stories underground in the catacomb-like basement and the machinery is, for the most part, in duplication so that if one unit fails another machine takes up the work. An elaborate system of ventilation, technically known as downward draft, is a network starting on the ninth floor, having a huge mechanism which draws in and heats the air and blowers to distribute the fresh air throughout the theatre, from whence the used air is sucked out by the underground motors. Four immense boilers comprise the heating equipment. Most unusual is the 250-foot deep-well pump for domestic water, installed due to the fact that there are so many toilet facilities a special water supply was found necessary.

Many patrons have stated that their reasons for choosing the Fox in preference to other theaters is that they can always get a cool drink of water from the fountain. It is interesting to note that a special refrigeration plant in the basement, in operation at all times, keeps the drinking water at 50 degrees. Separate rooms are provided for much of the machinery, even for the dial telephone system. Another amazing fact is that the equipment is all the original machinery, which was installed when the house was built a decade and a half ago. The only additions have been the augmenting of the sound equipment with new speakers, new lamphouses and new devices in wiring, just to keep up with the times.

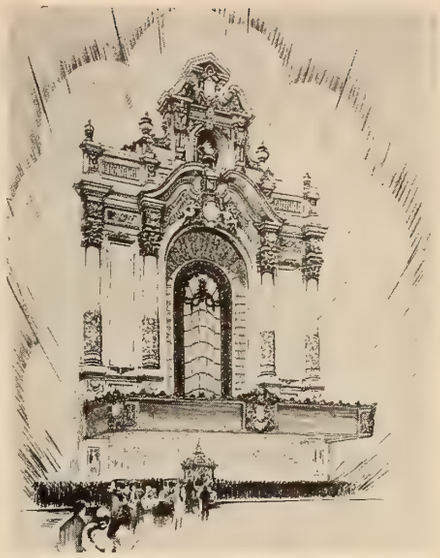
Entertainment policy of the Fox was originally to consist of Fox pictures. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures and Fox Movietone News (the then Twentieth Century marvel), an expansive Fanchon & Marco stage revue and Walt Roesner's orchestra. However this policy did not remain in effect for long, as the stage show was discontinued a few years after the opening and the screen is now showing the pick of the first-run pictures. Many new ideas have found their origin at the Fox, including the Mother's Day free admittance to mothers over 63 and the Kiddies Victory Matinees. The Fox has participated in all the drives and benefits carried on in cooperation with other theatres. Recently admission prices were raised following the lead of other showhouses. As a result of the strict policy to preserve the house as it originally was, the only innovations, outside of the projection room additions, is the new silhouette lettering on the outside, taking the place of neon, the candy stand and the Red Cross booth.

Vandalism is the biggest problem now, including the loss of as high as 36 light bulbs at one taking. Elaborate plans are now in progress for the 15th Anniversary celebration, when the largest cake in the world will be displayed on the stage.

Although the stage is idle at the present, a word must be said in regard to its almost push-button-like accessories, which make possible split-second scenery change and platform elevations of several heights, and to the gigantic proportions of the proscenium, which is 65 feet long and 75 feet high, and the wings, which are eight floors high. There are light bridges on two sides and across the stage; panorama lights, consisting of duplicate lights above and below; and a cyclorama drop, which provides twinkling stars, sunsets, sunrises and any other effects desired. The orchestra pit and giant organ can be lifted simultaneously or separately, from one story below floor level to stage height. To put the action into all the stage properties, there is a multiplicity control board with a forrest of dim-out controls, which is tube controlled.

Outstanding is the fact that the Fox Theatre has two organs with three consoles. In the orchestra pit is the giant $82,000 Wurlitzer organ, which can play duets with the aid of the console backstage. On the upper mezzanine, overlooking the vast lobby, is the $22,000 organ, used in the Sunday concert and also to entertain holdouts with request numbers. Separate rooms house the 250 horsepower blower motors for the pipes and the elaborate music-making mechanism.

Unlike most other theaters, only two men have held the managerial post at the Fox. Herman Kersken opened the house as manager and remained there until his promotion in January 1943 to the newly-created position of San Francisco District manager of Fox-West Coast Theaters . But his name will forever be identified with the Fox, because his foremost thought was to keep the theater as it was originally and this policy is followed even yet as closely as possible. B. V. Sturdivant, Northern California Division manager for Fox-West Coast Theaters —who has been serving the past three months as national campaign director of motion picture participation in the Fourth War Loan—is justifiably proud of this priceless gem of the circuit's collection. His anxiety for its well-being is shown by the fact that, when Herman Kersken was promoted, he placed the Fox in the care of a man who has idealized the house since it first opened when he was a doorman for the FWC circuit. C. E. Macdonald, who managed the Fox-Oakland before coming to San Francisco and has also had charge of film houses in Napa, San Jose, Sacramento and Berkeley, succeeded Kersken as manager. Coming from a family of showmen was no aid to his advancement, since his father, well-known in theatrical circles on the Pacific Coast and in Chicago, made him start the hard way.



From the firm foundations, several hundred feet down, to the tenth story, the palatial magnificence of the Fox Theater, a Twentieth Century wonder, has been built to last and the patrons will enjoy comfort there as long as Fox-West Coast operates it.

THEN AND NOW. Over the span of nearly 15 years in which the Fox Theatre, San Francisco, has flourished, there has come little change over the exterior appearance—no need for it, since the theatre has had excellent care. A bit of neon outline on marquee and a vertical sign are only additions made. The sketch at top was used for publicity in connection with publicity in advance of the opening of the theatre. Compare it with the photo, immediately above, taken during the recent 4th War Loan.

It'll Pay to Make Your Carpet Installation Last Much Longer

A. G. Ashcroft Address Gives Food for Thought by Theatremen

That the carpet industry will be engaged for two years after V-day in replenishing stocks, now practically exhausted for a rate of consumer demand far in excess of normal years, was the prediction of A. G. Ashcroft, product engineer of Alexander Smith and Sons Carpet Co., in the course of an address at the convention of New York Carpet Cleaners Association in New York last week.

The subject of improvements, new carpets and post-war designs, Mr. Ashcroft indicated, is something that awaits a time when manufacturers and their research and engineering staffs can devote to the matter energies and time which now are wholly absorbed in turning out fabrics required for war purposes.

In comparison to many other industries, the carpet industry has been conspicuously silent about promised postwar marvels for the home, the factory or the public building. This fact received an answer by Mr. Ashcroft—who made it emphatic, though, that he was speaking only as an individual associated with one of the several manufacturers of soft coverings for floors. However, there was in the address a reminder for the motion picture theatre owner as well as others, that present installations of carpet must be conserved, and also that post-war carpets will be, at least for a period of a year or two, the kind of carpets which have been in use and which have been produced under the methods in effect for the period preceding the outbreak of war.

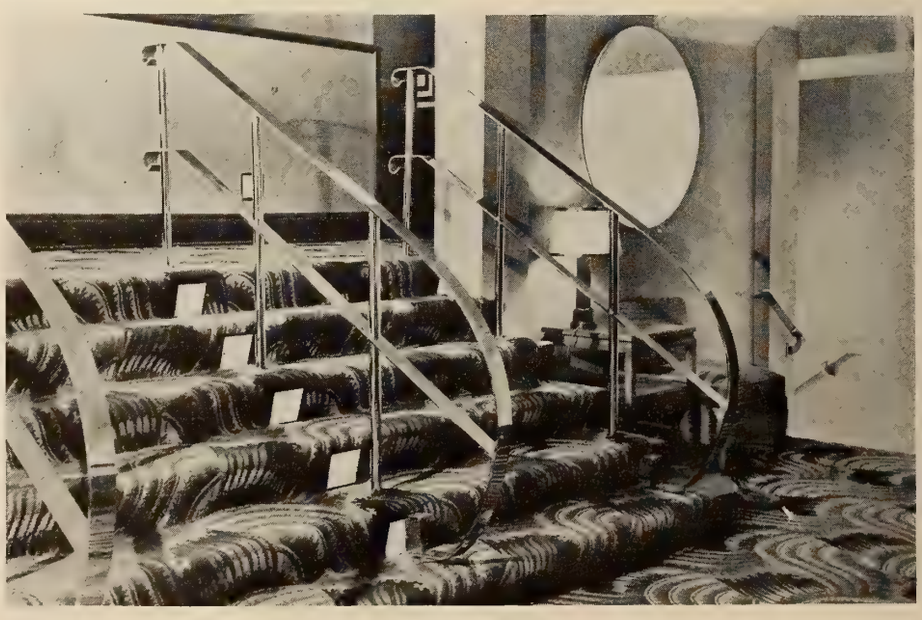
Busy Making War Materials

As to the occupation of carpet manufacturers with war production, Mr. Ashcroft said:

"Is it not stimulating to know that an industry normally producing about 70 million yards of a semi-luxury item like a soft floor covering could, in a year, convert its machinery, processes and train its personnel to produce tens of millions of yards of duck and millions of blankets a year as well as millions of yards of fire, water and weather resistant coatings and thousands of units of various fabricated materials?

"Do you realize that this quantity of wool blankets, of cotton duck, of fire, water, weather resistant coatings, of tarpaulins, of bunk bottoms, stretcher covers, clothes bags, tents, machine parts, flame-throwers, gas-masks, shoe-soles, and many other machined and fabricated items, means the conversion of some of these plants into several new and entirely different industries?

"Is it any surprise therefore, to learn that six units in the carpet industry, representing more than 35 to 40 per cent of the industry units and more than 60 per cent by volume, have been awarded the Army & Navy 'E,' which I understand only about 3 per cent of the companies on war work in the country have had bestowed upon them.



"Is this record at least a partial answer to the interesting question raised in a recent issue of a Home Furnishings Magazine? In an article entitled 'Why is the Silence so Loud,' the writer mentioned that while certain home-furnishing industries, those manufacturing home gadgets, are busily telling consumers what the Post War Years will bring, there is apparently an almost complete absence of comment on the new, intriguing and novel in soft floor coverings.

"If such promotion by the carpet industry, in competition for the Post War consumers' dollar, is a vital necessity at this time, my industry might well question the wisdom of its almost complete and patriotic conversion to war production.

"I have been told that the inventory of carpets and rugs in retail stores was 50 per cent less at the end of 1943 than at the end of 1942 and that wholesalers and manufacturers' inventories were almost entirely eliminated. It might be assumed therefore that after V-day the carpet industry will be engaged for two years in replenishing stocks for a rate of consumer demand far in excess of normal years. Obviously, it should do this job first and in the face of reconversion problems and continued shortages of raw materials it would appear far-sighted to defer the production of the new, untried and novel products to some time (x) years plus V-day.

"Permit me to quote from a publication of one of the country's largest chemical manufacturers whose research laboratories employ over 1000 Scientists. 'Don't be surprised when the dream world of new inventions you read so much about fails to come true immediately after the war. True there are plenty of new inventions. The sulfa drugs in forms far less toxic and more effective; powdered metallurgy; air trains composed of freight-carrying gliders. Seen from the scientific laboratory, the post war world has endless possibilities. So much has been written about it, however, that many business men feel that it has been oversold to the public. They point out that innumerable products after the war will be pretty much the same as they were before. It will take time to put into production some of the improvements that have been made in the laboratory.'

"It does not seem wise or necessary to oversell at this time improvements or changes that may be realities X years plus V-day. There is no good reason, however, for the assumption that improvements and changes will not occur."

GIVE IT CARE—MAKE IT LAST. Your carpet installation is invaluable; irreplaceable. The daily vacuum cleaning, the frequent removal of spots and soil, the periodic "shampoo" treatment (the latter by a qualified specialist in such service) will prove a good and sound investment. If your carpet is of fairly modern manufacture, you can have the satisfaction of knowing that it will be some time after V-day before anything radically "different" will be available to your competitor, or you either—read what an expert has to say about that in the article on this page.

Hughes Theatre to Open in Mid-April

Howard Hughes—a fabulous man even in fabulous Hollywood—is among the few producers who ever turned theatre owner. It was natural that when Hughes did decide to have a theatre, he should go about things in a very interesting way.

The man who is a big figure in the oil industry, made aviation history during the period when air travel was entirely a peaceful pursuit, won prominence as a producer of motion pictures, and now is both a figure in the film industry and in airplane manufacture for war purposes, has become the owner of that large, and very beautiful, theatre which Detroit knows as a former leader in the show world but which has stood for the past eight years as a dim and darkened shadow of its former self. The theatre is the Uptown, and for about a year, Howard Hughes has been its owner.

Since taking over title to the Detroit property, Hughes has had his agents and representatives working on it to recondition the house for operation as a picture theatre.

Along about mid-April the Hughes theatre will open—with new decorations, drapes, everything to bring the Uptown back to its former glory as a showplace. The house has been reseated. While much of the material employed for the refurbishing that the Uptown has received came from the re-conditioning shops and factories, there will be nothing "second-hand" about the appearance or the functioning of the equipment.

At this writing, the interesting point about the re-opening of the house which has been dark for eight years, is that the picture attraction may not be the Howard Hughes production, "The Outlaw," which had been in production for years before it ever was shown, and received only the most limited public exhibition in the year since it had its premiere in San Francisco.

At the time he bought the Uptown, it was generally believed that Hughes had acquired the house just to show his picture.

The entire job of overhauling the Uptown was under the supervision of Bob Savini, head of Astor Pictures, representative of Hughes, and a showman of long experience and justly famous for his accomplishments in the theatre of live stage talent as well as motion pictures.

It Might Happen Here

In theatres all around this fair land there are hidden away from sight pieces of delicate equipment whose initial cost ran into many thousands of dollars per each such installation. These once very necessary pieces of equipment are the theatre organs, which for many years enjoyed a spotlight place in the shows at bigger and better theatres.

Over in England the organs lasted much longer in popularity than here. But recently there has been a definite slump in organ music appeal, with a consequent lessening of the use of the instruments at the theatres. A recent happening in a theatre there, however, may result in a revival of interest in organs. The incident occurred when an organist, after a meeting with an old friend of many years experience on the vaudeville stage, appeared at the console in blackface makeup and gave his organ act a decided lift in audience reaction.

When Screen Goes Blank, DON'T

When the screen goes blank DON'T run up to the booth and don't phone to tell the projectionists that something is wrong.

A signal system with a buzzer should be installed and used to advise the operators of the trouble. Three rings means a blank screen and four that there is no sound. If the men know of the trouble already, they simply ignore the signals.

The presence of the manager in the booth or the necessity of answering the telephone will only delay matters.

Another DON'T along the same line is the suggestion that the manager refrain from querying the operators on how repairs are coming along. About the only thing to be done by the manager during an emergency is to keep the audience in good frame of mind, while repairs are being made.

Limited Amount of New Equipment; Materials Available for War Areas

Limited quantities of projector and sound equipment will be available to civilian theatres during the current year and there is also to be an allowance of materials for building new theatres in certain areas which are underseated and which are in areas having a concentration of population engaged in war work. Thus, the wartime necessity of motion picture entertainment for the civilian population is graphically expressed.

The liberalization of allotments of materials for manufacture of projection equipment for civilian uses by no means implies that theatremen can replace old but still serviceable equipment with new apparatus. The supplies will be severely restricted for some time to come, but exhibitors whose equipment is obsolete and whose theatres are necessary to supply entertainment for communities dependent upon them for picture shows are eligible to purchase such projectors, lamps, sound units or parts as are needed to give adequate presentations. Theatres in which equipment has been destroyed by fire, also are eligible.

Under the new regulations worked out by the Office of Civilian Requirements, headed by George W. McMurphey, exhibitors who are eligible for equipment do not require a preference rating. It is only necessary that they place their order with the local dealer, who will then apply to the M. P. Division of the WPB for permission to transfer the needed equipment.

Sections of the country which a survey by the WPB indicates are in need of additional motion picture facilities for war workers are located in areas in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Arkansas. Applications for building materials and equipment for new theatres in the specified areas should be made to the Office of Civilian Requirements. According to a recent statement by Mr. McMurphey, his department will consider applications for new theatre projects for any war area now inadequately supplied with recreation facilities.

Thompson Remodels Maplewood Theatre

James J. Thompson, who recently acquired the Maplewood Theatre, Maplewood, N. J., expects to have the house ready for reopening in March. The property is now undergoing extensive refurbishing.

The theatre has a seating capacity at 1,400 and is a unit of a building having six stores and office space on the second floor above them. It has not been operated continuously as a theatre for the past three years, its most recent use being for the plays staged by Cheryl Crawford for two summer seasons.

Thompson will operate the Maplewood as a motion picture house. The redecoration work and improvement of the theatre are from plans by Sidney Moss. Tufted leather walls in the inner lobby and extensive use of colored glass are features of the redecoration work.

Thompson operates theatres in Essex and Union counties, including the Park, Newark; the Elmora, Elizabeth; Park, Roselle Park, and the Rahway, Rahway, N. J. He has been an exhibitor and theatre owner for 15 years, except for the period during the last war when he served as an officer in the Army. He served two terms as representative of Essex County in the New Jersey legislature.

Repairs to Savannah Theatre to Cost $5000

Repairs to the 125-year-old Savannah Theatre, Savannah, Ga., will cost about $5,000. The theatre was damaged by fire on February 5.

The seating section of the upper balcony, popularly known for years as "the peanut," was badly damaged and a large gaping hole was burned through the floor to the second-floor balcony which was also partially damaged by the flames. Only other damage was from water and smoke.

On December 5 the Savannah Theatre was 125 years old, having been opened on that date in 1818. Designed and constructed under supervision of the noted English architect, William Jay, it was one of the most attractively built and decorated theatres in the country at that time and during its day before the advent of motion pictures.

Rosebud Theatre, Los Angeles, Suffers $10,000 Loss in Blaze

The Rosebud Theatre, Los Angeles, was one of the month's fire casualties, with damages of approximately $10,000.

Flames swept through the theatre, located on Central avenue, and gutted the building. Los Angeles authorities said after investigation that the fire which finally broke into a consuming blaze apparently had been smoldering all night, though it was not discovered until 6 a.m.

Star Theatre Destroyed

The Star Theatre, Potsdam, N. Y., operated by James J. Papayanakos, was destroyed by fire on February 12. The house was opened by Papayanakos in May, 1940, after more than $25,000 had been spent on the house for new seats, decorations and equipment. Previous to its acquisition by the Papayanakos circuit, the Star had been opened only occasionally.

Cutting Losses Due to Fire and Embezzlement

Anderson Cites Industry Figures In Urging Ways to Reduce Serious Losses

That intelligent use of preventive measures is vital to the security of the theatre, is proved by statistics for both fire and theft, in the motion picture industry itself. This was emphasized in a speech by Henry Anderson, manager of Insurance Department, Paramount Pictures, to members of the Surety Underwriters Association of New York this month.

While Mr. Anderson's address was concerned primarily with the conduct of insurance business by those who underwrite it, there were portions of the address which strike home to members of the picture industry both as a matter of pride of accomplishment of motion picture organizations and as a warning that eternal vigilance is the price of a continuing record for providing safety for the public patronizing picture shows and the reduction of crimes of theft, with their costly results.

As a means of driving home to the men who sell insurance the value of constructive work along lines of fire and theft prevention, Mr. Anderson cited the following facts:

"At one time our burglary and holdup loss ratios in theatres was extremely high. It has for many years been in the very low percentage brackets due we believe to a continuous campaign of education and notably to the installation of safes of the best possible type.

"The industry is particularly proud of its motion picture exchanges and their fire record. The industry is a unit in carrying out fire prevention work. It supports its own inspection force who see that every possible fire protection measure is carried out. In addition, in each city, where exchanges are located, there is a rotating committee made up of representatives of each of the principal motion picture companies. This committee inspects the other fellow's exchange as well as his own and you may feel assured that the work they do is thorough, for they are, after all, experienced exchange operators and too they naturally enjoy to some degree 'getting something' on the other fellow. I do not know of any similar self-regulation.

"The fire loss ratio of motion picture exchanges in the United States united in this inspection work, where astronomical quantities of motion picture film are handled, is incredibly low and has been over a long period of years. As far as I know, the fire loss ratio is as low as —possibly lower than, that of any other industry.

"At Paramount's West Coast Studio, we believe that our experience credit in Workmen's Compensation is among the highest of any type of industry in the United States. This is not chance, for this condition has existed for many years. It is the result of much effort and much study and of experience gained the hard way. There is a constant campaign of safety education and engineering supervision carried on at all times. In brief, we have learned that the man to reach is the man who is actually doing the work and that he is reached by the man who is actually on the job supervising the details of his work; that is, the foreman. We have tried every other plan and we are convinced that this is the only solution.

"I am telling you this with some pardonable pride but, too, with the hope that it may convince you that loss prevention work can show results and that it may be profitable to you to extend your loss prevention activities."

IN A FAR-AWAY "WAR THEATRE" INSTEAD OF YOUR THEATRE—

"American" craftsmanship still serves young America

THESE are the lads who used to fill your seats . . . that was before they turned into fighting men, almost overnight.

They spent countless happy, carefree hours of relaxation in their favorite motion picture theatres, in chairs made by American Seating Company craftsmen. Now these intrepid warriors of the air are bringing destruction to America's foes, in a different sort of theatre—the far-flung "theatre of war". And "Seats by American" still serve them.

Pilot seats which we designed and built, fly with Douglas, Republic, Curtiss-Wright, Stinson, Boeing and Fairchild in the famed Havoc, Thunderbolt, Warhawk, Sentinel, Kaydet and Cornells, while the Flying Fortress carries ammunition in special containers of our manufacture.

Airplane wings and assemblies, too, for many other famous American planes, have been rolling down our production lines for more than two years.

When Victory is won, you and other theatre operators will need new seats, and "American" will be ready to serve you. Then those War Bonds which you have been buying with your seating replacement funds will pay you their first dividend. You'll get the finest theatre seating in history.

Clean Drains Don't Clog

A clean drain in a urinal, commode or wash basin will never cause trouble, and such drains can be kept clean by a simple and inexpensive weekly procedure. One of the oldest and still most effective methods is to have your cleaners pour a bucket of hot water mixed with a cup of washing soda down each drain. This solution will free the pipes of all corrosive substances which accumulate regardless of how much cold water is passed through them.

Will You Have the Answer When Patrons Kick About the Heat?

If Not, You'll Do Well To Learn Why Freon is Scarce

If your supply of Freon is insufficient, no matter whether or not you have the finest air conditioning equipment built before the day of infamy at Pearl Harbor, you just aren't going to be able to provide artificially produced "comfort" when the dog days of August come around.

That being the case it is a good idea for the manager, or theatre owner, to be informed on the reasons why there will be no air conditioning in his house. If he knows the reason behind the reason that he can't get the necessary refrigerant for his air conditioning system, he can meet the criticism and the squawks that may arise from some of the customers. Moreover, he can, if he's a resourceful showman, build up a campaign that will make his patrons like the idea of patronizing his house even if he cannot offer cooled-off atmosphere in the midst of sweltering weather.

There are the best of good reasons why Freon has been frozen, its use highly restricted. Here they are, as outlined by the best of all authorities—the government agency responsible for providing Freon where it is needed to produce war weapons and the vital drugs needed for America's fighting men.

Several times the amount of Freon-12 normally used in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry is now required to produce the new malaria combating insecticide for our armed forces.

Consequently, the supply of Freon available to owners of refrigeration and air conditioning systems and to servicemen who maintain such systems is considerably reduced.

It is now well known that the casualties from malaria in some of our South Pacific campaigns far exceeded the number of casualties from battle wounds. The powerful new insecticide which is so effectively destroying the malaria bearing mosquito is an Aerosol, consisting of pyrethrum and sesame dissolved into a liquid gas, known commercially as Freon-12.

To date the only known chemical which will produce a safe and satisfactory Aerosol for this insecticide is Freon-12. Since Freon production before the War was based on the requirements of the Refrigeration Industry, the present supply is entirely inadequate.

As soon as the effectiveness of Freon as an insecticide was established, steps were taken to expand production facilities. New plants are being constructed and will be completed as rapidly as available material, equipment and manpower will permit. In spite of these efforts to provide adequate production of Freon-12, the supply during the next eight months will be very critical.

There appears to be some confusion among service organizations, owners and operators of refrigeration systems as to how they may obtain Freon-12 and for what type of system Freon-12 is permitted under Order M-28. The following explanation is offered in an attempt to clarify the procedure:

A service organization, owner or operator of a refrigeration system who installs Freon-12 in any system for which delivery is permitted by Order M-28 may obtain it from his supplier by certifying his purchase order as follows: "The undersigned purchaser certifies to the seller and the War Production Board that he does not have any F-12 gas cylinders not owned by him, which have been empty for more than 15 days; and that the F-12 gas covered by this Order will not be used or resold for any purposes not permitted by Order M-28."

If unable to obtain the Freon-12 from his regular supplier, it is suggested that he try other suppliers who may be able to take care of his requirements for some emergency. The War Production Board should not be called until all possible suppliers in the vicinity have been called. The reason for this is that the War Production Board allocates the Freon-12 to the various wholesale distributors of Freon (called "Contract Agents") on the basis of past requirements and the amount available. The Contract Agents in turn are expected to divide up their share with the local Freon dealers in the most equitable manner possible. A number of equipment manufacturers act as Contract Agents and supply Freon-12 to their service agencies, dealers or distributors.

Filter Bottleneck Ended By Optical Sandwiches

A crucial filter production bottleneck has been solved by a five-layer sandwich technique perfected in Cambridge, Mass., by the Polaroid Corporation, which recently turned out its thirty millionth filter.

The sandwich technique, a simple process performed by a complicated machine, is the only method for producing in large quantities the important filters which enable bombardiers and fire control officers to see and hit enemy targets which are often hard to see with the naked eye because of horizon haze and sunglare. Filters are used in bombsights, periscopes, goggles, gunsights and other aiming and sighting devices.

The sandwiched filters are similar in construction to the peacetime Polaroid sunglass for motorists and fishermen. The sandwiches for both the filters and the sunglasses consist of thin dyed plastic sheets between clear, window-like glass. The color of the plastic is precisely the color of the finished filter. In the past, colored filters were generally sliced from chunks of laboriously prepared colored glass.

. . . and Don't Forget to Conserve Heating Fuel During the Critical Weeks Ahead

With fuel, oil and manpower becoming more scarce as the war progresses, engineers responsible for the heating and ventilating of buildings are in a position to assist in the conservation of the diminished supplies. This is the reminder which has been issued by Davis M. DeBard, Conservation Division of WPB.

Among the recommendations for conservation (made more particularly to the engineers of large industrial plants, but equally applicable to the theatre) are the following:

1. General over-all efficiency and careful operation of the heating plant.

2. Reduction of air normally exhausted to the outdoors, which in turn requires a volume of make-up air (to be heated during cold weather) equal to the volume exhausted.

In carrying out the recommendations, there should be specific instructions to the man firing the furnace or caring for the oil-burner unit as to the methods of operation. A carefully prepared schedule calling for the most economical use of heating should be followed. Particular adherence to the program as to precisely at what time the heat is to be brought up to precede theatre opening; methods of checking on the number of occupants in the theatre at varying times (the more people in the theatre, the less furnace heat necessary); a well-instructed staff to carry out details as to keeping doors closed to prevent unnecessary amounts of cold air from getting into the building; check-up of the premises to locate any broken panes of glass in out-of-the-way windows, leakage that may have recently developed in window and casements, etc.

Warner Studio Adopts New Type Ear Phone

A new type ear phone, replacing the former "ear muff" headpiece which covered the entire ear, but did not give as faithful reproduction of voices and music as the improved new device, has been adopted 100 per cent on the Warner Bros. Hollywood studio.

First tested by sound men on "The Desert Song," the modernized receiver is fitted to the ears of each sound man by making a plaster cast of the recorder's outer and inner ear. Lucite replica is made of the cast, and sound receiver attached. Sounds pass through channel in lucite and directly up against the sound man's ear drum.

Robert Buckner, producer of "The Desert Song," found that better results were obtainable by the sound crew in recording the singing of Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning with the use of the new device.

Too Much Auditorium Light Hurts the Show

Screen Values Suffer from Overabundance of Utility Illumination

Due to conditions that are very difficult for the theatreman to control, there is a tendency these days to a considerable increase in auditorium illumination in certain houses where the "youth problem" has arisen to confound the educators, the religious leaders and law authorities—and to make the business of running a theatre more than ever a headache.

There is need for sufficient illumination in the auditorium at all times. The patron must be able to see the way to a seat—and should he or she not, and an accident occurs, there is a damage suit on the hands of the theatreman. But adequate illumination to enable patrons sufficient light for entering and leaving the auditorium and also for ushers and to keep an eye on the boys and girls who may be up to no particular good, is one thing, and too much of the illumination is another.

Safety, But Good Show Too

The theatreman must remember that it is necessary to give the patrons a good show. And a bright picture on the screen isn't possible if auditorium light spills over to reflect on the screen. Particularly important is properly controlled and distributed auditorium light when Technicolor pictures are being presented. For clarity and definition and for the eye-appeal of rich colors that Technicolor productions provide, there is need for the most intelligent arrangement of light in the auditorium. In many theatres vast improvements can be made without any major changes in the lighting system. A different wattage lamp here, a bit of color sprayed or dipped on a lamp there—and excellent results can be obtained.

When "Gone With the Wind" was released, there was special attention given to ways and means of providing the best possible results for patrons of all theatres in which the great picture was shown. To that end, MGM published a brochure with suggestions for the timing of the shows, arrangement of cues, sound volume, etc. Also there was a section of the projection phase of the publication, which was prepared by Lester Issac, director of sound and projection of Loew's Theatres, which dealt with house lighting. Just how important to the best results with Technicolor is this house lighting is illustrated by what Issac recommended for colors and lighting conditions. Here are some of the statements and instructions Issac made:

Ways to Soften the Lighting

"A minimum amount of light should be used in the auditorium proper.

"It is suggested that the auditorium lighting be of blue. This blue lighting should be of sufficient glow only to insure safety in the movements of patrons. Plus this blue lighting, the aisle and step lights should be utilized and of course, the exit lights. The latter, where local ordinance permits, should be in green. No reds or ambers, except where the law requires, should be used for lighting of the auditorium.

"Extreme care should be taken that no glaring lights, such as side wall brackets, etc., strike the eye, as this will serve to interfere with the proper color effect of Technicolor.

"Particular care should be taken where side boxes are in use, that all light to the entrances of such boxes should be masked, either by the box curtains, or some other method that will eliminate the glare of same into the patrons' eyes.

"The beauty of your Technicolor print will be greatly damaged if house lights are left lighted during the projection of the film. It has been learned from wide experience and experimentation that any kind of theatre lights harm Technicolor projection.

"Special care should be taken to see that no light, especially colored light, is projected onto the screen, screen masking or stage proscenium prior to, or during the showing of the picture.

"Make certain that no light-colored drapes, illuminated clocks, vases of flowers, tinsel or other light reflecting decorations are placed near the screen."

Those suggestions may well be preserved by the theatreman for periodic reference and use as a guide to check up on his auditorium lighting—which, due to the necessity of lamp replacement, often gets entirely out of line because an emergency replacement of the first bulb at hand has a way of perpetuating itself as some other janitor or service man duplicates the unsuited lamp when it burns out.

Direct Re-recording Seen As Solution of 16mm Sound Problem

Direct re-recording of the sound track from 35mm entertainment films to a special 16mm negative has been found by RCA engineers to be the most efficient method of transferring sound for 16mm prints for the armed forces, according to W. V. Wolfe, manager of recording equipment sales at RCA's Hollywood plant. Mr. Wolfe presented a paper on the subject before a recent meeting of the Pacific Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Hollywood.

"When the Army and the Navy made arrangements with the motion picture producers for 16mm prints of their entertainment pictures," he said, "we were presented with a new problem. Theatrical releases on 35mm film are obviously made for the conditions which exist in normal motion picture theatres. Volume range and frequency characteristics are selected to permit the maximum expression permissible with 35mm reproducing equipment and in auditoriums possessing reasonably good acoustics.

"But 16mm pictures are reproduced with portable or semi-portable equipment under conditions which vary from small, highly reverberant halls to outdoor settings. To meet these conditions, it is necessary to provide a reduced volume range and a modified frequency characteristic. It is no longer feasible to strive for dramatic expression, since we must be content with providing the maximum intelligibility possible under adverse conditions."

Once the necessity for decreased volume range and modified frequency characteristics was recognized, Mr. Wolfe pointed out, it became evident that it would be desirable to re-record each picture before a satisfactory 16mm sound track could be provided. The choice lay between providing a new 35mm negative and providing a special 16mm negative.

"We elected and recommend that the re-recording should be made directly on a 16mm negative," he said. "If a 35mm negative is used, a master print must be made. This print must then be reproduced by optical reduction on a 16mm duplicate negative. Thus, in either case, we end up with a 16mm sound negative for use in the making of contact prints. By direct re-recording on 16mm film, time, material, and expense are saved."

Mr. Wolfe reported that RCA has been successfully re-recording RKO pictures on 16mm negatives for military releases for some time. RCA's Hollywood plant gained helpful experience for this technique through its earlier use of direct 16mm recording for Soundies, he said, and had already established the necessary facilities for both direct recording and for re-recording from 35mm to 16mm.

Value of Staff Training Shown at St. Louis Fire

The value of a trained theatre service staff, schooled to meet any emergency with coolness and efficiency, was demonstrated recently in St. Louis when spontaneous combustion caused a minor fire in a basement storage closet at Fanchon & Marco's Ambassador Theatre.

A near-capacity audience of 3100 was in the theatre about 9:45 p.m. when Henry Riegel, Jr., manager, learned that smoke had been detected in the auditorium. After locating the fire, he immediately spoke to the audience over the public address system, saying there was absolutely no danger, and that the fire was confined to the janitor's closet. As the firemen reached the scene Riegel requested the patrons to leave the theatre for a few minutes until the blaze was put out.

Ushers were quickly deployed to their stations and everyone in the big theatre quietly went outside. There was no excitement or incident of any kind. In a very few minutes virtually all the patrons returned to see the balance of the show.

For years the service staff in all the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company houses have held fire drills and other emergency training routines at least once a week. In addition, the ushers, doormen, managers and assistant managers, have had the advantage of Civilian Defense training.

MANAGEMENT SECTION

An important phase of good operating practice deals with the manner in which film is handled from the time it arrives until it leaves the theatre. Many theatres use a projectionist's report to record playdate, title of subject, condition of each reel received, exchange from which received, running time, etc. Similar record is kept on trailers. The form also shows when and to whom shipped. This procedure makes it possible to check quickly for factual information when there is any question as to condition, or shipping errors, of prints.

Fire Robs Sodus of A Landmark Theatre

The Sodus Theatre, pride of the community in upper New York state after which it was named, was reduced to utter ruins by fire of undetermined origin on February 5. The loss for the theatre property was estimated at $40,000.

The Sodus Theatre dates back to 1906 and was named the New Opera House, at which stage shows were presented with such success that many productions that skipped larger and more important cities played at Sodus. It was later named the Arcade, and in 1940 was taken over by the Slotnick Enterprises of Syracuse and was managed by Morris Koppsky up until the time of his induction in the Army (he is now Pvt. Koppsky and is stationed at Fort Eustis, Va.). Since that time his wife has been managing the Sodus, operating shows on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Managers' Public Relations' Job

Two veteran theatremen, both with wide experience in actual management as well as supervisors of groups of managers, were having it out as to whether the newer crop of theatremen do or do not excel their predecessors in the matter of public relations. What came out of that discussion, as noted by this audience of one, may be of interest to managers of all schools of thought and periods of experience in conducting the affairs of a theatre. And what was the point upon which both parties to the discussion agreed? In two words it was this: "Know Your Public."

According to these veterans the current prosperity of the motion picture theatre poses a problem for the manager—a problem in that there is likely to be repeated the sad experiences of old-timers who have known eras in which there was little difficulty in filling the theatre with patrons to be followed by trying times in which it was anything but easy to attract sufficient customers for the manager to show a profit on his operation.

"The theatreman who is in the most risky position, so far as concerns losing 'touch' with the public, is the theatreman whose house is enjoying land-office business," these men agreed. And what was the course they suggested that the manager apply? "Observation and contact," was the answer.

Observation as recommended by these veterans consists of keeping in touch with what other theatres are doing—by visiting them and actually "sampling" the brand of service they offer the paying customer.

Contact, consists of cultivating friendly relations with the patrons and thus obtaining, by remarks the patron makes, a real reaction from the people the theatreman must please.

Letters and complaints to the theatre are a valuable source of information as to the kind of relations the theatre enjoys with its customers. These communications should be studied by the manager. Furthermore, many a successful manager has encouraged patron-to-manager contact by supplying complaint or recommendation blanks to be filled out and either handed to a house attendant or deposited in a box provided for that purpose.

The ability to encourage friendly relations with patrons is not a matter of an individual having the "gift" of being a "good mixer." Such a gift is indeed a blessing for the man who makes a career in the theatre. However, the average manager who wants to cultivate the "entente cordiale" can do so very easily by making it a point to be seen around the lobby very frequently during show hours. The cultivation of a conversational resource which will enable a manager to greet patrons entering and to say "good night" to those leaving in about 10 different ways will help immeasurably—in at least one circuit operation (very successful too) such a memorized "vocabulary" is a "Must."

PROJECTION SECTION

A well-cleaned projection lamp reflector doesn't deteriorate very fast, gives much better projection results on the screen. Reflector surfaces can be kept bright as new by daily cleaning—which doesn't mean just a quick wipe with any piece of cloth or rag that's handy. Such cleaning preparations as Bon Ami should be used in the process. Particles can be removed from the glass with a razor blade—which will bend to the curve of the mirror and whose edge will loosen the particles of carbon as the blade is slipped across the surface of the reflector. The pitting which results from use, and which eventually makes the reflector unserviceable, does not, until in an advanced stage, cut down on the light-reflecting qualities as much as the whitish coating which spreads over the reflector rapidly, and which should be cleaned away every day. Removing the adhering particles with the razor blade can be done once a month. Loss of light due to dim reflectors can account for a very great increase in carbon consumption and current costs.

Study Competitor's Method of Operation

Observation, in addition to calling for a study (not just a casual acquaintance) of a competitor's method of operation, also must cover the most minute details of what the manager can see going on in his own theatre.

An instructed staff may not put into practice the instructions as outlined for serving the patrons. The manager must see the service formula in action, and note the reaction on his patrons.

The proper "public relations" are vitally important to successful management. The manager must be able to handle patrons as well as employes. He cannot, of course, give personal attention to every patron. But he must keep on the alert to see that his ushers and employes do give the patrons the kind of treatment the majority of patrons of that particular house like best. And above all, the manager cannot be sure he is on the right track and is keeping up with the times, unless he makes it a point to visit other theatres and study carefully every phase of program construction, advertising and house service practiced by the competition—not only the nearby competitor, but the most outstanding competitor in his area.

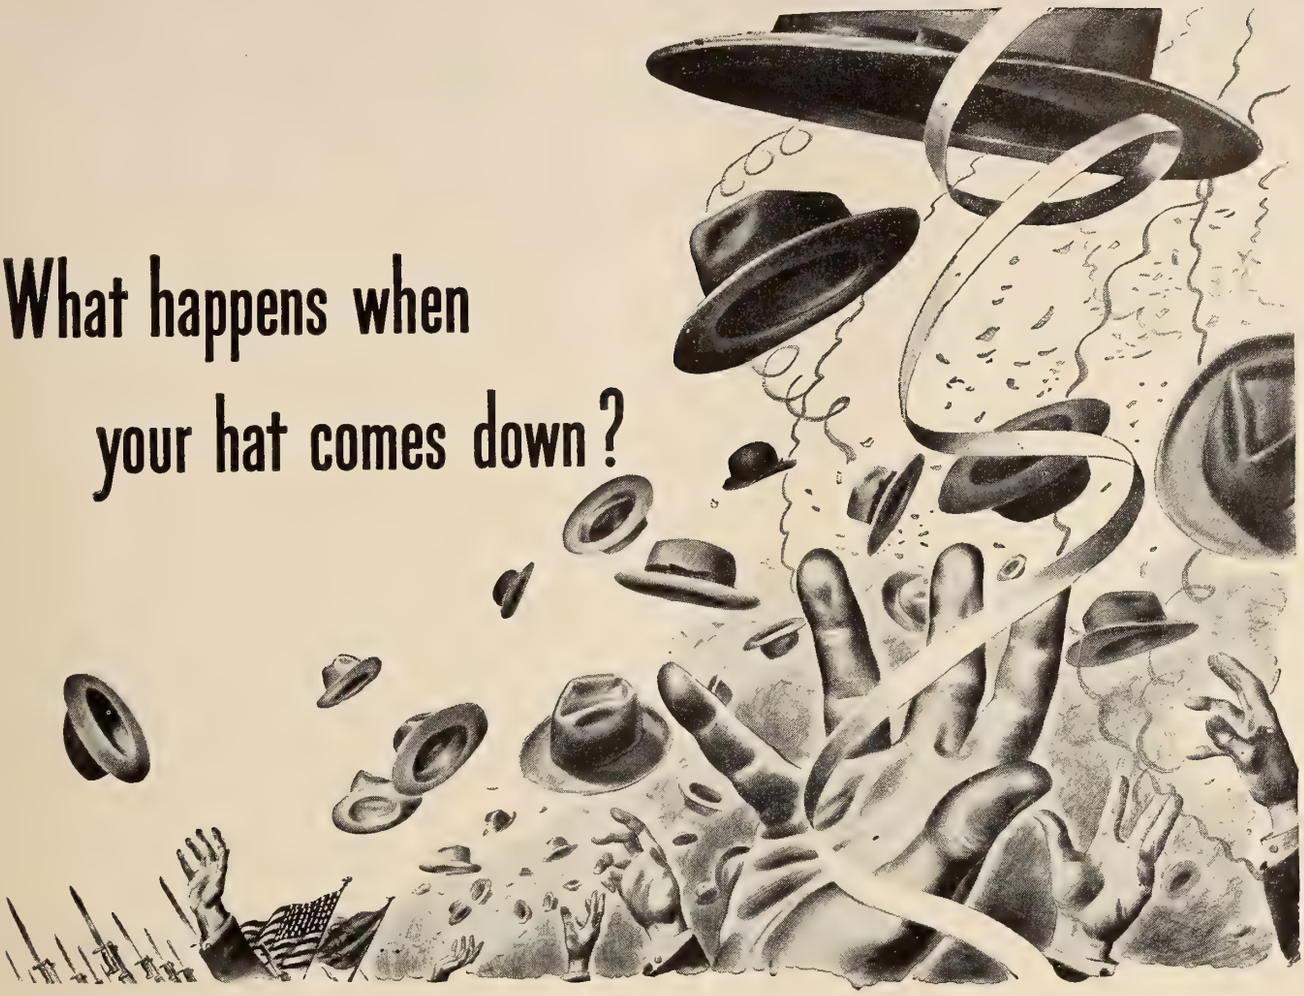
Kass Plans Circuit In Washington, D. C.

Garfield Kass of the Kass Amusement Co., president of Chevy Chase Ice Palace, plans a circuit of motion picture theatres. Eight sites in the District and several outlying districts are being considered.

As soon as the necessary materials can be released by the War Production Board, Mr. Kass plans to start construction at the following points:

Conn. Ave. at Albemarle St. N. W.; New Hampshire Ave. and Ethan St. N. W.; Takoma Park, Md., at Carroll Ave.; Georgia Ave. N. W. at the District Line; 14th St. between Varnum and Crittenden; Wisconsin Ave. between Van Ness and Brandywine, Conn. Ave. near Dupont Circle. A downtown house is being contemplated, also a theatre near Alexandria, Virginia, one near Blandensburg, and one at Suitland, Maryland.

All the theatres will have 1000 seats or more, and many will have stores and other commercial developments connected with them.



RCA Engineers Review Film Industry Progress

Reviews of technical developments in the motion picture industry during 1943 have been prepared for two important year books by engineers of the Radio Corporation of America.

Wallace V. Wolfe of RCA Victor's Hollywood staff, prepared for the Encyclopedia Brittanica's 1943 year book, an article on the industry's technical contributions to the war effort. He also reviewed recent improvements in photography, lighting, optics and other aspects of the film industry.

For the American Year Book, M. C. Batsel, of RCA's Indianapolis plant, outlined the progress made in sound motion picture recording and reproducing equipment, in addition to sound amplifying equipment used by the armed forces, business and industry, and various institutions.

What happens when your hat comes down?

SOMEDAY, a group of grim-faced men will walk stiffly into a room, sit down at a table, sign a piece of paper—and the War will be over.

That'll be quite a day. It doesn't take much imagination to picture the way the hats will be tossed into the air all over America on that day.

But what about the day after?

What happens when the tumult and the shouting have died, and all of us turn back to the job of actually making this country the wonderful place we've dreamed it would be? What happens to you "after the War?"

No man knows just what's going to happen then. But we know one thing that must not happen:

We must not have a postwar America fumbling to restore an out-of-gear economy, staggering under a burden of idle factories and idle men, wracked with internal dissension and stricken with poverty and want.

We must not have breadlines and vacant farms and jobless, tired men in Army overcoats tramping city streets.

That is why we must buy War Bonds—now.

For every time you buy a Bond, you not only help finance the War. You help to build up a vast reserve of postwar buying power. Buying power that can mean millions of postwar jobs making billions of dollars' worth of postwar goods and a healthy, prosperous, strong America in which there'll be a richer, happier living for every one of us.

To protect your Country, your family, and your job after the War—buy War Bonds now!

Let's all KEEP BACKING THE ATTACK!

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Cowan Signs Hubbard for 'Here Is Your War'; Monogram To Film Poe's 'Gold Bug'; Beaumont to Direct 'Maisie'

Peter Lawford, real life son of a titled Englishman, was handed a role in the Greer Garson starring film, "Mrs. Parkington." Director is Tay Garnett, and Leon Gordon is producing the MGM picture.

Jeffrey Bernerd will start production on "They Shall Have Faith," infantile paralysis drama by Neal Rau and George Sayre, on May 3 for Monogram release. Gale Storm will be given her first starring credit in connection with the picture, which William Nigh will direct.

In the new Paramount picture, "Practically Yours," the Fred MacMurray-Claudette Colbert co-starrer, John Wald plays a radio announcer. Wald is the Richfield Reporter, who has announced the news at 10 o'clock every night for years. Mitchell Leisen is directing.

Yakima Canutt has been signed to a long-term contract at Republic as technical advisor and director on special action sequences for all westerns because of excellence on past assignments, according to William O'Sullivan, executive producer.

Simone Simon was given the role of a patriotic young French girl in the new RKO production, "Mlle. Fifi," which producer Val Lewton is getting ready for the cameras. Robert Wise has been assigned to direct. "Mlle. Fifi" is a story of the Franco-Prussian war.

Twentieth Century-Fox announced that casting was complete on "Wing and a Prayer," epic story of an American aircraft carrier in battle. Cast stars Don Ameche, Lloyd Nolan, Dana Andrews and William Eythe. The picture goes before the camera soon with Henry Hathaway directing. Walter Morosco and William A. Bacher are co-producing.

Eddie Sutherland, director of "Dixie," has signed with RKO to direct "Having a Wonderful Crime," starring Pat O'Brien, and scheduled to go before the cameras in April. Sutherland, one of the veterans among first-flight directors, megged "The Navy Comes Through" for RKO last year and is currently directing "Pilebuck."

Lester Cowan has engaged Lucien Hubbard, a writing and production veteran, as associate producer for "Here Is Your War," for United Artists release from Ernie Pyle's best seller and daily battlefront dispatches. Hubbard is the second battle-wise executive signed by Cowan for the Pyle movie. Leslie Fenton, hero of the Commando raid on St. Nazaire, was the first.

Rapidly expanding his organization for the production of three pictures this year for United Artists, Hunt Stromberg announced signing William Pereira to a long-term contract as co-producer as well as production designer. "Dishonored Lady," notable Broadway success which starred Katherine Cornell, is Pereira's first assignment.

Gloria Jean gets her first really grown-up part in Universal's next Olsen and Johnson comedy which started Thursday (17) with Edward Cline directing and Edmund Hartmann producing. Morton Downey, Irish tenor, Martha O'Driscoll, Diana Barrymore and Walter Catlett are others in the cast to date.

With the return of Humphrey Bogart following his tour of Allied troops in Mediterranean and African theatres of war, shooting schedule on "To Have and Have Not" got under way. The Warner Bros. screen version of Ernest Hemingway's story is being directed by Howard Hawks.

Columbia Studios has assigned Cary Odell to handle the art direction on "Impatient Years" under the supervision of Lionel Banks. This is the film which Irving Cummings will produce and direct with Virginia Van Upp as associate. In addition, Virginia Van Upp will serve as producer of the Columbia comedy, "What's Wrong with Love," for which she will also write the screenplay.

Harry Beaumont is to direct "Maisie Goes to Reno," starring Ann Sothern and produced by George Haight. Beaumont first won recognition for such hits as "When Ladies Meet" and "Our Dancing Daughters."

"The Gold Bug," famous story of buried treasure which has long been recognized as one of Edgar Allan Poe's classic tales, is to be filmed by Monogram, with Bela Lugosi in the starring role. Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz will produce, and the film will form a part of the 1944-45 program.

An elaborate, practical—but temporary—swimming pool was set up, complete with water, inside a stage at Paramount Studios for use in "Bring on the Girls," the new Technicolor musical which stars Veronica Lake, Eddie Bracken, Sonny Tufts and Marjorie Reynolds.

Republic is considering a directorial contract for Walter Grissell, former cutter, who is now co-directing "Tiger Woman of the Amazon." The latter will be relieved by Yakima Canutt to megaphone first of the valley studio's Red Ryder series, which hits sound stage February 26.

Edward L. Marin, having finished directing the new RKO Eddie Cantor starring vehicle, "Show Business," was handed the reins on "Tall in the Saddle," in which RKO will star John Wayne for his first appearance under his new seven-year contract with RKO.

Don Ameche and Vivian Blaine were recalled by 20th Century-Fox for added scenes in "Greenwich Village," Technicolor musical in which they are starred with Carmen Miranda and William Bendix. Produced by William Le Baron, the picture was directed by Walter Lang.

Allan Dwan has been signed by Edward Small to direct his next production, "Abroad with Two Yanks," scheduled to go before the cameras early in March. This is the William Bendix-Dennis O'Keefe co-starring vehicle

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

Warners have put Edward Arnold and Joyce Reynolds in an American story called "Janie." Let's go there today, for they've already started shooting.

Set is the inside and outside of a small home in a midwestern town. We can see through the windows that something is going on within the house, so we go around the outside to get to the camera. As we walk along, we're surprised to discover that where the usual shrubbery should be, they've planted a Victory Garden . . . in true American fashion. (Of course, these are all made of paper, but you wouldn't know this until you get up close, they look so real).

We finally arrive where the camera is set up, and there find both Arnold and Joyce working in today's scene. This takes place in the hallway of the home.

Unable to get a good view of the proceedings because of the limited space, we go seeking a better spot. The patio turns out to be the place, for by looking through the doors we get an unobstructed view. There we also find the producer, Alex Gottlieb, who tells us the story between "orders for quiet."

It's all about modern girls and their dates with soldiers. Joyce, a youngster, has just told her father, Arnold, about her two affairs. He, in true fatherly fashion, laughs heartily because he is unable to believe his little girl is old enough to fall in love.

Director Michael Curtiz starts the scene with the ringing of the telephone and Arnold walking towards it, laughing heartily. When he picks up the receiver, he discovers that he's missed a long distance call, so he turns around and blames her. She's hurt, starts to cry and accuses him of being more interested in other things than he is in his own daughter. She runs off crying and he follows her, catches her at the foot of the stairs, sets her straight with a long talk about what she means to him.

Curtiz, being a perfectionist, interrupts the rehearsal quite a few times; once or twice because he wants Joyce to put more feeling into her lines and another time because he makes an addition (the laugh which wasn't in the original script).

Arnold wears an American Legion uniform and Joyce a brown-plaid taffeta dress. Her hair is worn down to her shoulders; parted in the middle with a bow at each side . . . real adolescent style.

When the scene is finished, the technicians take over, so we leave.

Until next week.

'Since You Went Away' is Selznick's Second Longest Picture

"Since You Went Away," David O. Selznick's first film since "Gone With The Wind" and "Rebecca," will be the second longest picture ever to come out of Hollywood, according to estimates made when production was finished a few days ago.

In final form, the picture will run between three and one-quarter and three and one-half hours, a running time exceeded only by "Gone With The Wind," which ran three hours and three-quarters.

Dodds Now Universal Executive

Edward Dodds, first assistant to Martin Murphy, Universal studio manager, has been promoted to the status of production executive. He will work with associate producers Edward Lilley and Frank Gross. The promotion of Dodds also moves Morris Weiner and Henry Spitz up, with the latter two now first and second assistants, respectively, to Martin Murphy.

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO ROUND-UP

There's a slowdown in production—this is the second week in succession that as few as 5 new pictures started. The new ones:

PRC

SHAKE HANDS WITH MURDER—Principals: Iris Adrian, Frank Jenks, Douglas Fowley. Director, Al Herman.

RKO-RADIO

HEAVENLY DAYS—Principals: Fiber McGee & Molly, Gordon Oliver, Barbara Hale, Eugene Pallette. Director, Howard Estabrook.

REPUBLIC

YELLOW ROSE OF TEXAS—Principals: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Sons Of The Pioneers. Director, Joseph Kane.

20TH CENTURY-FOX

IRISH EYES ARE SMILING—Principals: Monty Woolley, Dick Haymes, Anthony Quinn, June Haver. Director, Gregory Ratoff.

TITLE CHANGES

"America" (MGM) now AMERICAN MIRACLE. "Devil's Apprentice" (PRC) now MONSTER MAKER.

RKO Buys 'Duel in the Sun' And 'Pigeons and People'

"Pigeons and People," one of George M. Cohan's greatest comedy hits, has been bought by RKO for early production. Cohan wrote, produced and starred in "Pigeons and People," which was an outstanding Broadway attraction in 1933.

RKO also purchased one of the new year's best-sellers, "Duel In The Sun" and Niven Busch, its author, will be the story's producer when it is brought to the screen. Busch, formerly assistant to, and story editor for Samuel Goldwyn, was recently signed by the studio on a two-way deal as writer and producer.

Lesser to Film 'Mission 51'

Ending an intensive eight months' search for a story to match entertainment potentialities of his phenomenal box-office hit, "Stage Door Canteen," Sol Lesser announced his next production would be "Mission 51," the first motion picture story to deal with the Army Air Corps' new "Grand Hotels" which serve as re-distribution centers for the heroes of the Air Corps who, after having completed their fifty assigned missions are returned to this country for rest, relaxation and a chance to re-adjust themselves to the old life. Lesser expects to be in production around the first of April.

Seek 'National Velvet' Locations

William Kaplan, assistant to Producer Pandro S. Berman, and Howard Horton of MGM's location department, are on a swing through northern California and Oregon investigating possible locations for the Technicolor production "National Velvet," Mickey Rooney starrer. Locations will represent southern Pacific seacoast country. Berman and Director Clarence Brown will reach a final decision on locations from photographs brought back by Kaplan and Horton.

Robinson Himself to Dub 'Mr. Winkle' in 9 Languages

Columbia has decided to make nine foreign language versions of the Edward G. Robinson starrer, "Mr. Winkle Goes To War," for circulation through as many European nations. Prints in a number of tongues will also be shipped to the countries below our southern border. Dubbed versions of "Mr. Winkle" will be made in Russian, German, Spanish, French, Norwegian, Spanish, Italian, Polish and Finnish and will be rushed into release as soon after production is finished as possible.

Robinson, an expert linguist, will dub his own dialogue for the foreign prints, with foreign actors handling the lines of the other characters. Robinson has done extensive propaganda broadcasting for the Office of War Information, with programs short-waved to every corner of the world. Recordings of these stints get a 24-hour-a-day play over government stations, and the actor's voice has become one of the best known abroad, where it is tagged "The Voice of Democracy."

Preston Sturges to Head New Sturges-Hughes Company

In announcing the formation of the new Preston Sturges-Howard Hughes company, Hughes made this statement: "I want to make one thing clear. I can not devote any time whatsoever to the motion picture business until the war is over. I had abandoned completely all of my company's motion picture activities for the duration as I did not know of anyone whom I was willing to trust to carry on this business without any attention on my part. When the opportunity presented itself to make an association with Preston Sturges, I did so, and . . . I am happy to turn over to him the full control and direction of all my motion picture activities."

1500 Extras for 'Wilson' Scene

Fifteen hundred extras, the biggest crowd any movie studio has ever assembled for an interior scene, are being paged by 20th Century-Fox for "Wilson" the Darryl F. Zanuck epic. They will portray delegates to the National Democratic Convention of 1912, which nominated Woodrow Wilson for the Presidency. The colorful spectacle will be filmed in the mammoth Shrine Auditorium in downtown Los Angeles, doubling for Baltimore's Civic Auditorium, actual site of the convention.

Blake in Red Ryder Series

Bobby Blake, formerly under contract to MGM, has been signed as "Little Beaver" in Republic's new Red Ryder series, starring Bill Elliott. The Red Ryder series will have a new main title and an identifying trademark, visual and vocal, as a tag for each picture. First of the series will be the last western for Eddy White, associate producer, who goes on to feature assignments. Spencer Bennet will megaphone the Red Ryder starter, which goes before the cameras on February 26.

Difficult Acrobatic Routines

One of the most difficult acrobatic routines ever filmed in Hollywood is being shot on the set of Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1944" when 40 curvaceous dancers climax six weeks of intensive rehearsal. The number will feature a dance by Eleanor Powell, backed by the 40 lovelies who have been trained to do a series of somersaults and backflips up a huge staircase.

Star Billing for Barbara Britton

Paramount executives have decided, following a screening of the Frank Borzage picture, "Till We Meet Again," to give Barbara Britton co-starring billing with Ray Milland. This was the first leading role for Miss Britton, 22-year-old Long Beach actress, following featured performances in Mark Sandrich's production, "So Proudly We Hail" and in Cecil B. De Mille's "The Story of Dr. Wassell."

Warners Borrow Hedy Lamarr

Jack L. Warner, executive producer, completed arrangements to borrow Hedy Lamarr from MGM for the leading feminine role opposite Paul Henreid in "The Conspirators." Also set for leading roles in the screen version of the Frederic Prokosch drama were Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre. Production starts with Jean Negulesco directing.

YOU CAN'T RATION LOVE (Para.) Comedy-Romance. Principals: Betty Rhodes, Johnnie Johnston, Bill Edwards, Marjorie Weaver, Marie Wilson. Director, Lester Fuller. Plot: Co-eds of Adams College, finding themselves without enough dates to go around owing to the current war-time shortage of men, put the remaining male students on a ration point value basis. Rivalry of two campus sirens over the football hero, puts the campus in a pandemonium and nearly breaks up the varsity show.

MOON OVER LAS VEGAS (Univ.) Comedy. Principals: Anne Gwynne, David Bruce, Vera Vague, Vivian Austin, Joe Sawyer. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Plot: Unable to make a go of their marriage, a young couple decide on a divorce. Following the advice of well-meaning friends, they each strive to make the other one jealous. When a cute brunette falls for the husband, the wife decides to carry out her original intentions and leaves for Nevada. The whole situation is cleared up when they are unexpectedly thrown into each other's arms—where they remain.

ONE EXCITING NIGHT (RKO) Drama. Principals: Tom Conway, Audrey Long, Louis Borell, Edward Brophy, Don Douglas. Director, Gordon Douglas. Plot: A brilliant young lawyer forces an underworld character to give testimony which clears his client. The subversive ring to which this character belongs, wants the lawyer killed to prevent his speaking. Framed for a murder, the lawyer turns the tables on the gangster when he's being cross-examined, and the trial ends with the lawyer free and the gangster arrested for the murder.

BRING ON THE GIRLS (Technicolor) (Para.) Comedy With Music. Principals: Eddie Bracken, Veronica Lake, Sonny Tufts, Marjorie Reynolds, Johnny Coy. Director, Sidney Lanfield. Plot: The world's richest young man is never sure that people aren't nice to him just because he has money. He enlists in the Navy and his legal advisors insist a junior member of the firm and former saxophone player go along to protect him. He keeps his immense wealth to himself. When a cigaret girl falls for him, he thinks she loves him for himself, not knowing she is aware of who he is. With a night club society singer in the picture, the plot becomes a wild comedy, ending with the rich man engaged to the singer and the saxophone player engaged to the cigaret girl.

SHOW BUSINESS (RKO) Drama. Principals: Eddie Cantor, George Murphy, Constance Moore, Joan Davis, Nancy Kelly, Don Douglas. Director, Edwin L. Marin. Plot: This is the story of two young actors who teamed up in 1914 and spent 30 years in show business. With the help and love of a sister act and despite the hindrance of a burlesque queen in love with one of the young men, they all become famous. Although there are numerous misunderstandings and a great deal of unhappiness during their 30 years together, 1942 finds the four of them still trouping and flying overseas to entertain the boys.

IN MEXICO...

the energy and spirit of that nation's citizens are aimed, like ours, at the attainment of complete Victory. War's exigencies demand the diversion which motion pictures so satisfactorily offer, not alone for sustaining morale, but for imparting information.

The aims of our "Good Neighbor" and ourselves are mutual—a triumph for the "good neighbor policy" and for the cause of Freedom.

In a host of Mexico's theatres—Simplex Projectors are at work delivering essential screen entertainment. To audiences—they are "good neighbors" in the nearby projection booth. To discriminating theatre owners—they are a policy.

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY
RED CROSS WEEK
MARCH 23-29

ARMED TO THE TEETH!

"Calling All Patriotic Showmen!
Red Cross Drive March 23rd Through 29th"

The Editorial Page

Now Watch Out!

A sharp reminder that the national legislature isn't the only body invested with the powers to impose taxes on admissions comes booming up from the Blue Grass State. What Kentucky's legislators finally decide with respect to the bill calling for a doubling of the state's present ten per cent admission tax may have repercussions hither and yon about the country.

Theatremen now are right in the middle of adjusting price scales to cover the increased Federal tax on admissions—but that doesn't mean the end of it; not by a long sight.

The state and municipal governments unquestionably will be casting a lingering glance at the picture theatre as a source of revenue. Kentucky, where a twenty per cent tax bill has passed the lower house, may be merely a beginner—a sort of straw in the wind.

Exhibitor organizations are making what may be the beginning of an integrated movement for united action on tax matters. That's fine. But again this page warns the individual theatre owner to get ready—right away—to present his case in the event that additional admission taxes are proposed for his particular locality.

The exhibitor is in a better position to get his story generally before the people of his community than perhaps any other business man in his town. His fellow business men may not be as conscious as they should be of the importance of the motion picture to the community, both as a service to the people and as a dynamic force in the community's business life. It's up to theatreman to keep his fellow merchants aware of that fact, and to have them, as well as the patrons of screen shows, speak up with and for him in a battle to stave off proposed unfair taxation on the theatre.

The individual exhibitor, working with his fellow theatre owners in the area affected by new tax propositions, is, actually, the only one who really can do something for himself in these matters.

Be Proud of Yourself

Joseph Bernhard, the industry's national campaign chairman for the Red Cross drive (March 23-29) announced Wednesday that up to that time more than ten thousand theatremen had signed WAC pledges to participate in the campaign to raise ten million dollars for a great cause. That's good—but every man in a position to pledge a theatre to cooperate will be living up to the noblest tradition of his calling only when the pledge-signing has reached the "unanimous" point. The motion picture showman has carried on magnificently the theatre's long and proud record of being foremost in any movement to raise funds for the relief of suffering in times of war or peace.

It's a mark of distinction to have your name on a pledge to participate in this campaign, and those who do assist the good work to the best of their ability will have just cause to be proud of themselves.

Institutional Advertising

According to a compilation recently published by Advertising Age, distributors spent some two and a half million dollars for general magazine advertising space during 1943. The figure represents expenditures by eight companies to sell people the idea of going to the picture theatres for a look at those pictures which were exploited. That this money is well spent, we take for granted, since surveys by this publication, as revealed in issues of Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry, show that theatremen in all types of situations find advertising in the general magazines one of the most effective means for "pre-selling" the pictures the exhibitors show.

There is, in this advertising by the distributors, a means of starting something tangible toward a greater amount of institutional advertising by the film industry. The institutional propaganda need not crowd out anything pertinent to the selling job of these advertisements in order to include some copy about movie-going in general. Certainly the exhibitor customers of the distributors would appreciate it—and the industry would be done a good turn—if slogans along the line: "your local movie theatre is your best recreation resort" were included in such advertisements.

It's worth trying.

In connection with the price increases that will go into effect April 1 because of the new tax, there will be some good showmanship applied by those exhibitors who do their jobs the right way, and advertise effectively to gain public acceptance of the increased admission charges.

Leo F. Wolcott, president of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska, gives good advice along this line in a bulletin to his membership this week. Wolcott urges practical showmanship "on your screen, in your lobby and through your newspapers," in order that the public may become used to the increase and expect it to take effect on April first.

10,153 R. C. Pledges

More than 10,153 theatres, including circuits, now have signed WAC pledges to participate in the Motion Picture Division's 1944 Red Cross Drive, March 23-29, Joseph Bernhard, the industry's national campaign chairman, announced yesterday (Wednesday).

Bernhard urged all theatres that have not yet signed pledges to do so immediately so that their trailer, Free Kit and other drive material may be sent to them as soon as possible.

Hopper Proposes Group To Set-up Foreign Trade

The formation of a committete to care for the international relations of the film industry was proposed this week by Harold C. Hopper, after his resignation as head of the motion picture division of the WPB. Having served two years in Washington on the WPB, Hopper said he came to see the need of such an organization to aid the Government agencies in their efforts to help the industry through reciprocal trade agreements both in Latin America and abroad.

This organization should be permanent, Hopper said, and should draft a program for presentation at the peace conference. "Unless the industry lays the groundwork in advance for presenting its case it will miss a golden opportunity. The proper committee or agency should be set up now to begin preparing such a program."

Mr. Hopper, in view of the easing of raw stock restrictions, has resigned his Washington post to Lincoln V. Burrows, his assistant, and will return to Hollywood as president of the Cinema Mercantile Corporation. He will, however, remain active with the WPB as consultant, giving the Government five days monthly.

PCCITO Trustees Hear Report On Consent Decree Developments

Reports on consent decree developments, the new admission tax, and manpower policies were scheduled to be heard by the board of trustees of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners in a three-day meeting which began on Wednesday. Those present included L. O. Lukan and Leroy Johnson of Seattle; M. W. Mattecheck, Bob White, and O. J. Miller of Oregon; Ben Levin and Rotus Harvey of San Francisco; Hugh Bruen and George Duamos of Southern California; and Robert H. Poole, executive secretary of PCCITO.

The reports on the consent decree, presented by Harvey and Poole, covered the Chicago and Washington discussions, and dealt with unfair trade practices alleged by exhibitors to have developed in the three years since the decree went into effect. One point made in the report was that Assistant U. S. Attorney General Tom C. Clark now has nearly 8000 individual opinions of exhibitors from every part of the country on which to base his findings.

B. O. Records Fall, As 'Lady' Leads Parade

Sales and production executives were smiling widely this week after a series of reports from New York and around the country revealed that the latest bunch of pictures to go out from the exchanges has held up to the fast business pace maintained by earlier successes at the box-office. In order to equal that fast pace it meant that some records had to be broken, and some were.

The most sensational performance was recorded by "Lady in the Dark," which finished its first week at the Paramount Theatre in New York by cracking no less than six house records. The Technicolor special ran up a new all-time high gross for the theatre, rolled up the largest attendance for a week (169,000), set a new opening day record, did the biggest Sunday business, and hit a new high for a week-day (Friday, February 25). The Washington's Birthday opening topped by 53 per cent the Christmas week holiday opening of "Star Spangled Rhythm," the previous record-holder. One reason for the tremendous showing, Paramount officials believe, was that the picture drew not only the regular Broadway trade, but also what is known as the "carriage trade." The theatre presented 42 de luxe shows during the first week.

Meanwhile "The Song of Bernadette" went into its sixth week at the Rivoli, New York, on a road show basis still playing to capacity. When the engagement is completed at this house new records are sure to be racked up in a theatre which has been playing pictures since before 1920.

"Jane Eyre" at the Music Hall, although falling off in its final week, nevertheless did big business over the four-week stay. "Up in Arms," the Sam Goldwyn Technicolor musical which introduces Danny Kaye as a comedy star in films, started off on Thursday with a smash.

Preston Sturgis' "Miracle of Morgan's Creek," which did famously at New York's Paramount, exhibited lasting strength by playing its fifth week at the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre, where it has broken every house record. This happened despite the fact that for several weeks it was playing day and date with the New York engagement. It is now in its third week at the Paramount in Newark, N. J., also in the metropolitan area.

But all the record-breaking did not take place in Manhattan this week. A revival, Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," has made history in Cincinnati by smashing all one-day records at the Grand. This theatre, with a seating capacity of 1451, played to 9609 paid admissions the first day. It was part of the 60-city revival "premiere" for the Disney classic.

Another of those tough-fibred audience pictures seems to be "A Guy Named Joe," which continues to be one of MGM's top grossers for the season. In 23 out-of-town extended engagements the picture is running ahead of "Madame Curie," "Girl Crazy," and "Salute to the Marines."

Boston has gone for Frances Langford in PRC's "Career Girl," which has been held over in both the Fenway and Paramount theatres there.

Paralysis Foundation Honors Industry for Role in Drives

The part played by the film industry in the fight against infantile paralysis was emphasized this week in the announcement by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis of a series of luncheons and dinners to which industry leaders will be invited as special guests. The first five of these affairs were held this week in Louisville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Memphis, and Jackson. Other luncheons and dinners scheduled for March include Birmingham, Montgomery, Winston-Salem, Norfolk, Richmond, Raleigh, Columbia, Charleston, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tallahassee, Orlando, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Miami, and Atlanta.

MGM Promotes Mrs. Sinclair

Mrs. Amy Sinclair, who has been with MGM for 19 years at the Kansas City office, has been named office manager, following the induction of Charles W. Aaron into the Army.

Bond Goal Topped

More than 12,000,000 "E" bonds were sold by the film industry in the Fourth War Loan, it was announced Tuesday in Hollywood by Charles P. Skouras, national chairman of the industry's drive. This total exceeds by 500,000 the "Bond for Every Seat" goal set by Skouras for the campaign.

Monogram to Get Bank Credits Up to $1,000,000 This Year

Banks will provide Monogram Pictures with credits up to $1,000,000 during the coming year, it was announced this week by W. Ray Johnston, president, and George D. Burrows, treasurer. The credit will be managed by the Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles and will be participated in by the California Bank of Los Angeles and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

Under the terms of these agreements, the banks for a period of one year will provide Monogram, directly or under their guarantee, with a revolving line of credit, limited to a peak of approximately one million dollars. This represents a substantial increase in the amount of bank credit made available to the corporation.

Readies 2nd Front Film Units

Col. Hugh Stewart of the British Army Film Unit, who was the co-producer with Col. Frank Capra of "Tunisian Victory," soon to be released by MGM, is returning immediately to London to take up a new post as chief of the Second Front Film Units.

Strayer Signs As Producer-Director

Frank Strayer has been signed by RKO Radio as producer and director. His initial assignment is as producer of "The Girl Rush," in which Wally Brown and Alan Carney will star.

Darryl F. Zanuck

(The Man on the Cover)

Vice-president in Charge of Production, Twentieth Century-Fox, whose return to civilian production activities, after a long period of service with the U. S. Army, takes tangible form on theatre screens with the release of "The Purple Heart." With the exception of that period which he devoted to service with the Army in the present war, Mr. Zanuck has guided the production destinies of Twentieth Century-Fox since its inception. In recognition of outstanding services in the North African theatre, he was awarded the Legion of Merit Medal, it was announced this week by the War Department.

Drain Studio Manpower

One-third of Hollywood's normal film production personnel are now in the armed forces, with the number of stars on studio flags adding up to 6496. This was discovered when the Public Information Committee, western division, made a survey of the industry's men-in-service record in preparation for the Red Cross 1944 motion picture appeal. Military withdrawals from the Screen Actors Guild alone reached a total of 1324 by the end of January. Some men are returning steadily from service, but this added manpower is entirely offset by others going into training.

John LeRoy Johnston to Head Republic Publicity

John LeRoy Johnston, veteran of 33 years in the advertising, publicity and sales ends of the film industry, this week became national director of public relations for Republic Pictures, it was announced by Herbert J. Yates, Sr. Mr. Yates said, in making the appointment, that expansion plans for the company were in line with the engagement of Johnston for this post, and that the new public relations director would assume his new duties next Monday.

Johnston's experience in films goes back to the early days, when he was publicity director for two chains. He came to Hollywood in 1921 as a sales and exploitation contact for Paramount. He subsequently was associated with Frank Lloyd, Mack Sennett, Columbia, Edwin Carewe, Universal, Walter Wanger, and Hunt Stromberg. Recently Johnston has been publicity director for the Frank Ross production of "The Robe."

Key City Trade Showings For Columbia's 'Cover Girl'

Columbia this week started a series of key trade screenings of "Cover Girl," Technicolor production starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly.

The showings were inaugurated in Hollywood Wednesday. On Thursday the picture was screened in New York at the Normandie Theatre.

Other showings set so far are: March 6th at the Shubert Theatre, Philadelphia; Lincoln, New Haven; March 7th at the Varsity, Milwaukee; the State, Waterbury; March 9th in Hartford; March 10th at the Lake Theatre, Cleveland; March 14th at the Esquire, Chicago.

There will be three screenings on March 8th: at the J. P. Harris, Pittsburgh; Poli, Bridgeport, and at Palace, Dallas. Five shows on March 13th: Houston, at the Riveroak Theatre; Des Moines, Roosevelt Theatre; Indianapolis, Keith's; Memphis at the Memphian and St. Louis at the Ritz Theatre.

Millakowsky Producing for Republic

Herman Millakowsky has reported to Republic's North Hollywood studio to take up his work as a producer. Millakowsky has collaborated with Joseph Pasternak of MGM, Robert Siodmak of Universal and was a prominent producer in Germany and France before coming to the U. S. in 1942.

Gold Returns from War Service

Robert C. Gold, RCA field engineer formerly engaged in Photophone theatre equipment installation and servicing in Iowa, has returned to company headquarters in Camden, N. J., after eight months in servicing electronic equipment of the armed forces in North Africa.

Shuffle Prices to Collect New Tax

Theatre men this week were preparing to put new price schedules into effect when the 20 per cent admission tax becomes a reality on April 1. The present rate of one cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof will be superseded by a rate of one cent in each five cents, or major fraction thereof. Tax experts estimate the new levy will net the Government $297,000,000 a year.

The general opinion around the country is that absorption of all or part of the increased tax by the exhibitor would be ruinous, and for that reason almost all managers and owners were experimenting with price scales that would leave them in the clear without antagonizing the public. It is expected that most patrons will understand the increased taxes and take them in stride, but a certain portion (those who do not read the newspapers) will undoubtedly object unless the pill is made easier to take through appeal to their patriotism or through such direct methods as charging prices that will eliminate the nuisance of handling pennies.

Under the new tax law price scales look like this:

Price	Tax	Total
10	2	12
15	3	18
20	4	24
25	5	30
30	6	36
35	7	42
40	8	48
50	10	60

Out of nine prices only two work out to an even figure after the tax has been added.

They have found they cannot be altogether successful, but that they can make a fairly effective price scale except for the lowest price range. The important point about the new tax law is that the rate is one cent in each five or major fraction thereof. This means the tax on a 10-cent seat would be 2 cents and on a 12-cent seat it would still be 2 cents; but on a 13-cent seat it would be 3 cents. Working it out on this basis, it is possible to come up with the following price schedule that would eliminate pennies:

21	4	25
25	5	30
29	6	35
33	7	40
42	8	50
50	10	60

To reach these totals the exhibitor could raise his price or lower it to absorb part of the increase brought about by the tax.

In some localities the tendency is to put in a blanket raise on all prices and make up losses at some figures by bigger advances on others.

In St. Louis a plan along this line was drawn up at a meeting of independent theatre owners of the city, eastern Missouri, and southern Illinois.

Round Table Tax Conference Approved by Virginia MPTO

The Round Table Conference of Exhibitor Organizations on Taxation, which was set up last week through cooperative action by Allied, MPTOA, and other exhibitor groups, has now been approved by the MPTO of Virginia. President W. F. Crockett declared the organization's board of directors okayed the Round Table as a means to a strong front in the likely event that further war demands may bring new tax increases. In this case, he said, exhibitors would need representation so that new tax raises will be in proportion to those of other industries.

Concerning the consent decree, Crockett said he had hopes that something good might come out of the discussions now going on between the Department of Justice, distributors, and exhibitors.

But, Is it Art?

Rave reviews by New York newspaper critics fail to make a dent in the anticipatory enthusiasm with which Bob Fredericks, motion picture editor of The Miami Herald, awaits the coming of a picture to the playland of the South.

In a recent column, Fredericks said:

"With a very few exceptions I have always regarded the New York critic as one of those herd-running intellectuals, who is too afraid of being caught with his artistic pants down to accurately report what he sees and feels at the cinema."

Kentucky Theatres Face 40 Per Cent Total Tax

Exhibitors over the nation are carefully watching the situation in Kentucky, where the House of Representatives this week passed a revenue bill calling for a 10 per cent admission tax, which, in addition to a present 10 per cent state tax and the new Federal 20 per cent tax, would saddle Kentucky exhibitors with a 40 per cent levy on all admissions. The bill will become law unless it is defeated when it comes before the state Senate. The bill provides that both the added tax and the original 10 per cent tax will expire in July, 1946.

Concern was expressed in New York film circles over the Kentucky situation because it was felt that if the Blue Grass State goes through with the total 40 per cent tax, the action might be construed as a precedent by legislators of other states in a general move to turn to theatres for increased revenue.

'I'm Not One-Man Censor,' Says Judge; Drops 'Immoral' Charge

Saying he didn't want to be "placed in the role of a one-man censor of movies for the people of Omaha," Judge Lester Palmer refused to rule in Municipal Court February 25 on the case of Ralph Goldberg, charged with showing immoral scenes and pictures at the Arbor Theatre.

Three women, making the complaints, along with Welfare Inspector Knapp have testified in previous court sessions that 75 per cent of the audience at the showing of the pictures were children under 16. Goldberg said in court that he had shown the films because they had been well received in Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan.

Republic Takes Over Franchise

Republic Pictures Corporation announces that it has purchased the franchise interests of J. H. Alexander and Sam Fineberg for the distribution of Republic pictures in the Pittsburgh territory, effective Wednesday, March 1st.

Sam Seplowin, Republic's Central District sales manager, has taken over the operation of the branch temporarily.

Ealing Studios Plan Release Of Six Features in U. S. Soon

Six pictures were announced for release in the U. S. by Ealing Studios, English company, when the company revealed this week in London that Paul Graetz had been appointed as representative in this country, Canada and Latin America. Graetz is expected to have several of the films available in the near future, with the group completed in four months. Ealing announced a total of twenty features to be released during the coming year, although it is not yet known whether the British company intends to put all its product on the American market.

The six pictures sure of U. S. distribution are "San Demetrio-London," story of the heroic crew of the tanker, Jervis; "Went the Day Well," concerning a supposed invasion of Britain; "Nine Men," about soldiers stranded in the Libyan desert; "The Half-way House," starring Francoise Rosay; "Johnny Frenchman," also starring Mlle. Rosay; and an untitled film with a story set in Australia. Graetz said this week that the Ealing Studios films will be released through the established American distributing channels.

MPA Organizes Committee To Carry on Post-War Plans

In a move to put a post-war program into actual work, the Motion Picture Associates, in a meeting at the Hotel Astor Tuesday, formed a committee for the purpose of raising funds to carry on peace-time charitable activities. This committee is to be chosen by the board of directors, rather than by direct vote of the members, to facilitate operations.

Cy Seymour was chosen chairman of the MPA's welfare and relief committee, and he in turn chose Bert Sanford and Jack Levy as associates. Julius Charnow was made chairman of the membership committee, while Jesse Stern was appointed chairman of the constitution committee, and William McKee was named to head the publicity committee. Morris Sanders, the new MPA president, sat in the chair for the first time at the meeting.

Boston Luncheon for Johnston

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures, will be guest of honor at a luncheon in Boston next Monday given by Herman Rifkin, New England franchise holder. The affair will celebrate Johnston's thirtieth year in the film industry, and will be preceded by a showing of "Lady Let's Dance."

Johnny Kime, of the State Theatre, Roseboro, N. C., has taken over the Caswell Theatre, Yanceville, from the Everett Enterprises of Charlotte. Kime will completely renovate and re-equip the house.

Reports Heavy Bookings

Heavy bookings for "The Purple Heart" have followed trade showing of the Darryl F. Zanuck production, it was reported by William J. Kupper, general sales manager of 20th-Fox, this week.

Major Firms Finance New Educational Tie-up

Eight major distributors, through MPPDA, have given financial backing for the establishment of a Commission on Motion Pictures in Education, it was announced this week in Washington by Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education. The eight companies are Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO Radio, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Bros.

The Commission has been appointed to study the needs of schools and colleges for motion picture material and to plan for the production of new films for courses of study. Post-war reconstruction will be one of the subjects given special attention. The Commission has made plans to establish an office and staff—probably in New York—for carrying forward its studies.

The members of the Commission are: Mark A. May, director of the Institute of Human Relations, Yale University, chairman; George S. Counts, director of the division of foundations of education, Teachers College, Columbia University; Edmund E. Day, president of Cornell University; Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association; Monsignor George Johnson, general secretary of the National Catholic Educational Association, and, ex-officio, George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education.

'Buffalo Bill' April Release

"Buffalo Bill" and "Tampico" were announced this week by 20th Century-Fox as the company's April releases, coming in Block No. 9. "Buffalo Bill," produced by Harry Sherman, is in Technicolor and has a cast including Joel McCrea, Maureen O'Hara, and Linda Darnell. Edward G. Robinson and Lynn Bari are the featured players in "Tampico."

Rathvon at Studio

N. Peter Rathvon, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, planed into Hollywood from Mexico City over the week-end for conferences with Charles W. Koerner, vice-president in charge of production. He expects to return to New York in about a week.

FILM TRAVEL LOG

Sir Alexander Korda arrived Monday from England for conferences at the MGM home office. His wife, Merle Oberon, was due to arrive in New York from the coast later in the week.

Stanton Griffis, film chief of the OWI, reached Hollywood on Monday for talks with John C. Flinn, Hollywood WAC coordinator, and Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president.

John Balaban went back to Chicago after a series of conferences in Manhattan.

Tom Connors, 20th-Fox sales head, off to Florida for a combination business and pleasure trip.

In from Des Moines this week were G. Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-States Theatre Corp., and L. McKeachnay, also of Tri-State.

Monogram executives on the move this week: President W. Ray Johnston to Toronto for dinner in his honor; Steve Broidy, general sales manager, to Hollywood, with stopover in Chicago; Harry H. Thomas, eastern division manager, on trip to Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, and Toronto.

Moe Silver, zone manager, and Ben Steerman, contact man for Warner Theatres in the Pittsburgh territory, left Tuesday for that city after a week in Manhattan.

Close Call

A Vancouver meat packing house almost committed a faux pas during a recent visit to the British Columbia city by Herbert Marshall. The film star was assisting in the war effort and employes of the meat company decided to honor him with a gift. With meat rationing in mind, they had a beautiful ham all picked out and wrapped for delivery. Then somebody remembered that a ham would hardly be an appropriate gift to an actor. The employes then presented Mrs. Marshall with a bouquet of flowers.

500 Picture Prominents Fete Charles Skouras in Hollywood

More than 500 prominent figures of the motion picture industry attended the testimonial luncheon given in Hollywood Tuesday for Charles P. Skouras in honor of his work as national chairman of the Fourth War Loan Committee. With Eddie Cantor as master of ceremonies, chairman Skouras was accorded much praise for his part in the drive, and he reciprocated by handing the praise right back to those who carried out their own assignments. Among the speakers were Louis B. Mayer, Y. Frank Freeman, Jack L. Warner, Joseph M. Schenck, Mayor Fletcher Bowron, D. D. Durr, President of the Newspaper Association of S. California, R. H. Molton of the War Finance Department, Marco Wolff, Robert Poole, president of the S. California ITOA, Rabbi Edgar Magnin, and B. V. Sturdivant.

Also on the dais were Darryl Zanuck, William Goetz, Leo Spitz, Charles Koerner, N. Peter Rathvon, U. S. District Attorney Charles Carr, Samuel Goldwyn, Sam Katz, Joseph Rosenberg of the Bank of America, Henry Ginsberg, Lou Anger, and Hunt Stromberg.

Astor Revising Danny Kaye Short Comedies

Rights to three Danny Kaye short comedies, produced several years ago for Educational and released by 20th-Fox, were acquired this week by Astor Pictures. The films are "Dime a Dance," "Getting an Eyeful" and "Cupid Takes a Holiday."

The three two-reelers are to be edited to make a feature version to be released under the title of "The Danny Kaye Komedy Kavalcade," it was announced by R. H. Savini, president of Astor.

Savini Plans New Productions

Plans for producing new pictures have been completed by Robert M. Savini, president of Astor Pictures. Mr. Savini revealed this week that a new company, Ajax Pictures, had been formed with himself as head. He said the new organization would go into production itself, as well as handle new product from other studios and some reissues.

Ned Depinet Sets Up A New Pattern for WAC Distribution

Following the recommendation of retiring chairman, William F. Rodgers, the WAC Distributors Division, headed by Ned E. Depinet, has realigned the Division and appointed new exchange area chairmen to function on all WAC projects for the ensuing year.

First request from Depinet to the new men was included in a wire urging all to back the forthcoming Red Cross Week, March 23rd through 29th, headed by Joseph Bernhard.

The realignment plan, which, Depinet stated, was conceived by his assistant, Leon J. Bamberger, derives the maximum use of exchange personnel across the country by placing them into eleven special WAC districts. The Distributor Chairmen in each district will be branch managers of the same company, and the district manager of that company will be asked to lend his full support and ability to coordinate all activities as they relate to his district.

The new set-up, it was felt, would enable the WAC to avail itself of the exceptional talents of the district managers who, up to this time, had not been utilized to the maximum possible advantage.

Because of the overlapping of the various companies' sales districts it was not possible in every case to have the WAC districts conform.

The following is the list of appointees, some of whom are contributing "repeat performances" for the WAC:

Metropolitan District (MGM) — District Manager Jack Bowen, New York office; Ralph Pielow, New York; B. Abner, New Jersey.

Northeastern District (Paramount)—District Manager Wm. Erbb, Boston office; A. M. Kane, Boston; Ed W. Ruff, New Haven; C. G. Eastman, Albany; M. A. Brown, Buffalo.

Eastern District (RKO)—District Manager R. J. Folliard, Philadelphia office; Charles Zagrans, Philadelphia; H. H. Greenblatt, Pittsburgh; J. B. Brecheen, Washington, D. C.

Eastern Central District (United Artists)—District Manager Jack Goldhar, Detroit office; Harris Dudelson, Cincinnati; Maury Orr, Cleveland; M. Dudelson, Detroit.

Southeastern District (20th Century-Fox)—District Manager Paul Wilson, Atlanta office; Fred R. Dodson, Atlanta; John E. Holston, Charlotte; E. V. Landaiche, New Orleans.

Southwestern District (Columbia)—District Manager Sam Moscow, Atlanta office; J. B. Underwood, Dallas; J. J. Rogers, Memphis; C. A. Gibbs, Oklahoma City.

Midwestern District (MGM)—District Manager Sam Shirley, Chicago office; W. E. Banford, Chicago; W. H. Workman, Minneapolis; H. J. Shumow, Milwaukee.

Indiana-Kentucky District (Republic)—Wm. Marriot, Indianapolis.

Prairie District (Universal)—District Manager J. E. Garrison, Kansas City office; Harry Hynes, St. Louis; Jack Langan, Kansas City; Lou Levy, Des Moines; H. B. Johnson, Omaha.

Rocky Mountain District (RKO)—District Manager Len Gruenberg, Denver office; Tom Bailey, Denver; G. Davison, Salt Lake City.

West Coast District (Vitagraph)—District Manager Henry Herbel, Los Angeles office; Vete Stewart, Seattle; Al Oxtoby, Portland; Al Shmitken, San Francisco; Fred Greenberg, Los Angeles.

Alabama 'Dimes' Ahead of '43

R. M. Kennedy, state chairman, Birmingham, reported last week that Alabama had collected $40,447 in the recent March of Dimes drive. This compares with $6570 in 1943, a boost of over 500 per cent. Less than 20 states have reported $1,500,000.

As its cooperative effort in the 1944 Red Cross fund-raising campaign, MGM contributed the picture of June Allyson above which, along with a story stressing the importance of the drive, is appearing as a four-color mat in 15 magazine sections of 15 newspapers across the nation.

WAC Issues Second 'Movies At War'

Second annual report of the War Activities Committee for 1943, titled "Movies at War," has been printed and mailings have begun to members, civic dignitaries, libraries, newspaper and magazine editors.

This year's report is a fifty-six page booklet, and covers all phases of the Industry's participation in the War effort through words and pictures.

By breaking the activities of the Committee into 5 major categories the editors of the report were able to give detailed coverage to each facet of initiative and were also able to stress the important financial jobs undertaken and completed in the past year.

First section of the book deals with Wartime Entertainment and covers the entire motion picture contribution including military benefits and closer Inter-American relationship. The second section has to do with War Financing and demonstrates the importance of the theatres themselves as community Treasury offices in

Dinner on the House When Diner Purchased $100 Bond

Eric Van Dyck of Loew's 83rd Street Theatre made an effective tieup with the Hotel Milburn Restaurant whereby the management picked up the check of every patron who purchased a $100 bond on a designated night during the 4th War Loan Drive.

Manager Van Dyck had announcement cards made up and placed around the restaurant. It was expected to result in the sale of possibly five or six bonds, but Van Dyck was agreeably surprised to learn that 45 customers had responded.

Key City Meetings Launching Industry's Red Cross Campaign

More than 1500 theatres in the Washington, Detroit, New Haven and Denver territories were represented in four Red Cross exhibitor rallies held Monday as the first of the nationwide series of key city meetings to launch the Motion Picture Industry's 1944 Red Cross Drive, March 23-29.

Joseph Bernhard, National Chairman of the industry's campaign, and Sam Dembow and A. W. Smith were principal speakers at the Washington rally, held in the Statler Hotel before a gathering of approximately 500, representing 450 theatres. Speakers also included John J. Payette and Carter Barron, exhibitor chairmen, and J. B. Brecheen, distributor chairman.

In Detroit, two meetings were held, one in the Fort Shelby Hotel with a theatre representation of 500, and the other at the Variety Club, with exchange personnel making up most of the attendance of more than 150. Ben Kalmenson, in a last-minute switch, was added over the weekend to the executives' unit which started its speaking tour in Detroit. Other members of this group include E. L. Alperson and Ben Shlyen. The Detroit meeting also was addressed by Earl J. Hudson, local exhibitor chairman, M. Dudelson, distributor chairman, and two war heroes, Lt. J. P. Gilbert, field director for the Red Cross and veteran of South Pacific action, and Lt. Allen Simpson, winner of the Air Medal, the Purple Heart and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The Denver rally had a representation of 300 theatres. Ned E. Depinet and Harry Brandt arrived there from New York to address the gathering with Rick Ricketson, local exhibitor chairman, and Tom Bailey, distributor chairman.

In New Haven, a gathering representing

Red Cross Press Book Mailed to Exhibitors

Copies of the War Activities Committee's press book for the motion picture industry's Red Cross Drive, March 23-29, are being mailed to every theatre in the United States, it was announced this week.

Prepared by Harry Goldberg, campaign manager, and Charles Smakwitz, publicity director for the drive, with the aid of Sid Rechetnik, Joe Tisman and Jess Gourley of Warner Bros., under the supervision of Mort Blumenstock, the 12-page, 11x17 manual has been printed in three colors.

Included in the material: President Roosevelt's proclamation; Joseph Bernhard's letter; the National Red Cross Chairman's letter; complete description of the Free Kit available to every theatre; photographs of National Screen Service accessories; mats; stories; contests; quotations from Army and Navy heads; complete publicity and exploitation material; Red Cross assisting posters, etc.

What happens when your hat comes down?

SOMEDAY, a group of grim-faced men will walk stiffly into a room, sit down at a table, sign a piece of paper—and the War will be over.

That'll be quite a day. It doesn't take much imagination to picture the way the hats will be tossed into the air all over America on that day.

But what about the day after?

What happens when the tumult and the shouting have died, and all of us turn back to the job of actually making this country the wonderful place we've dreamed it would be? What happens to you "after the War?"

No man knows just what's going to happen then. But we know one thing that must not happen:

We must not have a postwar America fumbling to restore an out-of-gear economy, staggering under a burden of idle factories and idle men, wracked with internal dissension and stricken with poverty and want.

We must not have breadlines and vacant farms and jobless, tired men in Army overcoats tramping city streets.

That is why we must buy War Bonds—now.

For every time you buy a Bond, you not only help finance the War. You help to build up a vast reserve of postwar buying power. Buying power that can mean millions of postwar jobs making billions of dollars' worth of postwar goods and a healthy, prosperous, strong America in which there'll be a richer, happier living for every one of us.

To protect your Country, your family, and your job after the War—buy War Bonds now!

Let's all KEEP BACKING THE ATTACK!

The Treasury Department acknowledges with appreciation the publication of this message by

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

Eleven of the 14 leading film industry executives now touring key cities to conduct exhibitor rallies in conjunction with local exhibitor and distributor chairmen, for the 1944 Red Cross Campaign, met in the office of Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres and national chairman of the drive, last week, to work out details of their itineraries. Seated (l-r): Ned E. Depinet, distributor chairman, Bernhard, Si Fabian. Standing (l-r): Leon J. Bamberger, A. W. Smith, Jr., Harry M. Kalmine, Gradwell L. Sears, Ben Kalmenson, Sam Dembow, James R. Grainger, Harry Goldberg, campaign manager. Also in touring group, but not present when picture was taken: Martin Smith, Francis Harmon, Ben Shylen.

Schine Circuit Totals $54,000 in 'Dimes'

Schine Circuit's Home Office, Gloversville, announced that the final computation of the March of Dimes collections throughout the circuit showed a net total of $54,000. This figure is about a 300 per cent increase over the total collection made last year.

This year a special honor roll was inaugurated, known as Schine's Grand Guys Honor Roll. Qualifications for managers to earn the distinction of having their names inscribed on this scroll required that a collection of $1000 or more had to be turned in. The managers who have received this honor are: Bob Cox, Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Kentucky ($1295.48); Jerry Fowler, Geneva Theatre, Geneva, New York ($1235.97); Norman Prager, Rialto Theatre, Amsterdam, New York ($1190.59); Reynold Wallach, Strand Theatre, Cumberland, Maryland ($1099.45); Joe Schwartzwalder, Auburn Theatre, Auburn, New York $1144.12).

It is planned to use the Honor Roll idea on future collection drives so that the name of any manager reporting a collection of $1000 or more will be added to the scroll.

The leaders of the Schine Theatres' collections in the various states were as follows: The Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, led in the State of Kentucky. The Geneva Theatre, Geneva, was outstanding in New York State. The Strand Theatre, Cumberland, was Maryland's leader, and the Wooster Theatre, Wooster, led Ohio with a collection of $955.51.

In the competition among the "B" houses, the Rialto Theatre, Lockport, New York, turned in the best record with a collection of $639.01.

Executives of the Schine organization stated that the competition for all honors in the drive was keen, and putting the campaign on a competitive basis proved successful.

any important national drive. War Philanthropy comprises the third section and in this category fall four national fund appeals and one local urgency that was met. The fourth section is titled War Information and explains the why and wherefor of the various films released by the WAC for public consumption. The fifth section, War Services, deals with industry personnel who have made all of the WAC activity possible through constant cooperation.

An appendix of facts and figures appears in the back of the booklet and the statistics listed there are for quick reference by any and all concerned.

Meetings Launching Red Cross Campaign

more than 250 theatres was addressed by Robert Mochrie, Francis S. Harmon and Harry M. Kalmine.

On Tuesday, the Kalmenson-Alperson-Shlyen unit spoke at a meeting in Indianapolis, moved on to Chicago to address a gathering there on Wednesday. On the same day Dembow and Smith spoke in Atlanta, while Depinet and Brandt spoke in Portland, Ore.

Three cities held rallies on Thursday. Bernhard and Kalmenson were in Pittsburgh, Alperson, Shlyen and another speaker in Milwaukee, and Dembow and Smith in New Orleans.

The Alperson-Shlyen unit addressed a rally in Minneapolis on Friday (3), with Depinet and Brandt speaking in San Francisco.

Among points stressed by speakers at the mass gatherings are the importance of rushing the signed pledges, by exhibitors who have not yet sent them in, to the Motion Picture Theatres' Red Cross Drive headquarters in the Paramount Building, Times Square, New York City, so that no time will be lost in servicing all exhibitors with the service kits, trailer, and other helpful material being furnished for the campaign.

WB Films Potent in Boosting Minnesota, Dakotas Bond Drives

Out of 73 War Bond Premieres, resulting in bond sales of $2,649,000, reported up to last week to the local War Activities Committee in the Fourth War Loan Drive, approximately $880,000 or 33 per cent was raised with the showing of Warner Bros. films.

Performances took place in Minnesota and nearby spots in North and South Dakota. In addition to recent releases like 'Destination Tokyo," "Thank Your Lucky Stars" and "Northern Pursuit," revivals like "Oklahoma Kid," "One Foot in Heaven" and "Sergeant York" were shown to big crowds.

More Loew Houses in Contest

With 17 Loew's Theatres far over the top in the sale of 'A Bond For Every Seat," and with a number of others expected to reach their quota, a circuit executive believes that the Loew group will have more theatres of over 2000 seats in the Honored Hundred contest than any other group of theatres. Thus far nine of the seventeen houses seat more than 2000 people.

Ask Exhibition of Red Cross Subject

As part of the industry's Red Cross Drive, March 23-29, the Motion Pictures Committee headed by Joseph Bernhard as National Chairman is making special efforts to get as many theatres as possible to play the Red Cross short being distributed gratis by Warner Bros. exchanges.

This nine-minute subject, of which 685 prints have been supplied to exchanges, shows the Red Cross in action both on the battlefields and on the home front, with scenes of its activities at Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Attu and many other beachhead invasion operations, as well as depicting the organization's marvelous work in collecting blood plasma, sending books, magazines and other articles to our fighting men, and in maintaining the morale of those at home.

Red Cross aid to prisoners of war and to soldiers in the most isolated outposts, from tropical jungles to the frozen north, also is shown.

Major-General Jimmy Doolittle and Lieutenant-General Mark W. Clark are among those who offer testimony on the great and necessary job of mercy performed by the Red Cross, whose blood plasma collections and vigilant care are largely responsible for the fact that 97 out of every 100 wounded soldiers may be expected to recover.

Because the short brings home the urgent and extensive need of the Red Cross today and will induce greater generosity on the part of the American public on behalf of the men and women at the fighting fronts, theatres are being urged to play the subject a week or so before the actual collections.

White and Larkin on Loan To War Activities Committee

Two representatives of the East Coast Industry Service Bureau, Mark Larkin and Gordon White, are "on-loan" to the War Activities Committee, according to Oscar Doob, WAC Public Relations chairman.

White is assisting Charles Smakwitz, Publicity Director of the Motion Picture Theatres Red Cross Week. Larkin is associated with Ed. Schreiber, WAC publicity director, in bringing the story to the public of the industry's gift of 16-mm prints of current films for free showing to men in combat areas overseas.

Mrs. Parker Honored

Mrs. J. J. Parker, president of the Parker Theatres, Portland, Oregon, has been initiated into the KOIN Million-Dollar Club, according to word from Jack Matlack, publicity director of Parker Theatres. The statewide organization is made up of persons in Oregon who have been responsible for the sale of a million dollars' worth of war bonds. Membership, therefore, is limited, and to become a member is definitely an honor. Every Tuesday evening activities of the club are broadcast throughout the state, and on each of these evenings a new member is admitted. Thus no more than 52 persons can be admitted in any one year.

Mrs. J. J. Parker

Mrs. Parker is the third Oregon woman to receive this high honor.

The Box Office Slant

The Falcon Out West

RKO Radio Mystery 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Very entertaining mystery for the "Who Done It?" fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will be welcome supporting feature for the duallers.

Cast: Tom Conway, Don Douglas, Barbara Hale, Carole Gallagher, Joan Barclay, Cliff Clark, Ed Gargan, Minor Watson, Lyle Talbot, Lee Trent, Perc Launders. Credits: Produced by Maurice Geraghty. Directed by William Clemens. Original screenplay by Billy Jones and Morton Grant based on the character created by Michael Arlen. Photographic direction by Harry Wild.

Plot: A wealthy ranch owner dies of rattlesnake bite while whooping it up in a New York night club. His fiance, his ranch foreman and his first wife are present at the club, as is, also, The Falcon, whom the first wife is attempting to hire to prevent her ex-husband's marriage to the show girl. The murder trail leads back to the western ranch, with the Falcon unraveling the clues and solving the crime.

Comment: Conforming to the standards established for the series this film emerges as a completely pleasing mystery drama following the familiar formula. Suspicion is directed at almost everyone in the picture with the "know it all" detective, his dumb assistant, and the Falcon locking horns over the investigation. The murderer's identity is concealed to the unreeling of the final scenes to accomplish the customary fashion for a surprise ending. There is nothing out of the ordinary about the show, but it will satisfy the not too discriminating mystery story fans, and there is a little western atmosphere thrown in for good measure.

Going My Way

Para. Drama-With-Music 125 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) All patrons will be so delightfully entertained that they will thank you for having brought the picture to your house.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With few exceptions, this picture will top all your past grosses, whether a class house or a whistle stop. Bing Crosby's name will start them coming; word-of-mouth will crowd the doors.

Cast: Bing Crosby, Rise Stevens, Barry Fitzgerald, James Brown, Jean Heather, Eily Malyon, Frank McHugh, Stanley Clemens, Gene Lockhart, Fortunio Bonanova, Porter Hall, Robert Mitchell Boychoir. Credits: Produced and directed by Leo McCarey. Original screenplay by Frank Butler and Frank Cavett. Director of photography, Lionel Lindon. Music score by Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen.

Plot: Bing Crosby, as a young priest, athletic and music-loving, is sent to rehabilitate a run-down parish. With the help of a former schoolmate, now an opera star, and another former schoolmate who has likewise become a priest, Bing succeeds in selling his music and paying off the church debt and in forming a boys' choir. He straightens out a romance between two young people and finally wins over the resentful older priest of the church.

Comment: With few exceptions, this picture will top all your past box-office grosses. It is "us folks" stuff, right at home in class houses or whistle stops. It is a picture that makes no pretense of greatness or magnificence and in the very simplicity of its humanity, is great. There are tears, but the picture is not maudlin; there is laughter, yet it is certainly not disrespectful or irreligious; there is music and singing, yet they blend into the whole so that no one asks himself what they are doing there. The villainy is circumstantial and at worst is made to seem petty and easily surmounted by kindness, understanding and the proof that no one needs more out of life than his own happiness. Your patrons will thank you, after having paid their admissions and been delightfully entertained. It is daring in that it shows the Catholic Priest as a man. But it develops the exposition of that man so that all of us will wish we could be like that. It is a profound argument for religion though it avoids the slightest suggestion of preaching, and, oft-times, the man being corrected is the older priest, a symbol of the Church out of tune with the people. Crosby carries the combination role of Priest and man so that each dignifies the other, and presents one of the finest portrayals of his career. His singing is powerful, but never out of place and his dramatic delineation will be the envy of many who have specialized in dramatics. Whether his is the top role in the picture, however beautifully portrayed, is challenged by Barry Fitzgerald's presentation of the older priest. Here, given an opportunity to be himself and yet present a character which he loves (for he must love it to show it so perfectly) Fitzgerald gives the role feeling and understanding, combining man and priest in whimsy, roguishness and much "aren't we all" acceptance. All the others are fine, but the picture revolves around those two. The overall credit must go to Leo McCarey for it is his baby from beginning to end. Starting with the original idea, McCarey watched while it was whipped into a screenplay, then took over production and directed. The film sneaks up on you, like the main character of Father O'Malley, and will remain with you long after many other "great" and "magnificent" and "striking" films are forgotten. Arrange a preview for all the religious leaders of your community and plan your exploitation with them, after they have seen the picture. You should have no trouble getting their cooperation.

(Nat'l Release, March 10)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Will be best appreciated by class audiences who judge films according to artistic worth rather than entertainment merits. Too depressive and tragic for popular reception.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Its best chance for success is in the long-run, small "arty" theatres of metropolitan centers. Will need strong support, preferably that of a gay comedy or musical, in the average community.

Cast: Francis Lederer, Sigrid Gurie, J. Edward Bromberg, J. Carroll Naish, Alexander Granach, David Cota, Olga Fabian, Howard Johnson, Hans Schumm, Luis Alberni, George Sorel, Martin Garralaga, Jacqueline Dalya, Rudolph Myzet, Fred Nurney, Bob Stevenson, Otto Reichow, Martin Berliner. Produced by Rudolph Monter and Arthur Ripley. Directed by Arthur Ripley. Screenplay by Frederick Torberg, adapted from the original story by Arthur Ripley. Director of photography, Dick Fryer. Art direction, Rudy Feld. Musical score, Michel Michelet. Musical direction, Yascha Paii. Technical advisor, Eugene Shufftan.

Plot: Doomed to a German concentration camp because he played the forbidden Moldau at a concert in Prague, Francis Lederer, Czech pianist, after being subjected to barbaric cruelty and violence which unhinge his mind, escapes from his guards and eventually makes his way to Guadalupe, a haven from which many refugees try to get passage to the United States. Before his arrest, Lederer had had his sweetheart, Sigrid Gurie, smuggled out of Czechoslovakia to escape the Germans. In Guadalupe, unknown and without means of identity, he vaguely improvises at a waterfront saloon while his sweetheart, unknown to him, lies across the street in the dingy apartment of J. Edward Bromberg and his wife, dying of a broken heart. Lederer incurs the wrath of Alexander Granach and J. Carroll Naish, smugglers and murderers of refugees, when in a semi-lucid moment, he sinks their "murder ship," bringing their business to an end. Naish's murderous revenge snaps Lederer's mind back to normal, but he is mortally wounded. He stumbles to the bedside of Sigrid who is already dead, and collapses. The lovers are reunited in death.

Comment: Produced on a small budget by Rudolph Monter and Arthur Ripley, then acquired by United Artists and prepared for release, "Voice in the Wind" is a depressive, slow-moving drama whose virtues are outweighed by its faults. Were the picture directed solely to class audiences, especially those esthetes who judge a production according to artistic standards, its chances for success might be less doubtful. But when the average moviegoer is taken into consideration, the picture must be judged on its entertainment merits. On that score, it fails. One must be fully alert to trace developments of the plot, for the continuity is jerky and the photography, for the most part, is dark. A symbolic touch here or there may prove a little too subtle for the average patron to comprehend, may even cause laughter from a thoughtless spectator which becomes contagious, and this destroys the tense mood for the few who are valiantly striving to appreciate the producers' serious purpose. Francis Lederer and Sigrid Gurie are sincere and believable in the leading roles, but a striking characterization by Alexander Granach tops all the other performances. A musical score, apparently added after United Artists acquired the picture, points up the dramatic

Meeting Planned to Outline 'Mark Twain' Special Campaign

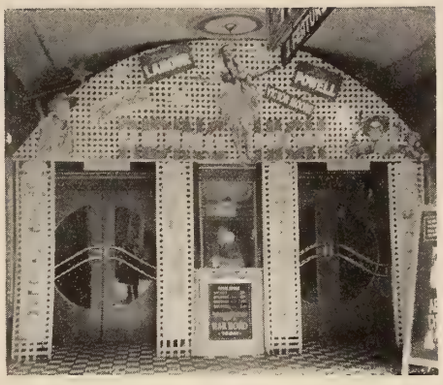
Simultaneous meetings and a joint session of the Warner Bros. field public relations staff and Warner Theatres advertising men will be held in New York March 3 to discuss the special campaign for "The Adventures of Mark Twain," it was announced Tuesday by Mort Blumenstock, in charge of the film company's advertising and publicity in the East.

The distribution department's field staff, called in by Blumenstock, will include Ted Tod and Lucia Perrigo, from the Chicago territory; Bill Brumberg, Cincinnati; Herbert S. Pickman, Atlanta; Frank Bruner, Dallas; Glenn Ireton, Toronto; Don Walker, Kansas City; Jack Leewood, Denver; Carl Post, St. Louis; Art Moger, Boston, and Robert Harris, newly added to the staff, with first assignment as assistant to Brumberg in the Central territory.

Theatre department ad men being called in by Harry Goldberg, advertising and publicity director for the circuit, include J. Knox Strachan, Cleveland; Dan Finn, New Haven; Robert Paskow, Newark; Irving Blumberg, Philadelphia; James Totman, Pittsburgh; Frank LaFalce, Washington; Marcel Brazee, Milwaukee, and Charles Smakwitz, Albany.

Following a screening of "Twain," the two groups will hold a joint session, with other members of the home office distribution and theatre departments also participating. In addition to talks by Blumenstock and Goldberg, the session will be addressed by Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres; Harry M. Kalmine, assistant general manager of Warner Theatres, and Jesse L. Lasky, producer of the picture, who arrives in New York on Saturday from the coast.

Sam Clark, western field man, will get details of the campaign from Blumenstock when the latter arrives on the coast about the middle of March. Departure of Blumenstock with Ben Kalmenson and Samuel Schneider for studio conferences has been set for March 10.



Century Circuit Plans Shows to Combat Juvenile Delinquency

First of a series of programs, athletic and entertainment, designed to bring closer together the policemen and the youth of the 61st precinct, will be held Saurday morning, March 11, at the Century Circuit's Mayfair Theatre, Avenue U and Coney Island avenue, at 10 a.m.

Presented by the Police Athletic League and the recently organized Coordinating Council of the 61st precinct in cooperation with Century Circuit, the program will feature a Roy Rogers western and cartoons. Patriotic ceremonies by Boy Scouts will open the program. Approximately 2000 boys and girls are expected to attend.

Said Joseph R. Springer, general theatre manager of Century, in lending the Mayfair to the 61st precinct for the event: "The purpose of this and all future events is to bring about a better feeling of friendship and understanding between the youngsters and the police, and to instill in boys and girls the P.A.L. spirit."

Economy itself is a great revenue!

Shown above is the front created by Harry Stearn of Schine's Manring Theatre, Louisville, Ky., for the showing of Paramount's "Riding High." Note that the lattice-work, which is permanent, provides a background for cut-out letters and display elements and saves costs on materials.

'Voice' Premiere is Held At Camden

Employes of RCA Victor's Camden plant comprised the major part of an audience at the Lyric Theatre in Camden, N. J., last Saturday when the industry's first war workers' world premiere was held in connection with United Artists' "Voice in the Wind." Others among the spectators included civic and social leaders, as well as members of the press from New York, Philadelphia and Camden.

Before making a personal appearance at the premiere, Francis Lederer and Sigrid Gurie, who enact the principal roles in the film, appeared in a dramatic scene from "Voice in the Wind" on RCA Victor's "What's New" radio program via WJZ in New York. When they appeared on the Lyric stage following the picture's premiere, the large audience accorded them an enthusiastic reception.

Merchants Arrange Window Displays

All local merchants participated in the campaign by arranging attractive window displays, and RCA Victor played up the premiere with an assortment of ads in all local newspapers. The opening was arranged with RCA Victor as part of the huge national exploitation campaign in connection with Victor's music album on Smetana's Moldau which plays an important role as the musical background in "Voice in the Wind."

Included in the trade paper delegation from New York at the premiere were: James Jerauld, Boxoffice; Al Steen, Film Daily; Frank Leyendecker, Film Bulletin; Al Picoult, Harrison's Reports; R. W. Baremore, The Independent; Mel Konecoff, Jay Emanuel Publications; Ralph Cokain, SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW; James P. Cunningham, Motion Picture Daily; Charles Aaronson and Floyd Stone, Motion Picture Herald; Fred Stengel Variety. Newspapers and syndicates were represented by Jack McManus, PM; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Perry, of the North American Newspaper Alliance, and L. L. Stevenson, of the Bell Syndicate.

From United Artists came Arthur Jeffery, Arnold Stoltz, Wilma Freeman, Phil Laufer, Robert Goodfried, Herb Berg and Ben Schetman, representing the producers, Arthur Ripley and Rudolph Monter.

Launch 'Snow White' In 60-City Premiere; Pick Contest Winner

Preceded by a spectacular pre-opening publicity campaign, Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was launched last week by RKO Radio in a revival premiere in sixty cities in Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, and Kentucky, with the Grand Theatre in Cincinnati as the whirling center of the activities.

Revival of the Disney film excited large public interest. Opening its doors at 8 a.m., the Grand, seating 1451, had a block-long waiting line all day up to midnight, indicating, according to Sol Schwartz, RKO Theatre zone manager, and Col. Arthur Frudenfeld, local division manager, one of the most successful runs in the history of the theatre.

Climaxing a four weeks' campaign, highlighted by full newspaper and billboard coverage, daily hour, half-hour, and quarter-hour programs over Radio Station WLW, and personal appearances throughout the four states by traveling units consisting of Adriana Casselotti the original Snow White voice of the picture, and the voices of Donald Duck, the Seven Dwarfs, and a group of animators from the Disney Studios in Hollywood, the chief event was the selection over WLW of the winners in the Snow White and cartoonists contests, with Deems Taylor, noted music critic, acting as judge.

Names of the winners were revealed on Thursday night (24) at a Snow White Coronation dinner at the Netherlands Plaza Hotel under the sponsorship of the Cincinnati Variety Club, with the governors of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana as the guests of honor. Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio crowned Vera Collins of Middletown as the new Princess Snow White.

In the New York delegation attending the Coronation dinner were Ned E. Depinet, Robert Mochrie, Nat Levy, Walter Branson, Edward L. Alperson, Harold Mirisch, Harry Mandel, S. Barret McCormick and Linus Travers, head of the Yankee Network in New England.

With Cincinnati spearheading the way, other cities in the four-state tieup followed quickly with their premieres. By Sunday (27), all sixty cities were showing "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" simultaneously.

400 Canadian Stores Involved In Tieup on Warner Bros. Films

Four hundred choice retail outlets throughout Canada will put on window displays featuring Warner releases under and extensive tieup just concluded by Warners with Country Club Sportswear, largest Canadian manufacturer of quality merchandise in its field.

In addition, the firm will feature Warner players in a national advertising campaign in the class women's magazines of Canada.

First pictures to get the benefit of this promotion will be "The Desert Song," starting early in March, and "In Our Time," starting in April.

Displays and advertising layouts will be changed monthly to bring them up to date with new Warner film releases.

Program Exchange

Line-Cut Ad Elements Help Improve Program Appearance; All-Type Layouts Discussed

Since these lines were written several days ahead of the day you're reading them, we'd like to report that the weather was balmy and mild. We laughed as we read a newspaper report to the effect that a hail storm out in Los Angeles looked like snow to the natives. What the weather must have been in Texas we have no idea. But as times goes on, we find it getting milder and milder in our own section of the country. Who knows—perhaps in years to come the northeastern section of the nation will become warmer, while the south and southwest may become cooler? In that case, we'll have to go south to keep cool—maybe even to Texas. One never knows what atmospheric changes may take place in the next few hundred years.

And now that we've dispensed with the weather, we hardly know how to begin our Program Exchange discourse. Again the programs are few and far between. What has happened to all those members who promised to send us copies as they were issued? Only a few of the faithful have kept their word; many others have just dropped out minus an explanation of any kind. Perhaps the pressing duties of patriotic drives have made it impossible for them to forward programs, so we'll be patient just a little while longer. Among the faithful heard from are Manager Thomas di Lorenzo of the New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y.; the manager of the 48th Street Theatre, New York; Wilfrid Bonds (are you still there, Wilfrid?) of the Palace Theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.; David Nolan, of the Normandie Theatre, New York, and Jim Owen, of the Owen Theatre, Branson, Mo. In a letter, Jim still expects us for that fishing trip. (Little does he know that our idea of a fishing reel is a short subject on angling. And, too, we've always had an idea that a casting rod is a magic wand used by a Hollywood casting director to select players for motion pictures. Also, as far as we know, a fly is something with wings that flits hither and yon. What a fisherman we'd make!)

We've often noticed that there are many line-cut illustrative elements in press book advertisements which might well be used in program layouts. When G. B. Odlum was at the Uptown Theatre in New York, he frequently employed half-tone silhouettes and line-cut illustrations to point up the appeal of his layouts. Now along comes the 48th Street Theatre, which specializes in Swedish films, and does the same thing effectively in its current program. Just in case you're not sure exactly what we mean, we're reproducing the center spread of the program on this page. You needn't pay any attention to the attractions, for most likely you'll never play them, but you can analyze the layout, even going so far as to get out a few press books, cut out some of the half-tone and line-cut ad elements, and perhaps also the stars and titles, and practice making up a similar layout. With a paste pot and shears, plus a little ingenuity, you'd be surprised at the attractive and effective layouts you can make. Bear in mind that this practice of revamping (the combining of elements from a number of ads into one layout) will also add to the appeal of your newspaper ads. Try it some time.

Some theatremen get the idea, however, that to have "sock" a program must have illustrations. That isn't always the case. Many a theatre's program utilizes no cuts whatsoever, depending on type only to maintain reader interest. This may seem an easier method at first thought, but after due consideration you come to realize that often the simplest things are the most difficult to achieve. An all-type program requires a family of type faces and a layout that will always command attention. If you do not trust your own judgment in the matter, see your printer and let him suggest the proper typography for you. Once you have selected the type you want to use, stick to that type, for it will identify your program. Refrain from using several different type faces; it would be best to select a face which is available in all the sizes you require. If yours is a "class" house, use dignified type that will reflect that class. If you concentrate on action and sensationalism, then select the type that best reflects that aspect of your policy. And so it goes.

At this point in our discourse we took time out to welcome Private Joe Davis, a former associate, and now one of the "big" men (weight: not sure, but must be over 200 lbs) in Uncle Sam's Army. Looking hale and hearty, Joe didn't tarry long.

Back page of di Lorenzo's program is wisely utilized to advertise forthcoming attractions by means of small one-column ad mats. And one-column space in the center of the inside spread, flanked on either side by ads for current attractions, is used to call attention to the early showing of "Madame Curie."

We come to the end of another edition of the Program Exchange. If you issue a program, why not put us on your mailing list? And if you have any problems or any suggestions, why not forward them to us?

Reproduction of the 48th Street Theatre's inside program spread shows how line-cut elements from ads can be used to heighten the effect of a layout. Discussion of this subject is in the Program Exchange.

More Chicago Radio Plugs

An increase in the number of film companies using radio tieups in Chicago was announced this week. Paramount will use CBS three times weekly to boost "Lady in the Dark." Twentieth Century-Fox is using spot announcements for "The Sullivans," while RKO and Universal plan to make frequent use of the local CBS outlet to plug their current attractions.—Ch.

Tractor Firm Tieup, Display of Bulldozer Help Sell 'Seabees'

Excellent promotion ballyhooed "The Fighting Seabees" for its engagement at the Riverside Theatre in Milwaukee, Wisc. The campaign was highlighted by newspaper advertisements, an outdoor bulldozer display, and a department store window display arranged through a tieup with the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, whose bulldozers are seen in action in the film.

Four-column advertisements appeared in the Milwaukee Sentinel and Journal, utilizing a still from the production, with copy reading: "Tractor Bulldozers Are Their Weapons. Allis-Chalmers Crawler Tractors, equipped with bulldozers, are featured in Republic Studio's picture, 'The Fighting Seabees,' starting Friday at the Riverside Theatre." Additional copy called attention to the display of a tractor-bulldozer in front of the Boston Store, one of the leading stores in Milwaukee. This display remained for seven days. The bulldozer bore a sign with copy reading: "Allis-Chalmers Diesel Tractor Equipped With Bulldozer—See It in Action—With the 'Fighting Seabees'—Riverside Theatre." Another sign urged the purchase of war bonds to buy more bulldozers for the Fighting Seabees.

A window display of stills from the film was used also by the Boston store.

Republic's Milwaukee Branch Manager Jack Frackman worked with the Riverside Theatre in arranging this attention-getting promotion.

Excellent publicity placement included an eight-still picturization in the Little Theatre section of the Sunday Milwaukee Sentinel, with theatre and playdate credit; photos in the Green Sheet of the Milwaukee Journal and in the Sunday Milwaukee Journal.

Other promotion was centered about Seabee Max Wolozynek, who was guest of honor at a press-preview and reception at which Frackman was host to Warner executives, the newspaper and radio press, high-ranking officers of the Navy and Army, Waves, and Spars. Seabee Wolozynek was presented with a silver identification bracelet by Acting Mayor John L. Bohn.

Milwaukee had been primed for "The Fighting Seabees" through advance publicity in connection with Republic's national reception honoring Seabees representing twenty-six states held recently in New York City. At that time, Milwaukee papers carried photos of the Seabee who represented that city, with mention of "The Fighting Seabees."

A full showing of 24-sheets, radio spot announcements over Stations WEMP and WISN; and 800 lines of additional newspaper advertising in the Sentinel and Journal made up the advertising campaign.

Small Canadian Towns Stage Strong Campaigns on 'Army'

Even the smaller Canadian situations are staging strong campaigns on "This Is the Army" and getting exceptional response as a result, it has been reported by Warner Bros.

An example of the unusual selling effort being put behind the Irving Berlin musical in the less populous centers is that of M. D. McPhee, manager of Premiere Operating's Strand Theater, Newmarket, Ont., with a population slightly under 4000.

McPhee groomed his campaign with spot announcements, enlisted the assistance of the local military establishment, and then topped his job with a cooperative full-page ad in The Era of nearby Aurora.

A feature of the promoted page consisted of reproduced photos of a quartet of Newmarket men who are prisoners of war.

Spectacular Front is Designed For 'Lady in the Dark' in N. Y.

For the Broadway engagement of "Lady in the Dark" the New York Paramount Theatre unveiled a spectacular theatrical display.

Veteran showmen are unanimous in acclaiming the display one of the best attention-getters they have ever seen. Weeks before the Washington's Birthday New York premiere, Robert M. Weitman, managing director of the Paramount, and Jack McInerney, publicity director, went into a huddle with Thomas E. Blackmore, of Max Fine Signs, who designed and executed the mammoth front. The finished product towers 75 feet, five stories above street level.

The display carries out the lush, glamorous treatment of the Technicolor film. The keynote is the gorgeous mink-and-sequin garbed figure of Ginger Rogers which also highlights the newspaper advertising campaign. This figure measures 35 feet in height and is set in a huge frame which covers the facade of the theatre. The frame, built in sections, is 40 feet wide and 50 feet high and includes as a background for the figure of Miss Rogers a montage of scenes from the film. Flanking one side of the gigantic frame is a mirrored cylinder 5 feet in diameter and 45 feet high, forming a torch.

Title Letters Six Feet High

For the marquee, the regular bulbs were dispensed with and a huge sign covering the three sides of the marquee was erected running 60 feet around and rising in the center to a height of 15 feet. The center of the marquee display features a relief figure of Miss Rogers 10 feet in height. The letters of the title are 6 feet high, of beveled wood painted a deep blue with gold leaf edges. The whole marquee display has a gold mirror border with a white background.

Under the marquee, for the actual theatre front, is a colored transparency photo montage illuminated by 18 fluorescent strips. Framed in the center is another Ginger Rogers glamor figure on solid mirror. Mirrored columns flank each side of the transparency. On top and bottom of the colored transparencies are baroque panels carved out of 3-inch-thick lumber painted white. Letters "Lady in the Dark" are 2 inches thick, carved out of wood and covered with gold leaf. Letters for members of the cast are 2 inches thick, painted magenta and edged with gilded faces.

The entire front is brilliantly illuminated at night with specially constructed lighting. The facade display is in keeping with the decorative theme of the interior of the theatre, which includes an elaborate outer lobby and a huge, colorful display in the 100-foot grand lobby also in keeping with the beauty and glamor of the picture. The interior displays were installed several weeks before the opening.

Delbridge Exploits 'Bridge' in Nashville

In exploiting the opening of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" at Loew's Vendome Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., Manager Tom Delbridge put over a number of attractive window displays which in addition to radio and newspaper plugs got the picture plenty of local attention.

The Wiles Stationery and Photographers Store got out a full window display using the stationery angle for the tieup. A special display six feet high by four feet wide was built in the window and surrounded by sixteen scene stills. The center of the display was a huge card reading: "Writing paper reflects your personality now as in the romantic days of scribes portrayed by Lynn Bari and Francis Lederer in 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey' now at Loew's." Both Castner-Knott and Zibart's Book Shop also arranged book displays featuring scene stills with appropriate credit to the Loew engagement.

Ten thousand blotter-bookmarks were distributed at all public libraries, book stores, rental libraries, schools, colleges, post offices and in the writing rooms of all leading hotels. Insert cards were posted in both the downtown and neighborhood business sections.

Radio plugs for "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" were received on various programs over Stations WSM, WLAC and WSIX. Feature stories on the stars in the picture with plenty of art was used in all local newspapers as well as college publications.

The inner lobby of the theatre was decorated with large colored displays erected over the inner doors. Out front were three colored frames with a colorful valance used underneath the entire marquee. All types of posters were used in the campaign a full two weeks prior to the picture's opening.

Parade and Stage Ceremonies

Mrs. Grace M. Fisher and Richard Schuette of the Maryland Theatre, Cumberland, Md., arranged an American Legion parade to the theatre followed by impressive stage ceremonies which included swearing-in of Wacs and Waves and a short concert by the Legion band. Activity was part of the campaign on "The Man From Down Under."

Special Book Edition

A special motion picture edition of "Passage to Marseille," the story by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, has just come off the Grosset & Dunlap press and will be utilized in promotion of the Warner Bros. screen version.

UNRATIONED POINTERS FOR POTENT CAMPAIGN

At first glance you might rate this as just one of those musicals to tag along on a double bill as a filler rating only about 25 per cent of the space in your advertising. If you take a good look at the picture with an audience at your elbow it is our hunch that you'll re-dub it a "sleeper" and give it the "works."

With this show we can see a different result in the "pull" department. The picture is clever happy, youthful, well directed, well acted—in short it's "audience." It will please a very high percentage of all the people you can coax to come in to see it.

Like any show that lacks star power, this one calls for special treatment if you want to cash in. Without getting a glimpse of the press book (it hasn't been prepared yet) we herewith submit our idea of a campaign which, if executed in its entirety, will make this much more than just a pleasing little musical in box-office results.

ADVERTISING

The key to this entire campaign is to be different, strike hard on the fun angle without resorting to laff week copy, etc., sell Betty Rhodes and Johnnie Johnston as new stars and use plenty of type copy and in general create the impression that this is something big that you, the manager of the theatre have discovered for your customers.

The best way to get this idea across is through a series of advance ads in which you talk to your prospects in an intimate, personal sort of way. Trick headline copy and appropriate illustrations which you can get from your newspapers mat service will lead readers into your sales talk. (See left column of adjoining page for copy ideas.)

Invite Ration Board members to opening performance and get their comments for follow-up ads after the opening.

WINDOW TIEUPS

You can do a patriotic turn and at the same time get a good plug for this picture by printing a special window card for butcher shops and grocery stores through the following tieup copy: "Turn in Waste Fat and receive 2 Red Points per pound. It's the patriotic housewife's way to help speed Victory. NO POINTS NEEDED IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR FUN . . . SEE . . . 'You Can't Ration Love'" etc.

This same gag can be worked for stores featuring non-rationed shoes by slanting the copy to read: No Points Needed If You're Looking for SHOE COMFORT . . . etc. Of course there will be the usual window tieup possibilities on bobby socks fashions, young men's styles contrasting the clothes of TWO POINT SIMPSON and THIRTY POINT PETE (The campus football hero).

TEASER CAMPAIGN

Small ads could be developed on the ration angle by preparing a series of ration stamps of various point values using the heart pierced by an arrow (From a Valentine Day Card) as the decorative motif. The ads should start two weeks in advance and copy could follow this line:

(1st Day)
One Smile—
TWO POINTS
but . . .
You Can't Ration Love

(2nd Day)
One Hug—
FIVE POINTS
but . . .

See . . .
You Can't Ration Love

At this point the larger ads described above could follow through starting with the ad headed: "Come and Bring Your Ration Board." If you feel these teasers will get more reader attention on the Classified Pages you might add a reference line (after your display ads start to break) directing the reader to the amusement page for more news on "Love Rationing." If your local paper carries a daily ration index try to spot your teasers close to it.

SPECIAL HERALDS

You can work out an attractive, ticket-selling special herald in the shape and form of a Ration Book. Use paper stock similar to the real thing and on the inside pages use the ration stamp illustration described above as a border around each page. Label each stamp as being good for Two Love Points, Five Hit Tune Points, Ten Laugh Points, 20 Fun Points, etc. Billing and catch copy could be used on the center space of both pages. The back cover could be a two-column press book ad with illustrations. A herald of this sort will excite kidding and conversation and will not be so quickly thrown away. It's the kind of inexpensive pass-out which can be produced locally at small cost.

LOBBY DISPLAY

If you have art shop facilities, make up enlarged ration coupons of cardboard (for use as hangers under the marquee) which will spin in the breeze. The ration book described above as a herald could be built of compo board into an attention-getting set-piece for the lobby. Heads of the stars could be superimposed on the ration coupons for decorative purposes. Another set-piece idea would be a large "A" board with a humorous copy slant satirizing "How to Use Your Ration Points." Use your special "ration book" heralds as part of this gag.

COLLEGE TOWN STUNTS

If you are fortunate enough to have a college in your town, here is a picture here that will clean up if you don't miss its opportunities. How about having a debate on the subject "Would rationing Solve The Manpower (or Girl power) Problem?" This could be a co-ed, gals vs. boys, boys vs. boys or gals vs. gals stunt on the radio; through letters of limited words to the press or as a stage stunt, with prize for the winning team. A college paper should eat up a controversy as to the point values of male students in the form of a popularity contest with the gals voting.

You might like to offer a special price of admission to girls wearing bobby socks who bring their dates to the theatre on opening night—providing they give the cashier the love points out of your special herald. Set a certain hour for this offer. The local press will get plenty of story material from a stunt of this kind. The college and high school kids will go all out too for such a gag.

BALLYHOO

Dress up a young fellow in ill fitting clothes, collegiate hat, horn-rimmed glasses, books and umberella and send him around town with a picket sign reading "Girls are unfair to me! 'I'm 2 Point Simpson in 'You Can't Ration Love'." Have him distribute your ration book heralds and if you can get permission from several large stores or factories employing a lot of girls you might have him picket a different spot when the girls are leaving or going to work with the sign copy localized to read "The Bon Ton Girls are Unfair To Me!" etc.

AD COPY IDEAS

Below are lead copy suggestions for four different ads on "You Can't Ration Love." In order to reproduce these ideas only the top portion or heads of the ads are shown with the balance or bottom of the ads to be made up from press book ads. These heads can be set in type locally with appropriate illustrations from your newspaper's mat service.

Voice in the Wind

impact of some of the situations, and the playing of Smetana's Moldau should please music lovers. When all is said and done, "Voice in the Wind" will probably gets its highest awards in the long-run, small "arty" houses of the nation's metropolitan centers. Too, the circumstances surrounding its production, and the film's artistic pretentions may inspire glowing adjectives from some newspaper critics. Indeed, those aspects which make the picture a question mark for the public at large may well serve to boost its career in the "arty" theatres. In the average community, it will need strong support, preferably that of a gay comedy or musical to dispel its aftermath of gloom and despair.

Knickerbocker Holiday

UA Comedy-With-Music 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Good music and singing with a sly satirical story.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The names of Nelson Eddy and Charles Coburn should be marquee draw in most situations, while in the class houses, the title, which reminds picture is based on play, will appeal.

Cast: Nelson Eddy, Charles Coburn, Constance Dowling, Ernest Cossart, Shelley Winter, Johnny "Scat" Davis, Otto Kruger, Richard Hale, Fritz Feld, Chester Conklin, Carmen Amaya and her Company. Credits: Produced and directed by Harry Joe Brown. Screenplay by David Noehm and Rowland Leigh. From the stage play by Maxwell Anderson. Screen adaptation by Thomas Lennon. Director of photography, Phil Tannura. Musical direction by Jacques Samossoud.

Plot: In 1650, the Council of New Amsterdam sends for Peter Stuyvesant to help them rule with an iron hand. Instead of punishing the town's pamphleteer, he sends him on a long journey, and while he's away, arranges to marry his girl and take over control of the rackets. Finding out all the facts on his return, the pamphleteer stirs the people to revolt and convinces them they should retain Peter Stuyvesant, who has agreed to reform.

Comment: Whether this hit play made into a picture will have them crowding the doors to pay their money, depends on your patronage. For class trade, a musical comedy satire in costume should do right well, and the music and sly humor will entertain and delight. For other types of trade, word-of-mouth may be a touch and go affair, with some enjoying the singing and some of the story. There are times when the singing, though rollicking and good-humored, stays the telling of the story. Picture seems to prove that where story is serious and an important part of a musical comedy, it vies with the music. Nelson Eddy, a little older and heavier, is in good voice, giving the songs the tone and volume they need to make them public demonstrations. Charles Coburn, always an excellent actor, is well supported by a number of character actors whose faces will all register with your patrons. In addition, Coburn surprises with the rendition of two roguish songs, and while he is no candidate for the Met, he manages to carry the tune pleasantly. In all, the sly, broad humor of the original satire is maintained and plenty of laughs run through the audience. Production and direction are by Harry Joe Brown, a veteran and expert hand, and every possible bit of fun is squeezed out of each situation. Dress a man or woman, or both, in costume, and have them go through town passing out heralds, or singing some of the songs from the picture. Tieup with music stores and radio stations for Nelson Eddy recordings of songs from the picture. Since one of the features of the story is pamphleteering, pamphlets written in the old Dutch style, kidding different people in your town, and the Mayor too, if he is fair game, will stir considerable interest.

Cover Girl

(Technicolor)

Columbia Comedy With Music 107 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Eye-catching, tuneful entertainment for everybody.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A sure attraction with plenty to exploit and a good advance national campaign behind it to put it far up forward as a money picture.

Cast: Rita Hayworth, Gene Kelly, Lee Bowman, Phil Silvers, Jinx Falkenburg, Leslie Brooks, Eve Arden, Otto Kruger, Jess Barker, Anita Colby, Ed Brophy, Curt Bois, Thurston Hall and The Cover Girls. Credits: Produced by Arthur Schwartz. Directed by Charles Vidor. Rudolph Mate, Allen M. Davey, directors of photography. Technicolor director, Natalie Kalmus; associate, Morgan Padelford. Dance numbers staged by Val Raset, Seymour Felix. Song, "Poor John" by Fred W. Leigh, Henry E. Pether. Art direction, Lionel Banks and Cary Odell. Screenplay by Virginia Van Upp. Adaptation by Marion Parsonnett, Paul Gangelin. Story by Erwin Gelsey.

Plot: Rita Hayworth, one of the chorus in a night club run by Gene Kelly, takes what Kelly calls a "short cut" to success—by winning a beauty contest that lands her portrait on the cover of a magazine—and sudden prominence. Her talents bring her an offer of a role in a stage play—which offer she accepts after Kelly "fires" her (because he doesn't want his love for her to stand in the way of her career). After some time, the girl returns to the night club, seeking Kelly, only to find it dark, and after her search for him fails, she agrees to marry the producer of her stage show. But she's still in love with Kelly, and finds it easy to jilt the producer through Otto Kruger's persuasion.

Comment: Rita Hayworth surrounded by flocks of the prettiest girls, satiny settings, good tunes and Technicolor rendition of an eye-appealing production—what more do you want for an attraction to draw today's crowds to the theatre? This very stunning show, while practically all Miss Hayworth's, is marked by several additional stellar features —the most notable being the acting and dancing of Gene Kelly as the leading figure in the life of the dancing girl who wins great fame and popularity after her pretty face adorns the cover of a slick magazine. The romance written for the show, while in substance a carbon copy of the usual back-stage story, has among its virtues the material for nostalgic love scenes, specialty bits for song and dance, and a comedy interlude or two which register most effectively. The Jerome Kern music and Ira Gershwin's lyrics very substantially contribute to the success which marks Columbia's latest and most sumptuous screen offering. The "theme song," which furnishes background music for the romance scenes, has a hauntingly lovely melody. For Miss Hayworth's and Mr. Kelly's performances there will be much popular applause, and deservedly so. Good, indeed, are acting contributions by Phil Silvers, Leslie Brooks, Eve Arden, Otto Kruger and Lee Bowman. The Charles Vidor direction is notably good, and Arthur Schwartz proves his mettle as a producer of musical romance with this ambitious attraction. The manner and method of introducing closeups of the cover girls supplies a sequence that will win Oh's and Ah's from the boys and girls of all ages—from ten up. A really swell show, this.

DETROIT

Six hundred Michigan motion picture theatres launched their campaign in behalf of the American Red Cross War Fund Monday, February 28, with three executive members of the War Activities Committee listed among the theatre leaders participating.

Two meetings of Detroit theatre and exchange representatives were called to hear Benjamin Kalmenson of Warner Bros.; E. L. Alperson, general manager of RKO Theatres Corp., and Ben Shlyen, publisher of Box Office, traveling from New York to help promote the Red Cross drive. In charge of arrangements for both meetings were Earl J. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres and Michigan state chairman of the Red Cross campaign for the WAC, assisted by Frank J. Downey, resident manager for MGM, who is also chairman of the Managers Exchange Committee.

Frank Upton, former manager of the Palms-State Theatre, has gone overseas.

That business about a show bringing down the roof became literally true Sunday, February 27. Plaster from the ceiling of the Regent, a neighborhood theatre, fell upon the audience, necessitating hospital treatment for three boys.

Detroit theatres would be affected by increases in license fees now being contemplated by city officials in a move to raise additional revenues. In some cases 50 per cent boosts are under consideration, while in other cases licenses would cost many times the present fees. The proposals, put before Mayor Edward J. Jeffries by Controller Charles G. Oakman, would boost city revenue from such sources from $418,597 to approximately $798,941. Such widely differing businesses as food retailers, pawnbrokers and fish dealers are concerned, as are golf courses, ball parks and other amusement centers. Present motion picture house fees range from $25 to $100. The new range would be from $35 to $150. The city's basis for the increased charges is the claim that the establishments are deriving special profits from various municipal services.

Charles W. Munz, president of the LaSalle Garden, the Grand Riviera and the Riviera Annex theatres, died February 22 at Detroit. Mr. Munz, who was 79 years old, came to this country from Germany in 1881 and entered the furniture business. He retired at the age of 50, but came back into the business world when he invested in the old Palace Theatre. He became manager of that house, then took over control of the other theatre interests. Two sons, Harold R. and Elmer G., survive.

Charles A. Simms, 34 years old, former owner of Detroit neighborhood theatres and at various times manager of theatres, including the United Artists and the Punch and Judy, died at his home last Sunday. He recently had been employed in a Detroit war plant.

Shirley Anderson, the daughter of a Detroit musician, who has just won herself a Hollywood contract, was "discovered" as potential star material when she was working as an usherette at the Uptown Theatre.

The Detroit Variety Club threw itself wholeheartedly into the Red Cross campaign Monday after hearing national WAC leaders urge 100 per cent support of the program.

INDIANAPOLIS

Showmen are being interested by Earl Cunningham, general manager of the Fountain Square Theatre group, in plans to make regular entertainment, including both motion pictures and stage talent, available to the 450 men and women patients of the Marion County Infirmary at Julietta.

There was a great gathering of the theatrical clan at the Variety Club Monday night to assist Carl Niesse and his wife celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. Niesse, of course, is the operator of the Vogue Theatre.

R. H. Robertson, operator of the Majestic Theatre, at Springfield, Ky., is preparing for his induction into the Navy. He will be stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Station.

The Mossland Theatre, Greensburg, Ky., was completely destroyed by fire February 19. The origin of the blaze was not determined. H. A. Moss operated the house.

Jesse Fine of the Fine Circuit, Evansville, Ind. was in Chicago during the past week on business.

Meanhile, Charles Boasberg is on his second swing around the country in connection with the Ned Depinet drive, accompanied by Harry Michalson. Charlie is expected back in New York in time for the final drive meeting on April 11, and as soon as sales totals are completed he will step into Wolff's old job as metropolitan district manager.

The Paramount Pep Club held its first big Home Office Party last Friday night—and a goodly crowd was there. Entertainment and refreshment were the order of the evening. The committee included Al Sicignano, Irving Singer, Dave Cassidy, Ray Fisher, J. L. Brown, Dick Bennett, and G. Knox Haddow, president of the club.

The Universal exchange is pulling a cute gag in connection with the Dave Levy Date Drive. Salesmen are sending out dates (the fruit) to all exhibitors in this territory. With the fruit is a card announcing that the dates are the product of California and that Universal also has some product from California. The clincher is a request to the exhibitor to come back at the exchange with some dates. The exchange hopes to get material to spot some palm trees and other semi-tropical stuff around the office. Looks like a hot campaign.

ST. LOUIS

Second Lieutenant Eddie Arthur of the Armored Command, U. S. Army, is here on a furlough from Camp Knox and expects to remain in St. Louis until March 5. Before entering the service he was assistant general manager of the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company houses.

Eddie Clark, manager of the Massac Theatre, Metropolis, Ill., got a prominent play in a special article on the "Popcorn Circuit," written by Jack Balch, a staff correspondent of the St. Louis Post Dispatch and appearing under a Metropolis, Ill., dateline in the Sunday, February 27 issue. The "popcorn circuit" is described as that part of America that lies outside the big cities, where a "show's not a show without popcorn." The paper also devoted additional space to pictures taken on Balch's journey through the popcorn circuit to the Ohio River.

The Fanchon & Marco officials were quick to reward two alert high school boys, Karl Stoein, 15, and Fred Rohlfing, 14, who caused the capture of a man accused by the police of robbing Mrs. Fern Griffin, cashier of the Fox Theatre of $19 in currency from her money changer. The boys heard Mrs. Griffin scream and saw a man running from the theatre. They caught him and held him until two officials of the theatre came to their assistance. The man gave his name as Franklin Wayne Ray, 24, of Greenville, Ill. He had reached through the opening in the cashier's window and pushed down the keys on the changing machine, grabbing the silver that fell out, and also took several bills from a drawer. Each of the boys was given a $25 War Bond as a reward for alertness and bravery.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

Come on ladies, we're going over to Fox today to see Benny Goodman working in "Sweet and Lowdown," in which he's co-starred with Lynn Bari and Linda Darnell.

We find the camera and principals (Miss Darnell isn't working today) over in a corner, when we enter the set, so we head for that spot, tripping over insulated cable and ladders in our hurry to get there. The "corner" turns out to be the hallway of a Boys' Military School. Here a scene takes place between Goodman and Miss Bari.

This is the night of the school dance. Miss Bari, the soloist with the band, has left the dance with one of Goodman's boys and he comes to get him. He's trying to keep the boy out of her clutches, for she's a villainess.

But what an attractive villainess she makes in her black crepe dress with long lace sleeves that start at the neckline and a fitted bodice that's finished with a wired lace peplum. In fact it's hard to believe that she's a "conniving" woman from where we sit.

The blowing of a whistle is the signal for everyone to hush for the rehearsals are about to begin. Miss Bari starts by opening her compact and powdering her nose just as Goodman comes through the door leading from the gym where the dance is being held. He stops to speak to her, inquiring about the boy and she answers him by nodding her head towards the water cooler in the corner. They rehearse the scene several times for Director Archie Mayo isn't satisfied with the timing. He wants Goodman to take it a little slower . . . it's too fast and he's afraid that Goodman will walk through the scene before anyone sees him.

When he gets it the way he wants it, they record the action. This gives us a chance to wander around, snooping in corners. The first place we hit is the gym, where we get a swell chance to look around for there's no one there. Over the fireplace are pictures of MacArthur, F.D.R., and Washington, with F.D.R. in the center. Hanging from the molding around the room are red pennants, while crossed swords and guns decorate the walls.

A few extras in the school uniform are lounging on the bandstand. Their uniforms consist of gray jackets and maroon pants . . . with maroon braid trimming the tops.

From there we wander into the dining room, where the room is decorated in green and the round tables for four are covered with green checkered cloths. Here there are also extras awaiting their call.

Finished with noseying, we head back to meet the King of Swing, Miss Bari and Mr. Mayo, only to discover that they're gone . . . so we leave too.

Until next week.

Calloway to Plug 'Sensations' While on 3-Month Stage Tour

Cab Calloway and his orchestra will act as an "in-the-flesh" trailer for Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1944" during the band's nation-wide tour of theatres, night spots and dance palaces. Stone has given Calloway permission to play two of the numbers he does in "Sensations," with Cab plugging the picture from the stage.

Stunt was tried out locally when Calloway started his tour at the Orpheum, with result that the Stone picture benefitted not only from the stage plug but got prominent mention in all newspaper reviews. While film is still shooting on the General Service lot, Calloway will be reaching thousands of potential customers during the next three months.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Pine-Thomas Sign Weissmuller; Ray McCarey to Produce, Direct for Republic; 'Miracle' to be Made in Technicolor

Coincident with the national release of "Rationing," Wallace Beery starts work in another MGM film, "Gold Town," with Binnie Barnes, Frances Rafferty, Donald Meek, Henry O'Neill, Chill Wills, and Joe Yule. Roy Del Ruth directs, and O. O. Dull will produce. Production staff includes: Arthur Smith, unit manager; George Rhein, assistant director; William Ferrari, associate art director under Cedric Gibbons, and Charles Salerno, cameraman.

David Chudnow has been signed by Krasne-Burkett Productions to supervise the scoring of "The Chinese Cat," second in the Monogram Charlie Chan series starring Sidney Toler. Alexander Laszlo has been engaged as composer and conductor.

Johnny Weissmuller, the famed Tarzan of pictures, is doffing his spotted leopard costume to make his screen bow as a fully-clothed star for Paramount Producers William Pine and William Thomas. The screen's jungle man signed a contract for three pictures with the two Bills in which he will be starred in straight dramatic roles and shown completely garbed.

Ray McCarey, brother of Leo and a veteran of the movie business, has been signed on a long-term producer-director contract by Republic. His first assignment, according to Executive-Producer Schaefer, will be the direction of "Atlantic City," a high-budgeted Technicolor musical to be produced by Al Cohen.

Mary Treen has been selected for a role with Gary Cooper and Teresa Wright in "Casanova Brown," produced by International Pictures for RKO release. Picture went into production February 9 with Sam Wood directing and Nunnally Johnson, author of the screenplay, producing.

Robert Barratt has been signed to play Dr. Sutherland Tulloch in "The Keys of the Kingdom," which is now in work at 20th Century-Fox. He joins Thomas Mitchell and Gregory Peck, who play the leads in the screen version of the A. J. Cronin novel.

"See My Lawyer," an adaptation of the Broadway play, has been selected as Olsen and Johnson's next Universal comedy, following "The Ghost Catchers." Edmund Hartmann, who is making his producing debut with "The Ghost Catchers," will also handle the second comedy.

Jack L. Warner is so enthused with the screenplay of "The Miracle" that he has scheduled the religious spectacle to be produced in Technicolor early in the spring by Wolfgang Reinhardt, son of the late Max Reinhardt who originally presented "The Miracle."

Rita Hayworth has reported to Columbia Studios to prepare for a starring role in "Tonight and Every Night," Technicolor musical to be produced and directed by Victor Saville. Picture is slated to roll in March.

Jack Skirball, who produced "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," starring Annabella and Louis Calhern in association with the Theatre Guild, has gone to New York to confer with Fred Allen on the film production he is preparing for United Artists release, which stars the comedian.

James Melton, Metropolitan Opera singer and radio luminary, becomes the newest addition to the already star-studded cast of MGM's "The Ziegfeld Follies" which includes Fred Astaire, Jimmy Durante, Victor Moore, and Lucille Bremer. Arthur Freed is producing.

"Hangman's Law," an original screenplay by Frank H. Young, will be the next Monogram western film starring Johnny Mack Brown with Raymond Hatton. Production will start March 7 (weather permitting).

In an effort to meet Technicolor contractual requirements, Director George Marshall put Betty Hutton and 30 pony chorines through their paces in finale scenes in Paramount's "Incendiary Blonde." The girls changed costumes 12 times in 60 minutes. Joseph Sistrom is associate producer.

Yellow Rose of Texas," first of Roy Rogers' super-musicals on the 1944 program, went before the cameras at the Republic Studios with Dale Evans, the gam-gam girl and former song-thrush on the Charlie McCarthy program, cast opposite the cowboy star. Joe Kane is directing and Harry Grey producing.

Producer Frank Ross believes that his Technicolor picturization of the record best-seller, "The Robe," for RKO, will attract more non-theatregoers than any other motion picture ever made. In addition to its extraordinary circulation among book readers, "The Robe" has been given dramatic readings in more than 900 American churches to date. Mervyn LeRoy will direct the filming of the Lloyd C. Douglas story.

Frank Sinatra has announced that he will introduce the musical score from United Artists' musical "Song of the Open Road" to the public. Sinatra heard the score at the studio where Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, W. C. Fields and Sammy Kaye are still before the cameras.

Will Cowan, associate producer, has cast Nana Bryant in a featured role in Universal's "Jungle Woman." Evelyn Ankers, Milburn Stone, Lois Collier and Acquanetta are featured. Reginald Le Borg is directing.

Barbara Stanwyck wound up her starring role opposite George Brent in "My Reputation" February 25 and left immediately for Livermore, Cal., to be with her husband, Lt. Robert Taylor.

With "Gibson Girl" indefinitely postponed, William Cameron Menzies, who was slated to direct it for RKO, returned to his desk at Columbia to start production designs and other preparations for "Jubal Troop," which Sam Wood will produce and direct independently for Columbia release.

James Craig completed his role in MGM's

Prepares for 'Double Furlough'

Joan Fontaine, on leave from the Selznick studio for several months, has returned to Hollywood. Her next picture is expected to be "Double Furlough," Dore Schary's first production for Vanguard Pictures, Inc., in which, it was announced sometime ago, she would co-star with Joseph Cotten. Shooting on the picture is scheduled to start about March 15.

Musical Activity at Universal

Don George, Universal music head, has his department humming at top speed this week. They finished underscoring of "The Merry Monahans" and "Follow the Boys" by conductors Edward Ward and Leigh Harline, respectively. Paul Sawtell was signed to conduct the underscoring of "The Scarlet Claw," and Samuel Freed, Jr. will do the pre-scoring job on "South of Dixie," with Edward Ward starting the pre-scoring of "The Ghost Catchers."

Picture Resumes Production After Penicillin Cures Sick Player

Producer-Director Otto Preminger resumed shooting on 20th Century-Fox' "In The Meantime, Darling," after a six-week layoff due to comedian Stanley Prager's illness. Prager, who suffered a pleurisy attack on the set, has just been dismissed from the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, where over a million units of penicillin were administered to the actor before he recovered from the pleurisy and what might have been a fatal attack of staphylococcus endocarditis. The former Broadway comedian is the first patient in medical history suffering from the disease to be cured by the new wonder-drug, and his case is being reported in the American Medical Journal by his physicians.

With Prager back, Preminger has exactly 10 days to complete "In the Meantime, Darling," since leading man Frank Latimore reports to the U. S .Army thereafter. Jeanne Crain and Gale Robbins are teamed with Latimore and Prager in the film.

Republic Studio Holds Contest For Ideas From Its Employes

As an experiment, Republic is offering $5000 in war bonds to its employes for the best ideas and suggestions directly concerning improvement in operations, organization morale, production, stories, equipment, economies, etc.

The best idea selected by a committee yet to be appointed will bring its author a $2000 bond. Second, third, fourth and fifth prizes will consist of $1500, $750, $500 and $250 bonds, respectively. Ideas must be submitted between March 1 and April 30, and the war bond prizes will be distributed around May 15.

The studio staffs were advised that all ideas submitted will be the property of Republic Productions, Inc., but that Republic in no way obligates itself to use, execute or put into effect any idea submitted, including those selected among the best five. Republic will have the right to copyright or patent in its own name and at its own expense each an every idea submitted.

Seiter to Direct 'Belle'

Filming of "Belle of the Yukon," second International Picture which RKO will release, will start on March 14, with Gypsy Rose Lee and Randolph Scott starred and William Seiter directing. Miss Lee arrived in Hollywood over the week-end to consult with International executives on production details. Also in the cast to date are Bob Burns, Dinah Shore and Charles Winninger.

Joseph Berne to Direct Feature

Joseph Berne, director of two of the season's outstanding shorts, has been signed to direct a Columbia feature, "America's Children," which is slated to go into production in March.

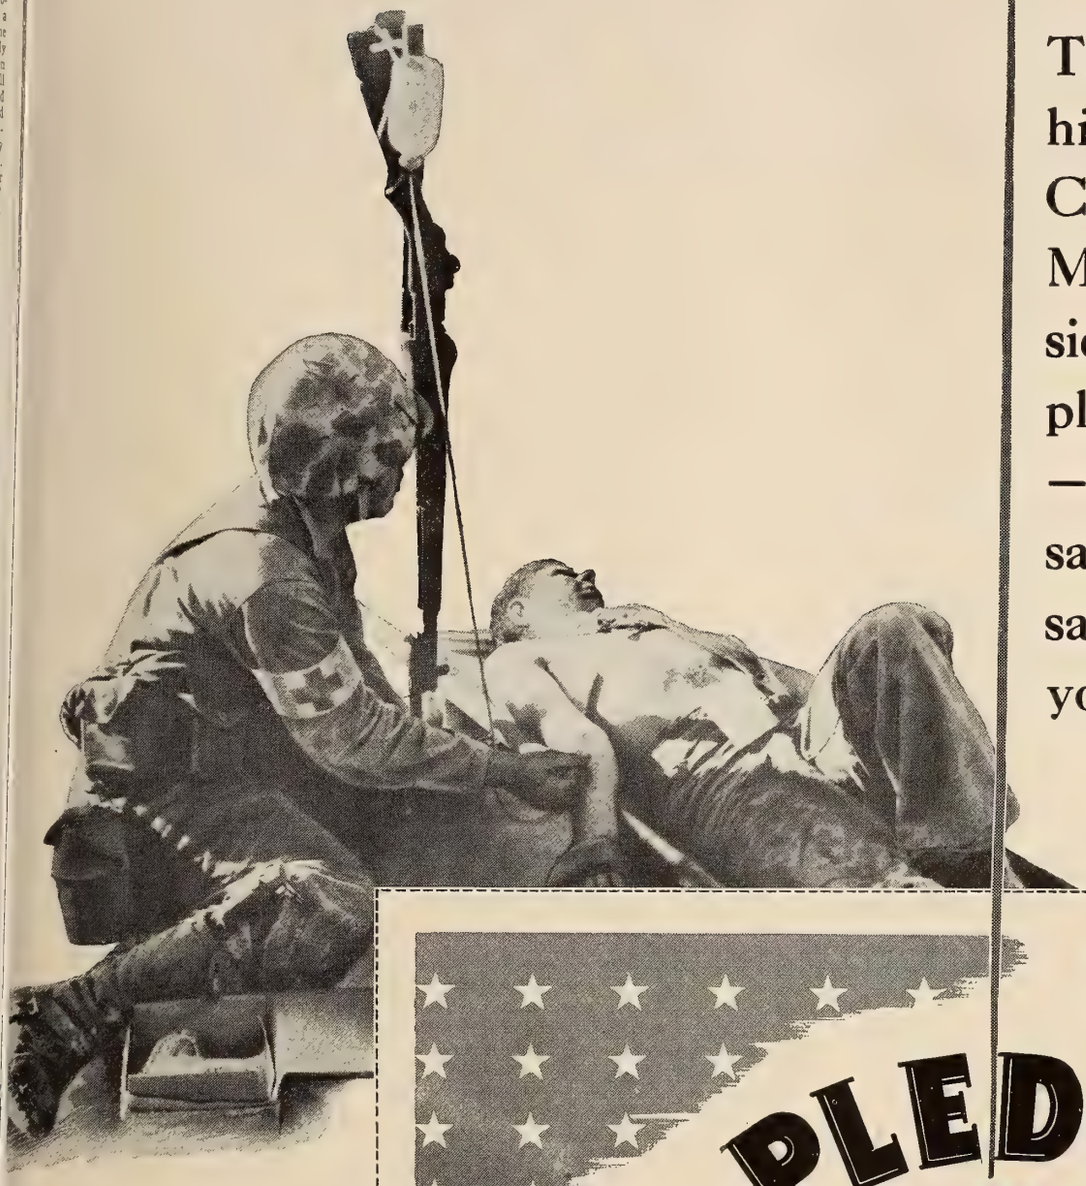
Set Joan Leslie's Next Film

Following audience reaction at a sneak preview of "Rhapsody in Blue," in which Joan Leslie, Alexis Smith and Robert Alda head the cast, Warners have assigned Miss Leslie to the leading role in "Manhattan Fury." The picture will be the next on the schedule of the Warner star who currently is teamed again with Alda in "Cinderella Jones." Edward Blatt, who recently made his directorial debut with "Between Two Worlds," will direct the drama. Jerry Wald will produce.



Rooney Fans Like Him Serious

Despite the comedy appeal of Judge Hardy's son, more than 60 per cent of the Rooney fan mail today refers to his serious characterization as Homer in "The Human Comedy," for which he has won an Academy Award nomination. He now is appearing in "National Velvet," an MGM Technicolor production in which he again goes dramatic. Clarence Brown is directing. Others featured are Elizabeth Taylor, Donald Crisp, Jackie Jenkins and Anne Revere. Pandro S. Berman is the producer.

Naish in Paramount Film

J. Carroll Naish has been engaged by Paramount to play the star character role in "A Medal For Benny," the original screen story by John Steinbeck and Jack Wagner. Dorothy Lamour and Arturo de Cordova will have the star romantic role. Naish will play the role of de Cordova's father, an old Paisano from Steinbeck's favorite literary locale, the San Joaquin valley of California. Shooting is scheduled to start in May.

THIS IS A MATTER OF LIFE and DEATH

The Red Cross is at his side. And the Red Cross needs you, Mr. Exhibitor, at its side. Send in your pledge; send it today —for your country's sake and for the sake of the life of your boy and mine.

PLEDGE

TO THE THEATRES DIVISION, WAR ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY, 1501 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Desiring to serve in the great humanitarian work of the Red Cross, by sharing in the national Red Cross Campaign, and having assurance that the local Red Cross Chapters desire theatre participation through audience collection, I hereby pledge complete cooperation in my theatre for the week of March 23-29 inclusive. To insure the greatest contributions ever made in my theatre for a noble and patriotic cause, I will make audience collections at every performance during the week, exhibiting the special Red Cross trailer. Also, I will show in advance of the collections, the one-reel Red Cross short subject "At His Side", which is also to be provided free and I will publicize the campaign in our advertising and with suitable displays. I understand that through the local Chapter the American Red Cross is to receive 100% of the funds collected, the receipt for which I will forward promptly to the War Activities Committee, for the purpose of an industry-wide record.

A Monthly Feature Dealing With Practical Ideas for Booking And Exploiting

The Short Subject

Careful Selection of Short Subjects Urged For Balanced Program; Study Selling Values

By Lionel Keene

"To Be Or Not To Be . . . that is the question!" "Hamlet" was meditating—talking to himself—trying to decide an issue.

How much better would the exhibitor fare today were he to ponder, when booking shorts, the question: "is it the proper balance for my program?".

When I first ventured upon a neighborhood operation, not having had previous experience in booking for subsequent run houses, I was dependent more or less upon the advice of the Film Exchange bookers. I had inherited "shorts" contracts for more product than was healthy for any situation. Recognizing this fact, my early efforts were on liquidating some of them in some way mutually agreeable to both distributor and exhibitor. The answer always was—"we'll work it out later." So I started in to liquidate them by booking, but obviously, this was not satisfactory to the Film Exchanges, who, at that time had a systematic follow-up, mailing periodic notices of available product and delinquencies. I thought I was doing pretty well, under the circumstances, in booking the number of shorts I had, to which, much to my surprise, a number of bookers, in all earnestness, and I am sure with the best of intentions, told me I should follow the policy of so many exhibitors who give a "standing order" for SHORTS; i.e. a comedy on certain days of the week, a cartoon on other days, and so on.

But I believed in a balanced program—a program of a certain length determined by the operating policy of the theatre. Therefore, the length of the feature would determine the time left for "shorts"—and the nature of the feature the type of shorts to be booked. Sunday and Monday, Thursday and Friday being the preferred time in my theatres, a newsreel was part and parcel of each program.

I followed the rule that a weak feature needed the help of the strongest short most popular with my patronage. If it were an outstanding feature I'd use up one of the lesser shorts, but still good entertainment. If the feature was a musical, a band number is out of order. Usually a musical feature has considerable comedy—so you wouldn't want a cartoon. So, if the time allows, a "This Is America," "March of Time," a Warner Technicolor, or MGM "Crime Doesn't Pay" is more appropriate. My patrons liked the "Three Stooges" but having the best selection of features on my best days, Sunday and Monday, when I had the higher class patronage, I elected to book the "Stooges" on Thursday-Friday, when I showed the second-best feature selection and then only when the feature was heavy entertainment, and needed comedy relief. (Don't forget, on these days, I always had a news.)

Saturday bookings made up a three-hour show—especially designed to please the Children, with sufficient adult draw not to discourage their Saturday visits. It included an action picture, a Western, a Serial, and if time permitted, singles such as "Superman," "Popeye" and other cartoons, Community Sings, etc. Of course, when a "Henry Aldrich" or "Blondie" release was available, it replaced the action picture. If I booked an Autry, the other half of the bill usually was a mystery or a lesser "B" picture. In short, I counted on Autry to draw.

To sum it up when booking shorts, bear in mind the class of audience you hope to attract, or to which you are catering on the different days of the week and balance your program. Do not figure your show should run a certain length of time. Your feature consumes so many minutes . . . and then book just anything to fill in. Book intelligently—you'll find it pays!!!

I have known—and so have you—when a particular short was responsible for a considerable part of your business—and many of you threw away a golden opportunity by booking it, without thought, with an outstanding feature. Remember "Three Little Pigs"? People didn't care what feature you were showing, they wanted to see "Three Little Pigs." Remember MGM's "Third Dimensional" short in Technicolor? Remember MGM's "Prophecies of Nostradamus"? And more recently, "Der Fuehrer's Face"? and "Red Hot Riding Hood"? When you have so important a SHORT, "don't hide your light under a barrel," but let your patrons know of it through any number of mediums of advertising . . . and in advance.

I have always figured that people are very much interested in shorts. I might mention one particular family of four who always would attend the show when they knew I was showing a Disney subject. I made it a point to let them, and all the rest of the prospective patronage know of my shortreel bookings through the medium of "trailerettes" which followed the routine feature trailer, saying "Plus the latest Donald Duck cartoon," etc., etc.

When you find at the "eleventh hour," you need an additional short, it is difficult to hit upon just what short would be appropriate. Permit me to suggest a plan that will not only be helpful in such instances, but enable you to determine at a glance just how you stand in the liquidation of your "shorts" contract.

Get a columnar ledger sheet at your stationery store. Head each column with the trade name of the short, viz: Pete Smith . . . Disney . . . Community Sing, etc., across the top of the Longest Run Shorts

Long-run records have been set up by two short subjects, one in New York, the other on the West Coast.

Paramount's Technicolor Musical Parade, "Caribbean Romance," ran sixteen weeks at the Victoria on Broadway, thus winning top place for the longest run short subject, while MGM's two-reel Academy Award entry, "Heavenly Music," enjoyed a ten-week run at the Esquire in Los Angeles, establishing an all-time shorts record for the West Coast house.

Importance of 'Tarawa' Reel; Besa Finds Self in Dog House; Short Inspires Music Contest

"With the Marines at Tarawa," United States Government film distributed by Universal for the War Activities Committee, is hailed by an STR reviewer as "the most dramatic film released for public consumption since the start of World War II." He adds that "this Technicolor Official Marine Corps picture is the eye-opener which all America has been waiting to see."

Nearly a thousand marines gave their lives to win this stepping-stone to Tokyo, and this subject is the "thrilling, real-life story" of that bravery and heroism. The battle of Tarawa has been discussed by everyone old enough to read and listen to the radio; therefore, this film will have a large waiting audience. We suggest you date it as soon as possible; that you get newspaper cooperation in publicizing it; that you utilize every other available means of letting your public know that you are showing this important film.

In her short subjects bulletin some time ago, Besa Short of Interstate Theatres, Dallas, Texas, put Robert Benchley in the dog house because of being high-hat while in Dallas between planes. Then, a couple of weeks ago she again placed him in the dog house "for getting in the feature and a short subject on the same program in the Majestic Theatre, Abilene, Texas." This week, Besa found herself in the canine abode, put there by Benchley. Wrote the comedian-humorist to Mrs. Short:

"I very definitely protest the treatment I am getting from the great State of Texas which, only a few years ago, honored me so signally with a world premiere showing of one of my splendid short subjects in my namesake, Benchley, Texas.

"First, you drop me into the hound pound for alleged snootiness, which I am supposed to have displayed recently in Dallas between planes. Now once again I find myself a lodger "inside these portals through which do not pass the most beautiful girls in the world." Indeed, I don't find any girls in here at all!

"Besides, there is a war on, or didn't you know? Perhaps you feel that no news is good news—I hope. Moreover, here I am with bond drives and my tomato and you just keep trying to lock me up.

"This time you accuse me of being in a feature picture and a short subject on one and the same program out in Abilene, Texas. Can I help it if I get around much any more? And besides, where were you in this little deal? You certainly are the one to keep me in my proper screen place which, my sweet, is not in the dog house. So, for this, I personally request that you release me immediately and climb in your own self."

We recently viewed a Warner short subject, "Grandfather's Follies." We can conceive of scarcely a program which would not benefit by this nostalgically appealing and extremely diverting two-reeler. To many a

Advance Buildup For Lulu in Waco

Campaign for the showing of "Eggs Don't Bounce," first Little Lulu Technicolor cartoon released by Paramount, actually began months ahead of the subject's showing at the Orpheum Theatre, Waco, Texas.

Last August when Mattie Kimbrough heard that the Saturday Evening Post character had "made the movies," and that Lulu's first subject would play the Orpheum, she informed her employes who, already friends of Lulu's through the Post, started a word-of-mouth campaign.

In advance of playdate an attractive display featuring color stills, title and playdate was placed in the lower part of the candy case in the lobby.

During the Fourth War Loan drive, Miss Kimbrough and Manager Buster Scott of the Orpheum put Little Lulu to work by cutting her out of the one-sheet (soap box and all) and pasting her on the large oval mirror that occupies the center space of the lobby wall. On the soap box the house artist painted the appeal, "Buy Your Extra Bond Here." Large 40x60 displays on the Fourth War Loan were placed on each side of the mirror, while directly in front was the bond booth.

"Eggs Don't Bounce" was plugged via radio, was given extra newspaper advertising space, and sold during the engagement by means of color stills and one-sheet display in front of the theatre.

Air Wacs Attend Screening of Technicolor Short, 'Women at War'

At a meeting held last week by the Army Air Forces division of the Women's Army Corps stationed at Mitchell Field, Long Island, top-ranking officials and the enlisted personnel of the Air Wacs attended a special screening of Warner Bros.' Technicolor two-reeler "Women at War."

Lt. Col. Elizabeth Bandel, director of the entire Air Wac, and numerous WAC staff officers of the First Fighter Command were present at the screening.

You, no doubt, buy SHORTS from more than one company. Therefore, you have 2-reelers from Columbia and RKO . . . you have Paramount, MGM, Universal, Vitagraph and other cartoons . . . and a variety of single reels from all producers. When booking shorts, keep this ledger sheet before you, and unless you have a very special "box-office" reason for booking a subject of a particular series in succession, alternate, first, perhaps a Disney, then a "Bugs Bunny," followed by a MGM Cartoon, and so on. Thus you are giving your patrons a varied program at all times, and playing fair with all distributors.

This ledger sheet will prove invaluable when the film salesman insists on your buying more shorts. You have at your fingertips exactly the number of shorts remaining unplayed of all companies for an argument. You may be given this sales argument . . . "we're having our convention next week and are endeavoring to complete as many shorts contracts as possible prior to it. You are one of the few unsigned accounts." Your answer will be: "Your records, as do mine, show I still have a considerable number of last season's shorts to play. I certainly would not want to obligate myself for more at this time." You may be assured "you need not worry on that score . . . we'll work it out so you will not be burdened with more than your actual requirements." Remember, verbal agreements are not always legal . . . therefore, should you want to accommodate a particular company, be sure a clause is inserted in your shorts contract which will protect you. You are entitled to this consideration and will receive it.

Another important point . . . you'll usually find your shorts contract stipulates "subsequent run" if you are a neighborhood house. Some companies will maintain whatever is your availability on features is your availability on shorts. Hence, if, for one reason or another, the first run account does not book in the shorts on National Release, the subsequent run may not book the subject until his feature picture period availability.

I believe it would be fair, and a boon to the Producers, for subsequent runs to be booked immediately following the close of the first run, regardless of Feature Picture Availability provisions.

One more Timely Tip. STR and other trade papers carry reviews of shorts, the running time and whether Good, Bad, or Indifferent. Read them weekly!!! Make notes of those regarded as EXCEPTIONAL . . . or EXCELLENT . . . for ready reference. And book accordingly. It will make you some additional "dough."

WB Unit to Mexico

Arnold Albert of the Warner Bros. short subject production staff in Hollywood, will take a camera crew to Mexico to cover the fiestas put on during the Easter holidays for a two-reel Technicolor subject titled "Mexican Fiesta," to be made under the supervision of Gordon Hollingshead.

Bowling Alleys Cooperate

Local bowling alleys cooperated with Rubidick Yarbrough of the River Oaks Theatre, Houston, Texas, on her campaign on "Better Bowling" and "Ten Pin Parade." Advance trailers, ads, lobby and heralds also figured in the selling.

Utilizing material on the subject printed in automotive trade papers and national magazines, such as Liberty, the Criterion on Broadway arranged this special lobby one-sheet on Universal's Person-Oddity, "Wizard of Autos."

Production Activity On The Short Subject Front

Circuit Books Musical Parade

The Fox West Coast Circuit has booked Paramount's Technicolor Musical Parade, "Lucky Cowboy," co-starring Julia Gibson and Eddie Dew, on its entire circuit. "Lucky Cowboy" is the third in the series of featurettes the company is producing to replace the second feature on theatre programs.

More Kennedy, Errol Comedies

Continuing its policy of supplying an adequate screen program of short subject entertainment to augment its feature production, RKO Radio studios announced that a deal has been set for continuation of the Leon Errol and Edgar Kennedy series of short comedies. The next year's program calls for six two-reel films for each of the two comedy stars.

Lantz Signs Webb Smith

Walt Lantz has signed Webb Smith, for the past nine years with Walt Disney, as a writer for the Cartunes he produces for Universal release. Smith's first assignment will be to develop a script for a new Andy Panda Cartune, as yet untitled. Studio also announced making a musical short "Pagliacci Swings It," with Will Cowan producing.

Cartoon Kids Point Rationing

The humorous side of point rationing and kindred home front problems form the theme of Leon Schlesinger's new Merrie Melody cartoon, "The Weakly Reporter," soon to be released by Warners. This is the narrative type of cartoon which Schlesinger has done so successfully.

20 Top Directors in Short

Twenty of Hollywood's top directors, all of whom have worked in the American motion picture industry for thirty years or more, will be filmed in a group early next month for inclusion by Ralph Staub in his Columbia Screen Snapshots subject commemorating the 50th anniversary of motion picture exhibition in this country.

Peak in Production Hit by MGM Shorts

Reaching its production peak of the season, the MGM shorts department is geared for the release of 15 subjects, representing 25 per cent of its program, during the next two months.

Before the cameras at present are the 2-reel Special, "Easy Life" and John Nesbitt's Passing Parade, "Dreams"; "The Immortal Blacksmith," the story of Tom Davenport who invented the first electric motor, with Chill Wills in the role of the inventor; Carey Wilson's "Art Discovers America" in which the MGM cameras will visit several of America's greatest artists at work.

Now in preparation and slated for early lensing are Pete Smith's "Animal Talent Scout"; three Passing Parade subjects, "Story of a Forgotten Drug," "History of a Nation" and "How a Doctor Becomes Famous."

Among the subjects now in the editing stages are Pete Smith's jitterbug jam session, "Groovie Movie" in which he traces the origin of some of our more complicated rug-cutting routines; "Important Business," a Robert Benchley Miniature dealing with Mr. Benchley's history-making trip to Washington; "A Great Day's Coming," a Miniature starring Marta Linden and Sharon McManus, and two Our Gang comedies, "Dancing Romeo" and "Tale of a Dog."

MGM's 2-reel Special, "Main Street Today," dealing with the nation's manpower problem, has just left the cutting room, as has the 2-reel Crime short, "Patrolling the Ether," in which the activities of the Radio Intelligence Division in tracking down enemy broadcasts are dramatized.

Smith's First Dramatic Reel

For the first time in 14 years a Pete Smith entry for the Academy Award is a dramatic subject. "Seeing Hands," which Smith produced after being inspired by a story in the Los Angeles Times, concerns a blind war worker in a Los Angeles war plant. All the past Smith shorts presented for Oscar consideration have been comedies.

Heilner on 'Shooting' Trip

Van Camp Heilner, producer of short subjects for Warner Bros. release, went to Georgia recently to film a quail hunting subject. From there he was scheduled to proceed to the Bahamas for some footage on the production of cocoanut oil, thence to Cuba to do a Cuba Libre short. Before returning to New York, Heilner will also visit Mexico for additional footage.

SHORTS SHOPPING

spectator it will serve to convince that the songs of grandfather's time were "catchier" and more melodic than the majority of today's popular music output. We guarantee that your patrons will be humming many of the tunes after they've seen it. Incidentally, it seems to us that that question of which is the best, the music of yesterday or today, might be used as the basis for a special program to be labeled, "The Battle of Music—Yesterday and Today." One or two current band reels might be booked with "Grandfather's Follies," with patrons asked to vote on the type of music they enjoyed most while seeing the program and remember the longest after it's all over. Voting blanks might be issued for this purpose, and results could later be announced in the newspapers. You might ask patrons to state their reasons for their choices, offering war bonds and guest tickets to the writers of the best letters.

Short Subject Reviews

Community Sing No. 8 (Fair)

Columbia (5658) 9 mins.

Striking out on a war song theme, Don Baker at the organ assisted by the Song Spinners turn in a singable reel which fails to be much more than ordinary. The numbers include: Alouetta, Tipperary, Let's Make a Job of It Now, Bless 'Em All, and the new song craze of the British Tommies, I've Got Sixpence. Produced and directed by B. K. Blake, it should find the audience chiming in as it goes along.

Basket Wizards (Good)

RKO Radio (4405) Sportoscopes 8 mins.

Inside stuff on the training methods and amazing prowess of the Rhode Island State basketball team. It should be a good number for most theatres, particularly the community houses, since there's widespread interest in this sport among high school students. The photographic work is exceptionally good from the standpoint of good close-up and long-range shots to produce the most dramatic, and revealing, effects. If booked, work up interest among local basketball fans.

Film Vodvil No. 4 (Fair)

Columbia (5954) 9 mins.

Another radio broadcast recorded on film takes you to the "This Is Fort Dix" program which has a regular Sunday afternoon spot on a national network. The short is MC'd by Tom Slater and features Sgt. Herbie Field's Orchestra, including recruits from many famous name bands. A group of service men are the artists who perform. The tremendous listening audience which this program enjoys makes the advertising of this short a must for it has box-office value, but in itself it is not entertainment to get excited about. The reel was by Ted Lloyd and directed and edited by Harry Glass.

A Day in Death Valley (Good)

MGM (T-514) Traveltalks 9 mins.

For those who have heard much of the legend of Death Valley here is an intimate visit to this historic spot and its famous personality, Death Valley Scotty. Highlighted by splendid Technicolor photography the short is a thing of beauty with its natural scenic values and an enlightening expose of the fabulous wealth that has made possible Scotty's palatial home in this sun-drenched wilderness of 20 mule team fame.

Sweet Swing (Fair)

Universal (8126) Name Band Musicals 15 mins.

This one fails to measure up to previous reels in the series, being just a songfest around a table with Eddie Miller and his Orchestra to supply a few vocals and the musical backdrop. The singers are Ray Eberle, Martha Tilton and the Star Dusters. The tunes are: Boogie Woogie Mexixe, Once in a While, I've Got Sixpence and Put Your Arms Around Me. Lack of production and any outstanding entertainment feature keeps this in the category of a filler with a heavy dramatic or action film.

Advance Dope (SIB)

THE CLIMAX (Univ.) Mystery. Principals: Susanna Foster, Turhan Bey, Boris Karloff, Thomas Gomez, George Dolenz, Jane Farrar. Director, George Waggner. Plot: A mad opera house physician attempts to murder the new diva because her voice resembles the opera star he had strangled years before. He gets her under his control by hypnotism, but his attempts to murder her are frustrated by a young man in love with her. Constant interference with his plans drives him completely mad and he dies beside the bier of the woman he'd killed years before.

STORM OVER LISBON (Rep.) Drama. Principals: Vera Hruba Ralston, Richard Arlen, Erich von Stroheim, Otto Kruger, Robert Livingston, Edward Cianelli. Director, George Sherman. Plot: A U. S. correspondent escapes from a Jap prison camp and hides in Lisbon. Before he can arrange for Clipper transportation to the U. S., he is captured by members of the Axis through the unknowing aid of a lovely dancer, who is also a secret agent. They fall in love, and when he escapes through the aid of a friend, he promises to come back to the dancer some day.

THE CHINESE CAT (Monogram) Mystery. Principals: Sidney Toler, Benson Fong, Mantan Moreland, Weldon Heyburn, Joan Woodbury. Director, Phil Rosen. Plot: Toler is called in to investigate a mystery that has baffled the police. With only three days in which to work, he manages to solve the mystery, clear up several murders and uncover the workings of an international jewel smuggling gang.

SAILOR'S HOLIDAY (Col.) Comedy. Principals: Arthur Lake, Jane Lawrence, Bob Haymes, Shelley Winter, Lewis Wilson, Edmund MacDonald. Director, William Berke. Plot: Two merchant seamen have two days liberty in Hollywood. One has a girl friend here and she gets a lovely stand-in from one of the studios for the other man. They pair up, but each likes the other fellow's girl. They're all miserable until the time for parting arrives, when they confess. Then they find that the feeling is mutual and exchange girl-friends for a double-wedding before reporting for duty.

PARDON MY RHYTHM (Univ.) Comedy-With-Music. Principals: Gloria Jean, Pat Knowles, Evelyn Ankers, Bob Crosby, Marjorie Weaver, Patsy O'Connor. Director, Felix Feist. Plot: A young girl in sponsoring her sweetheart's jazz band, involves her father, his girl friend and many others in a terrific mixup as she does her best to further her boy friend's budding career. She dissuades him from signing a contract with the first band that comes along, and gets her father to help her convince him. When everything is signed, sealed and delivered, she finds she must straighten out her father's tangled romance too.

ONE BODY TOO MANY (Para.) Mystery. Principals: Jack Haley, Jean Parker, Bela Lugosi, Bernard Nedell, Blanche Yurka, Douglas Fowley. Director, Frank McDonald. Plot: A timid insurance agent arrives at the home of a millionaire prospective customer, in time for the reading of the man's will. A maniac appears to be loose, for the agent is continually being bumped on the head; the lovely niece of the dead man receives threatening notes and several corpses appear and disappear. Because of the girl, for whom he's fallen, he gets up enough courage to see the thing through. He locates the villain and wins the girl.

"Calling All Patriotic Showmen! Red Cross Drive March 23rd Through 29th."

Front Line For Theatremen

Every theatreman in the country will move forward to the front lines and stay there for the week beginning March 23rd and ending March 29th. It is the week when our industry is going to do a job for the American Red Cross the like of which has never been seen before.

Unlike all the other campaigns for bonds, etc., the Red Cross drive is simply to concentrate on audience collections AT EACH AND EVERY PERFORMANCE. Stamp that deep in your minds, because if you have any notions that you can skip a performance or two, or a day or two, then you are at the front fighting, but against, not with the rest of your industry and brother Americans.

The task is a comparatively simple one. Get yourself organized in cooperation with your local Red Cross Chapter and see how grateful and appreciative your audience will be for affording them the opportunity of contributing to this most worthy of worthy causes.

Next week's issues of your trade papers will help you complete your plans to make this a terrifically successful drive.

Sell Them Separately

We can find no fault with the demand in many exhibitor quarters that distributors license flat-rental and percentage pictures separately; that there be no tying of one to the other in rental deals.

This "tying" practice is little different from the old "block booking" formula under which exhibitors had to buy the whole program, percentage and flat rental alike, or get none at all. The difference now is merely that the total sold is less, but the objectionable features remain the same.

In view of current prosperous conditions, the distributor could well afford to sell these two different classes of pictures separately and thereby eliminate the resentment of the smaller exhibitors, who, in many instances, feel that certain percentage pictures are too rich for their blood and their patrons as well.

Obviously, if a strong, generally appealing percentage picture comes along, no exhibitor is going to pass it up, regardless of whether it is offered separately or along with others in a block.

This, very definitely, is NOT the time to fan the flames of industry fires. Indeed, every individual and every company in the business should do everything humanly possible to extinguish those controversial flare-ups before they become conflagrations. For it is from such small beginnings that most of the industry grief has had its start.

Profit-Mad

In many cities of the country the big first-runs, already groggy from fantastic receipts and profits, are making it a usual practice to charge unusually high admission prices. In many instances the time of the day or the day of the week has no bearing on the price scale. It seems as though they start jacking up the prices the moment the lines start forming.

Exactly how long this will go on before the crackpots start taking shots at such theatres in particular and the industry in general, is anyone's guess.

What puzzles us is this craze for bigger grosses and profits at a time when these big theatres are playing to beyond-capacity business at almost every performance. Certainly the key city first-runs can't decide for themselves that they help the fight against inflation by trying to take a lot of loose money out of circulation.

These cycles have a habit of returning like ghosts to haunt those who precipitate them. In this case the offenders will not be the only ones to be haunted. Their innocent brother theatremen in situations where such practices were never invoked will be exposed to the general criticism that must ultimately and eventually result from this lack of good judgment.

Some of the master-minds of the industry had better think this over and stop congratulating themselves as the grosses rise week after week. It isn't the super-duper efficiency of their theatre operating that is bringing in the dough, it's the dough trying to find a way of being spent and not caring how.

Observations

As remarkable as it may seem, the parade of powerful box-office product continues unabated. We can recall when the advent of a few good pictures were hailed far and wide along with the prayer that it continue. Now everyone seems to take them for granted.

Fortunately, these are boom times for the large majority of theatres and thus, strong product is not only maintaining the momentum of higher grosses but increasing them to new highs.

This is a good, healthy condition and we feel confident that most theatremen are selling each and every strong picture with a campaign equal to its box-office potentialities.

One Abbot & Costello In '43-44, 'U' Hopes

Universal hopes to deliver one Abbott and Costello feature on the 1943-44 program, Nate Blumberg, president of the company, said in an interview with trade press representatives in New York last week. Blumberg explained that Universal is bending every effort to maintain its policy of delivering all product promised, and if it is humanly possible the studio will complete one of the three Abbott and Costello comedies set for the current season and which calculations were upset by the illness of Lou Costello. The comedians, Blumberg said, are scheduled to start work on their Universal picture about June 12.

Nate Blumberg

The 20 per cent admission tax will not generally affect theatre attendance, declared Blumberg. At first, he said some situations might suffer for a time because of resentment by some patrons at the rise in prices, but this tendency would soon pass over when they understood the cause. Besides, he said, the problem still will remain that of finding a place to put the people who want to get in the theatres.

The Universal president found the industry in an excellent condition so far as attendance is concerned. If the war should end suddenly, he said, the industry could expect good business for at least five years. This prophecy he based on the savings accumulated by workers during the war years, so that during the lag when manufacturers are re-tooling for peace-time production the public will have this nest-egg to fall back on. Since film entertainment has become a regular part of the family budget, a heavy drop in attendance is not to be expected. When full peace-time production is resumed Mr. Blumberg sees box-office returns equal to the present pace.

One thing that has put the industry in an excellent position in its relation to the public is the record of national service piled up in the war loan and Red Cross drives, the executive pointed out.

"I think nothing has ever happened to tie the industry so close together. We should use this new unity to get together on industry institutional advertising—like the railroads or the electrical plants. The show business has been over-modest."

Blumberg said his trip East was a regular yearly custom with him, and that he expects to stay in New York for two to three months.

Non-Tax Competition

Canadian exhibitors are up in arms over what they call the unfair advantage taken by some seventy theatres, mostly in western Canada, which are not required to impose the Federal tax of 20 per cent on theatre tickets. These houses are non-profit organizations, and are thus enabled to charge a smaller fee than regular theatres. They are kept in operation by local merchants who wish to prevent local folk from going to other towns nearby to shop. Their benefits come from money across the counter for goods. Exhibitors have asked Ottawa to apply the tax, but thus far without result. A new association of theatre owners, recently formed for such purposes, is now getting busy.

Four Regional Vice Presidents Named by National Allied Head

President Martin G. Smith of National Allied this week announced the appointment of four regional vice-presidents of the national organization. They are: Irving Dollinger of Linden, N. J., for the Eastern region; Ray Branch of Hastings, Mich., for the Central region; Jack Kirsch of Chicago for the Mid-Western region, and Harry A. Cole of Dallas, Texas, for the Southwestern region.

All four vice-presidents are at the head of their respective state Allied units. The contract of Jack Kirsch as president was renewed for three years by Allied of Illinois this week.

Arbitration Cases Decline Sharply During 1st Quarter

The lowest number of arbitration cases to come before the boards since their establishment marked the first quarter of 1944, it was disclosed this week. Only seven cases were up for arbitration during the period starting December 1. This contrasts with other years when a normally low figure was seven per month. Existing complaints still undecided total 38.

The consensus of opinion among arbitration officials was that the present unfinished status of the consent decree was responsible for the sharp falling off in cases. It was thought that exhibitors who would ordinarily have filed complaints during the three-month period have decided to delay action, pending possible favorable findings in a new decree set-up.

Paramount Distributes 'Memphis Belle' for WAC

"Memphis Belle," the Air Forces 4-reel Technicolor combat report, will be distributed by Paramount, according to an announcement from the War Activities Committee.

This film, considered by the WAC Program Committee to be one of the most exciting screen documents of the war, was produced by the War Department under the supervision of Lt. Col. William Wyler, who twice won the Academy Award as a civilian film-maker.

At a drawing in which all the distributing companies participated, Paramount won the right to handle the film.

Mich. Exhibs Spared Added Tax

Michigan exhibitors were saved this week from the possibility of facing added municipal or state admission taxes until at least next January. Governor Kelly's message to the special session of the Legislature ruled out a proposed bill to add a 10 per cent tax on top of the 20 per cent Federal tax. Instead, a representative state-wide committee has been formed to consider the local tax question, with special reference to the disputed bill.

Producers and Union Delegates Discuss Proposals of IATSE

Adjustments in working rules and wage considerations proposed by studio unions of IATSE were up for discussion this week by both producers and labor representatives at separate meetings. It was understood the principal matters to come up dealt with sick leaves, vacations, severance pay, retirement funds, and work done outside union jurisdiction.

The IATSE proposals were offered to producers through the intermediary of Pat Casey, studio labor contact man, who was holding the conference with such producer heads as Barney Balaban, N. Peter Rathvon, Nate Blumberg, Joseph Bernhard, Nicholas M. Schenck, W. C. Michael, and Abe Schneider. Richard F. Walsh, president of IATSE, conducted the meeting with delegates from studio unions, representing cameramen, property men, projectionists, sound technicians, grips, utility workmen, make-up men, electricians, and laboratory technicians.

MGMers at Chicago to Send Trade Papers to Servicemen

No trade paper sent to MGM delegates at the Chicago conference at the Blackstone Hotel, which starts today will be wasted, even after the men finish reading them. M. L. Simons, editor of The Distributor, MGM publication for the sales force, has arranged to collect them at the end of each day and send them to MGM men in the service.

The Distributor maintains a regular service of this kind. From time to time the boys have written to the home office reporting how much they enjoy the copies sent them. The service has been found practical from many angles, particularly in informing them what is going on in the trade and also maintaining a steady relationship with the home office.

Michael H. Hoffman, Pioneer Producer, Dies in Los Angeles

Michael H. Hoffman, pioneer film man, died on Tuesday in Los Angeles at the age of 62 while still active as an independent producer.

Mr. Hoffman began his motion picture career in 1912 as a sales manager and later became one of the founders of the Tiffany-Stahl Company, which specialized in a series of Mae Murray starrers, very popular in the late twenties. He also was owner of Liberty Pictures, a company which merged with two other units in 1937 to become Republic Pictures. Since that time he had been an independent.

Mayo Production Manager

Producers Corp. of America has signed Walter Mayo as general production manager for its entire United Artists releasing program.

Simplex Units at West Point

National Theatre Supply this week announced the completion of four de luxe theatre installations of Simplex sound and projection equipment at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. The installations, part of the Academy's speeding-up process for turning out officers, have been made in the East and West Academic Buildings and in Washington Hall. Equipment consists of Super Simplex Projectors, Simplex Type E Sound Systems with DC excitation, Peerless Magnarc Lamps, and National 40-ampere rectifiers.

'Dimes' Goal in Sight

With 25 States reporting total March of Dimes collections, there is little doubt tha he $4,000,000 anicipated total will be raised. $2,000,-024 has been reported by these States, this amount not including Southern California and Easern Pennsylvania. This sum is nearly double the $1,191,000 collected by the same States in 1943.

Schaefer Heads Yeshiva Group

George J. Schaefer, who is chairman of the WAC in New York, has agreed for the fifth successive year to serve as chairman of the annual scholarship drive for needy students at Yeshiva College. Yeshiva is the only liberal arts college in America under Jewish auspices.

3 Judges Named for 'Honored 100' Finals

Three outstanding figures in American life this week agreed to serve as National Judges in the culmination of the industry's Honored Hundred competition, it was announced by Charles P. Skouras, National Chairman for the motion picture industry in the Fourth War Loan. The three men named to the all-important posts by a joint Industry-Treasury Department committee are Walter D. Fuller of Philadelphia, publisher and editor-in-chief of the Saturday Evening Post; Palmer Hoyt of Portland, Oregon, publisher of the Oregonian; and Dr. P. H. Odegard, professor of political science and government at Amherst College. These men, it was announced by Mr. Skouras, will serve as a final selection board in judging the 100 theatre men from the 48 states, Hawaii and Alaska who will be selected as the industry's Honored Hundred. The winners will comprise an advisory committee for the motion picture industry in the Fifth War Loan drive and will be awarded all-expense trips to Washington. As members of the advisory committee they will be given tribute scrolls on illuminated parchment and sent personal letters from Secretary Morgenthau.

State exhibitor chairmen and state War Finance Committee chairmen are completing the final checking of entries and results in their respective states. One winner from each state will be named by the state exhibitor and War Finance chairman jointly, and they will also send in their state nominations for winners in each of the population classifications. All selections of winners will be made on a basis of actual individual "E" bond sales in ratio to the number of seats, and will be supported by certified audited reports. No one person may win two awards. State exhibitor and War Finance chairman will send their nominations of winners in the population classifications to the three national judges in New York for final selection.

Only showmen who have sold a minimum of a bond for every seat are eligible.

Aarons, MPTOA Attorney, Dies in Philadelphia

George P. Aarons, associate general counsel of the MPTOA, and prominent attorney of Philadelphia, died in the Presbyterian Hospital in his home city on Wednesday (8th). He was 58 years old and is survived by his wife, a brother and a sister.

Aarons became identified with the film industry in 1916 and in his early career in the business was a film salesman.

Nevada Man Elected

W. P. Grossman, Nevada exhibitor, was named vice-president of the Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska at a special meeting of the board of directors this week. He succeeds W. B. Franke of Humbolt, who has moved to Texas. Slater O'Hara, formerly of Wellman and now at Humbolt, was named as a new member of the board.

Celebrate With Niesses

One of the largest turn-outs in the history of the Indianapolis Variety Club paid honor to Carl Niesse and his wife, celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary. Mr. Niesse, one of Tent No. 10's original dads, were guests of honor, with Marc Wolf, national Variety dough guy, and Claude MacKean, local Warner exchange manager, acting jointly as toastmasters.

Wrong Company

Jack Connor, MGM exploitation chief in Omaha, recently reported a rabbit dashing in and out of traffic at Omaha's busiest street intersection during the rush hour. We don't know what the picture tieup is—but if Connor worked for Paramount there's that "Miracle of Morgan's Creek."

Iowa ITO Unit Agrees On 5-Cent Price Raise

Iowa exhibitors attending a special meeting this week in Des Moines to discuss the new Federal tax increase on admissions indicated they will level off admission scales by jumping to the next five-cent mark. Leo Wolcott of Eldora, president of Allied-ITO of Iowa-Nebraska, called ..the meeting, which was attended by more than 100 exhibitors. A Red Cross rally preceded the tax meeting.

The exhibitors, without any apparent exception, indicated they will jump their prices to the next five-cent mark so that the public will absorb the tax except for the 10-cent children tickets.

Wolcott said the tax increase would be a good time to level off the prices, and that the public was conscious of the admission tax increase. He praised Senator Wilson from Iowa and Senator Wherry from Nebraska for their part in the Senate to include the major fraction portion of the tax bill.

Taxes Force Stanley Theatre Net Profit Below 1942 Mark

The Stanley Company of America, a theatre-operating subsidiary of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., had a net income of $11,018,479 for the year ended August 31, 1943, compared with $8,807,035 the preceding year, but higher taxes reduced net profit to $1,839,870, against $2,953,-128 the year before, it was shown in the annual report released this week. The report shows a total of $2,800,000 set aside for Federal taxes the past year.

Deductions for the year included $3,321,239 for losses on fixed assets, and $3,155,447 for amortization, depreciation, and interest charges. In prior years profits or losses resulting from the sale or other disposal of fixed assets and from the redemption of bonds were treated as surplus adjustments. For the 1942-43 year, however, similar items are reflected in the net profit. Assets of the circuit total $70,406,076 and the statement shows an earned surplus of $5,589,010.

Universal Board Re-elected

The annual meeting of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., was held in Wilmington, Delaware, Wednesday when the board of directors was re-elected.

The meeting was presided over by Charles D. Prutzman, vice-president and General Counsel for the company. Directors re-elected are: N. J. Blumberg, Paul G. Brown, D. C. Collins, J. Cheever Cowdin, Preston Davie, William German, John J. O'Connor, Ottavio Prochet, Charles D. Prutzman, J. Arthur Rank, Budd Rogers, Daniel M. Sheaffer, W. H. Taylor, Jr., and Clifford Work.

'Snow White' Trade Shows

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be trade screened nationally on March 13 and 14, it was announced this week by RKO Radio Pictures. Screenings will be held on Monday, March 13, at 10:30 a.m. with the following exceptions: New York, 11:00 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.; Seattle, 2:30 p.m.; and St. Louis, March 14, at 11:30 a.m.

Old Tickets May Be Used if Overprinted

To aid exhibitors who find it impossible to have tickets printed showing the new price-plus-tax figures by April 1, when the 20 per cent admission tax goes into effect, the Treasury Department this week released a bulletin explaining the procedure to follow.

In cases where the established price is not changed theatre owners will be allowed to use tickets now on hand which do not show the new tax amount until properly printed tickets can be obtained. If done in this manner, however, the management must keep one or more signs posted at the outer entrance or near the box-office which state accurately the established prices and the taxes due on each type of ticket.

Where the established price is changed (and it is expected that most theatres will change prices in order to avoid the use of pennies) new tickets will have to be provided or the tickets on hand must be overprinted or overstamped with the new price and tax. This is important to all owners and managers, for overprinting or overstamping is required by Section 1702 of the Internal Revenue Code, where the original printed price is not followed. In unusual situations where a manager cannot get the overprinting or overstamping done, it is permissible to write the new price and tax on the tickets by hand.

Selznick Plans $500,000 Budget

A $500,000 advertising budget is contemplated for the "Since You Went Away" campaign by producer David O. Selznick, it was revealed this week. The initial nut of $250,000 will be used immediately. The ad campaign, to be handled by Foote, Cone, and Belding, will be carried on in newspapers, magazines radio, and billboards. The premiere is set for late in May.

Chicago to Honor Pioneers

The Chicago Variety Club will sponsor a "Pioneer's Night Dinner" to be held March 24 at the Blackstone Hotel in honor of the windy city's older showmen. Edward Brunell is chairman. Among those invited are Sam Abrams, Barney Balaban, Abe Bartelstein, Steve Bennie, Morris Choynski, Norman Fields, H. Goldson, Aaron J. Jones, Gus Kerasotas, I. L. Lesserman, Sam Levene, Dan Roach, A. W. Roth, Pete Schaefer, Ludwig Schindler, Ludwig Siegel, Sidney Selig, Simon Simansky, Mort Singer, George K. Spoor, Harry Tague, and V. O. Young.

Hopper Feted by Industry

Harold Hopper, resigning head of the film Section of the War Production Board, was feted by industry leaders at a luncheon last week. With George J. Schaefer, chairman of the War Activities Committee, as toastmaster, the industry representatives lauded Hopper for his "understanding of industry problems."

J. H. Murphy Promoted at Universal

James H. Murphy, assistant to Universal branch operations manager F. T. Murray, has been promoted to the post of personnel director of the home office, it was announced this week by Universal. Murphy came up through the ranks as contract clerk and office manager.

Lukas Film Re-released

Following the winning of the Academy Award by Paul Lukas, Film Classics announced release of "The Lady Vanishes," Alfred Hitchcock mystery comedy-thriller of several years ago. RKO has booked the picture over its Brooklyn circuit starting this week.

Bank Night to Rescue

Bank nights have been characterized in some quarters as leading patrons to the brink of a gambling perdition, but here is one case where a bank night did a lot of good. Bill James, 15, of Des Moines borrowed a quarter from a friend to see a movie. He had not been able to go for a long time because his mother was in desperate straits and had appealed to local authorities for assistance. It was bank night, and Bill hit a jackpot of $1000. He brought it right home to mother. Before the windfall the family had been without heat for three days, the father having deserted them.

Universal Shows Net Profit For Year of $6.57 Per Share

Universal Pictures had consolidated net profits of $3,759,968, after all charges including Federal income and excess profits taxes, equivalent to $6.57 per share of common stock, during its past fiscal year ended October 30, 1943, J. Cheever Cowdin, Chairman of the Board, announced in releasing the company's annual report. This compares with the net profit of $2,806,952, or $5.34 per share, in the preceding fiscal year.

Total income from operations aggregated $46,-527,527 compared with $39,109,524 in the preceding year. Domestic revenues increased to $29,112,013 from $25,033,543 in the preceding year, a gain of 16 per cent. Despite war conditions, foreign revenues increased $3,330,736, or approximately 24 per cent, to a total of $17,234,-200. Net working capital increased to $16,094,-906 from $14,229,423.

Dinner for Wolff March 21

Robert S. Wolff, soon to leave for his new London post as director of RKO Radio affairs abroad, will be tendered a testimonial dinner by the Independent Theatre Owners of the New York area at the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of March 21. Harry Brandt is chairman of the dinner committee and David Weinstock has charge of the arrangements.

MGM Seventh Block To be Set in Chicago

Details of MGM's seventh block of releases will be announced by William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general sales manager, when the company's five-day business conference opens this weekend at the Blackstone, Chicago. According to advance notices, the following productions are virtually certain for the new group: "The American Miracle," in Technicolor; "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble," "The Centerville Ghost," "Dragon Seed," "Gaslight," "Kismet," in Technicolor; "Meet the People," "Bathing Beauty" (formerly titled "Mr. Co-ed") in Technicolor; "Three Men in White," "Two Sisters and a Sailor," and "The White Cliffs." Added to these will be "Tunisian Victory," Capra-produced documentary of the African campaign.

Apart from discussion of product and advertising and sales campaigns, Mr. Rodgers has directed special attention to MGM's role in war activities. He has asked each delegate at the Chicago meeting to bring along a record of war activity accomplishment in his territory, and means will be considered to improve on past accomplishments in this field wherever possible.

The MGM sales chief has been visiting Culver City prior to his trip to Chicago, looking over completed films and those almost finished. From these he will decide definitely the make-up of the new block. Besides the completed product already mentioned, Mr. Rodgers reports that the following will be available for possible release in the near future: "Gold Town," "Marriage Is a Private Affair," "Meet Me in St. Louis," in Technicolor; "National Velvet," in Technicolor; "Secrets in the Dark," "The Seventh Cross," and "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo."

Rodgers arrived in Chicago Thursday from Hollywood. Edwin W. Aaron, circuit sales head, arrived in the Windy City on Friday, after a visit to the coast, Denver and Kansas City. Edward M. Saunders, assistant general sales manager, and Henderson M. Richey, exhibitor relations head, arrived from New York on Friday. The home office contingent, as well as others from the field, were checking in at the Blackstone on Saturday (11).

Seek Cooperation, Pledges of Exhibitors In Red Cross Drive

The distributors have instructed their salesmen that their first duty during the next few weeks is to sell the industry's Red Cross drive by getting the pledges and cooperation of every single exhibitor, Ben Kalmenson, Warner Bros. general sales manager and member of the industry's touring group, told more than 250 exhibitor and distributor representatives at the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres rally held Monday at the Hotel Nicollet in Des Moines. G. Ralph Branton, Tri-States general manager, presided at the meeting.

E. L. Alperson, RKO Theatres general manager, stressed the importance of "Collections at Every Performance—Every Day," and asserted that his own theatres will concentrate on this policy.

"The history of the industry's war effort shows that in drive after drive the public has been increasingly generous, proving that the public is not only willing but anxious to give to its favorite charities," Alperson stated.

One of Alperson's suggestions was that the Red Cross trailer be screened immediately preceding the most important feature, in double-feature houses, so that it will be seen by more patrons. Everyone in the industry is vitally interested in meeting the established goal—and surpassing it, if possible—and every effort must be made to deliver.

A. H. Blank, Iowa-Nebraska War Activities co-chairman, called upon the industry to meet its full quota. Other speakers were Paul Edwards, formerly of the Minnesota Amusement Company and now a field director with the ARC; Leo Wolcott, Iowa-Nebraska Allied president, who is local co-chairman of the drive, and Wing Commander H. B. Hancock, holder of the D.F.C., the Air Medal and the Silver Star.

Uniformed Red Cross volunteer workers acted as hostesses at the luncheon, and a complete ARC exhibit included plasma, bandages, emergency equipment, and a number of prisoners' war kits.

Two additional meetings were held Monday in Cincinnati and Los Angeles. Harry Kalmine, Martin Smith and Bob Mochrie addressed the Cincinnati session at the Netherland Plaza Hotel, in addition to Col. Arthur Frudenfeld, local exhibitor chairman, and Harris Dudelson, distributor chairman. The Los Angeles gathering heard Ned Depinet, Harry Brandt, Charles Skouras, local exhibitor chairman, and Fred Greenberg, distributor chairman.

The St. Louis Rally on Thursday (9) featured Mayor A. P. Kaufman and a 16-piece Coast Guard band, along with touring speakers, E. L. Alperson, Ben Kalmenson and Ben

Philadelphia Red Cross Drive Gets Under Way

Philadelphia's 1944 industry Red Cross drive got under way last week with Earle Sweigert, theatre division chairman, crystallizing plans for theatre collections and naming committees for the circuits and independents so that every single theatre will be involved.

Sweigert named Lester Kreiger, of Warner Brothers, as circuit chairman, and Milt Rogasner, of the Iris Theatre, independent chairman. The latter has divided the independent area into thirteen districts with a live-wire manager as a lieutenant in each district.

By Monday, every theatre owner and manager in the entire territory had been personally invited to the exhibitor luncheon to be held March 13. Every effort is being put forth to make this meeting the most successful in Pennsylvania's history and indications are that collections will be the largest in local theatrical annals.

Six Washington Managers Now Over Bond-for-Every-Seat Quota

Angie Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace, is fifth, and Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, is sixth in the Washington, D. C., Fourth War Loan goal of "A Bond for Every Seat." In ratio to the 2,423 seats in the Palace, Ratto has sold 2565 individual bonds—142 over his quota. RKO-Keith's, with a seating capacity of 1838, has sold 1957 bonds—119 over its quota

Ratto and Meakin now rank with Jack Foxe, Loew's Columbia, who was the first to sell a bond for every seat, and is now working on his quota of four bonds for every seat. Second to reach capacity was Fred Thomas, Warners' Earle Theatre; third, Charles Demma, Apex Theatre; fourth, Gene Ford, Loew's Capitol.—Wa.

Smith on Red Cross Tour

Andrew W. Smith, Jr., Eastern sales manager of 20th Century-Fox, left last week with Joseph Bernhard, national chairman of the Motion Picture Theatres Division of the 1944 Red Cross Drive, and Sam Dembow, for meetings to be held at Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Memphis and St. Louis. Mr. Smith was named by Ned E. Depinet, distributor chairman, as Southern distributor chairman of the Red Cross Drive.

St. Louis Exceeds Quota

St. Louis finished the Fourth War Loan drive with total sales of $187,655.137, or 17.7 per cent above its quota. Sale of E bonds amounted to $70,700,000 just below the goal set for the drive, but payroll pledges for E bonds will be more than enough to top all that was expected in this sector.—St. L.

Bernhard Emphasizes Necessity of Making Collections in Drive

Importance of holding a collection at every performance, with the house staff or the volunteers furnished by the Red Cross organized to see that every patron is afforded an opportunity to give, was urged by Joseph Bernhard, national chairman of the industry's Red Cross drive, at a Rally of Exhibitors and Distributors held at the William Penn Hotel in Pittsburgh last week. Only by such careful attention to the detail of the collection, with lights up and the ushers ready the moment the Red Cross trailer ends, will it be possible for the industry to reach its goal of $10,000,000.

Said Bernhard: "The difference between lights up and lights out in making collections during Red Cross Week means a difference in lives saved."

The number of theatres represented at the meeting was between 375 and 400, and was considered to be the most successful gathering of industry leaders ever held in this territory.

Harry M. Kalmine, traveling representative of the Motion Picture Theatre drive group, discussed the service which the theatres were rendering to the community in acting as a spearhead for the nation-wide drive for the Red Cross in its efforts to reach a minimum quota of $200,000,000.

H. M. Richey, distributor representative, pledged the unswerving energy of the entire distributing personnel of the country, to make this the most successful drive which has been held since the beginning of the war.

Moe Silver, exhibitor chairman for the territory, who acted as toastmaster at the luncheon, to the assembled distributors and exhibitors from Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia and Eastern Ohio, said that when the final count was in, that territory would outrank all others in the percentage of theatres participating and in the comparative collection figures.

M. A. Rosenberg, co-chairman and Allied leader, reinforced Silver's pledge with a statement that the independent theatres would back up the Red Cross Drive with an efficiency never before attained.

Other speakers were State Senator Frank Harris, Mayor Cornelius D. Scully, Pvt. Ted Orlowski, hero of Guadalcanal and Pearl Harbor, and Mrs. James A. Bines of the Red Cross, the last white woman to escape from Singapore, and former commander of a British ambulance unit in the Far East, whose dramatic personal story of adventures in the combat area held the audience spellbound.

Two additional meetings were held Thursday (2), one at the Hotel Roosevelt, New Orleans, with Si Fabian, Sam Dembow and A. W. Smith, Jr., as the visiting speakers; E. V. Landaiche, local distributor chairman, and E. V. Richards, exhibitor chairman, and the other at the Schroeder, Milwaukee, addressed by E. L. Alperson, Ben Kalmenson and Ben Shlyen; H. J. Shumow, local distributor chairman, and Harold Fitzgerald, exhibitor chairman.

Ted Gamble Receives Plaque As 'Outstanding Young Man'

Ted R. Gamble, national director of the Treasury Department's war finance division, last week received a plaque in Portland, Ore. from the National Junior Chamber of Commerce publication, "Future," for being named one of the ten outstanding young men in the United States in 1943. Mr. Gamble had recently completed his duties in connection with the Fourth War Loan Drive.

While in Portland Mr. Gamble attended to his own theatre interests in Oregon and began laying plans for the Fifth War Loan Drive.

Bell's $376,000 Bond Screening

A 21-gun salute—or is that enough?—is due Chet Bell, Los Angeles branch manager for Paramount, who engineered a special exchange projection room preview of "Lady in the Dark" which brought in $376 000 in war bonds. With the projection room seating 42 the result was on an average of $9000 per seat.

It started with the idea that enough civic-minded citizens could be found who would pay $100 each to see the picture. When one of the city's prominent business men was approached, he scoffed at the $100 figure and insisted on paying $1000. Then someone hiked the figure to $10,000, and there the price remained.

The amount raised in this manner, with subscriptions by the exchange and employes and the proceeds of a $25 exchange employes preview of "Lady in the Dark," brought the total turned over to the Charles Skouras committee to more than $400 000—by far a record for any exchange in the country.

Bell had the enthusiastic assistance of William Ring, an employe at the exchange who is an assistant air raid warden. Ring lined up the cooperation of other air raid wardens, and they went to town in the bond selling drive.

The Box Office Slant

Tunisian Victory

MGM (Ministry of Information) 80 mins.
Documentary

Credits: Presented by the Governments of the United States and Great Britain. Official record produced by the British and American Service Film Units. Distributed by the Ministry of Information through MGM release. Co-produced by Col. Hugh Stewart and Lt. Col. Frank Capra.

Comment: The long-awaited film record of the final North African campaign is here, and it lives up to every advance enthusiasm. For clarity in the over-all picture of a big campaign and in the placement of separate engagements in correct perspective to the whole, no previous film record has ever equalled this. It affords the public an opportunity to see how a campaign is waged, how the thousands of little parts join together to generate the power of a smashing offensive. It is, in reality, looking through the glasses of the General Staff. "Tunisian Victory" begins four months before the invasion of North Africa at the Washington conference between the President and the Prime Minister, when the campaign was mapped. Then come various scenes of material assembly and the trip of the immense convoys from both America and Britain. Landings at Algiers, Oran, and Casablanca and the capitulation of the French are shown. The quick thrust toward Tunis which failed is next, and then comes a slower portion which pictures the boys in the mud at the Tunisian border. With the end of the winter season the attack begins in earnest, with the British Eighth pushing up at the Mareth Line, and the western border covered by the Americans, French, and British in that order. The crushing movement is vividly shown, and the film ends with extensive views of the 260,000 Nazi prisoners—the end of the famous Afrika Korps of Marshal Rommel. Exhibitors should take note of one thing in connection with this picture. "Tunisian Victory" looks at the campaign from a tactical point of view through military eyes, and does not go into the horrors of war. There are no scenes of killing and almost none of dead troops. However, the effect of continual bombardment gives an excellent idea of the power dealt out by United Nations units, and shows more clearly, perhaps, than any other war film the part airplanes can play in ground strafing as a part of infantry advance. Planes flying hardly fifty feet high drop bombs in front of enemy tanks and just manage to miss the explosion themselves. This is just one example of the new methods of war which, because of the clarity of the film, will be understood by the public for the first time. The hand of Capra is evident in this clarity and both he and Col. Stewart rate all the honors they will receive for their joint effort. It is not the usual thing to say about a war documentary, but "Tunisian Victory" not only provides information the public wants, but also is entertainment in its own right.

Hot Rhythm

Monogram Comedy-With-Music 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Has good musical numbers and lots of comedy for the entire family to enjoy.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well in its market; strong enough to be used as a lead in some situations.

Plot: Two commercial radio writers add the voice of a young girl soloist to a recording of a famous band. Through an error thousands of these are released. The band leader's manager threatens suit against the recording company. Then when the band leader decides he wants the girl with his band, he tries to find her. Through a misunderstanding he signs up the wrong girl and is happy to call off the suit when the manager of the recording company takes up her contract. In the meantime, the right girl is found and everything ends happily.

Comment: This should do well in its market for it has the comedy, music and talent to put it over; it's strong enough to be used as a lead in many situations. The story is light and entertaining, and the song numbers fit into the general proceedings without interfering with the action. Handling a comedy role for a sock performance is Irene Ryan, who plays the part of a Dumb Dora with exceptional skill. Her rendition of a crying number, The Happiest Girl in Town, will be enjoyed by everyone because of her own inimitable presentation manner. With Tim Ryan she takes care of most of the comedy sequences, and their work together brings many laughs. The romantic leads are handled by Robert Lowery and Dona Drake; both of whom show up well. Miss Drake impresses with her rendition of a torch number. Harry Langdon and Sidney Miller register well in their parts, while Jerry Cooper, known to many through his radio work, presents a few tunes in good voice. William Beaudine's direction and Lindsley Parsons' production has built a better-than-average program offering. Sell the song numbers through music store and radio tieups. Distribute heralds advertising a new torch singer, "Dona Drake," and, since the story is about a record company, see what can be done to make voice recordings in your lobby

The Monster Maker

PRC Horror 63 mins.

(Nat'l Release, April 15)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Good fare in the chiller-diller houses, and just what the horror fans are looking for.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Wherever "weirdees" are in demand this will bolster a good feature; in those houses where horrors are the rule, it can rate the upper spot on the bill.

Cast: J. Carrol Naish, Ralph Morgan, Tala Birell, Wanda McKay, Terry Frost, Glenn Strange, Alexander Pollard, Sam Flint, Ace. Credits: Directed by Sam Newfield. Original story by Lawrence Williams. Screenplay by Pierre Gendron and Martin Mooney. Director of photography, Robert Cline. Produced by Sigmund Neufeld.

Plot: A bogus doctor, interested in a beautiful girl, infects her father with a disease called Acromegaly, in order to force the girl to marry him. Since he is the only one who knows the cure, he is about to bend her to his will when there is a struggle in which the doctor is killed and all ends well with the father being cured.

Comment: This horror picture has the unusual quality of smoothness that makes it a good sample of program chiller fare. The addicts will be quite satisfied with the thought which went into the story down to the last sequences, although the picture finishes abruptly. In situations where the creepers constitute steady fare, and in all places where the "'weirdees" are accepted, this should serve to give good support to a good feature. J. Carrol Naish, Ralph Morgan, Wanda McKay and Tala Birell take up most of the screen time and do a convincing and effective job. Production by Sig Neufeld shows an exceptional quality of mounting and story selection. Direction matches the general good quality of the total job. The picture could be sold best by exciting the general public interest in the disease which makes the subject of the picture. Treated as a combination documentary and horror film, a small herald or pamphlet treating the subject and what people might do under its influence, could be the means of stirring such interest.

Hat-Check Honey

Universal Comedy-With-Music 69 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Mar. 10th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Pleasant light entertainment with music and the type of Leon Errol comedy that is sure to be enjoyed by most audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory minor musical for the added attraction with a drama or straight comedy feature.

Cast: Grace McDonald, Richard Davis, Leon Errol, Walter Catlett, Ramsay Ames, Milburn Stone, Lee Bennett, Russell Hicks, Chester Clute, Mary Gordon, Emmett Vogan, Jack Rice, Freddie Slack & His Orchestra, Harry Owens and His Royal Hawaiians, Ted Weems and His Orchestra, Jimmy Cash. Credits: Directed by Edward F. Cline. Original story by Al Martin. Screenplay by Maurice Leo and Stanley Davis. Director of photography, Milton Krasner. Music and lyrics by Milton Rosen and Everett Carter. Associate Producer, Will Cowan.

Plot: To help his son advance in the show world, a father pretends he wants to go it alone. The boy then gets a job as vocalist with a band and makes a tremendous hit, attracting Hollywood attention and a contract. Meanwhile, the girl who loves him and who has ambitions to become a writer, has her story of the father's life accepted for pictures. They are all reunited when each is signed to play a part in the picture.

Comment: Good light entertainment that should fare well in the situations for which it was intended. In this case, though it follows the pattern of previous Universal filmusicals with its romance, music and comedy, it has the Leon Errol type of amusement, which is sure to be enjoyed by audiences of all ages. Richard Davis, a new find, plays the romantic lead doing equally well as both the lover and the crooner. He is ably abetted by Grace McDonald as his sweetheart. Leon Errol, as usual, does okay with his clowning, while Milburn Stone, Ramsay Ames and Mary Gordon capably take care of their assignments. Though there are three bands listed, most of the music is played by Freddie Slack and His Orchestra, leading one to wonder what the other two are there for. Picture goes along at a smooth, even tempo under the direction of Edward Cline; all other departments having been well provided for by the producer, Will Cowan. The picture has many good musical numbers, so arrange tieups with music stores and radio stations, and have these plugged in advance of the showing. It also introduces Jimmy Cash, the singer on the Burns & Allen show, so try to arrange for a plug before and after that show. Sell the bands and try to have stills displayed where the high school crowd's attention will be attracted.

Partners Of The Trail

Monogram Western 55 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fast moving western with the looked-for oater entertainment values throughout.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should net better-than-average returns.

Cast: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton, Christine McInyre, Craig Woods, Robert Frazer, Harry F. Price, Jack Ingram, Lynton Brent, Marshall Reed, Ben Corbett, Steve Clark, Lloyd Ingraham. Credits: Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Original story and screenplay by Frank H. Young. Director of photography, Harry Neumann. Produced by Scott R. Dunlap.

Plot: A young lady on her way to take possession of a ranch left her by her dad meets a U. S. Marshal on the stagecoach. He is on his way to solve the mystery of her father's, and other murders. He learns that the cause of all the trouble is gold on most of the property and through this discovery is able to apprehend the whole gang responsible for the killings.

Comment: Western fans will enjoy this latest adventure in the Johnny Mack Brown-Raymond Hatton series. It is good stuff with plenty of fast riding and shooting. Word-of-mouth and a little extra selling should net it better-than-average returns. Brown and Hatton are in their usual good form, assisted by an unusually fine supporting cast, and the rapid-fire direction by Lambert Hillyer. The heavies, headed by Robert Frazer and Jack Ingram, do their share toward supplying the needed excitement those avid sagebrush fans look for. Scott R. Dunlap produced. This latest epic is about gold, etc., so work all your exploitation around that.

The White Cliffs

MGM Drama 126 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An irresistibly appealing motion picture destined for widespread audience approval, with the feminine element according it the strongest praise.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Look for excellent box-office career.

Cast: Irene Dunne, Alan Marshal, Frank Morgan, Roddy McDowall, Van Johnson, C. Aubrey Smith, Dame May Whitty, Gladys Cooper, Peter Lawford, John Warburton, Jill Esmond, Brenda Forbes, Norma Varden, others. Credits: Produced by Sidney Franklin. Directed by Clarence Brown. Screenplay by Claudine West, Jan Lustig and George Froeschel. Based on a poem, "The White Cliffs," by Alice Duer Miller. Additional poetry by Robert Nathan. Director of photography, George Folsey.

Plot: An American girl, Irene Dunne, goes to England with her father, Frank Morgan, just before World War I. She meets and marries a baronet, Alan Marshal, who, when war is declared, leaves her to join his regiment. He is killed in action, and Irene remains in England to raise their son, Roddy McDowall. She resents the fact that a man as young as her husband had to die because of the war, makes up her mind that her son will not suffer the same untimely fate. She plans to take him to America, but the son's love for England, his desire to adhere to family tradition, forces her to cancel passage. With the coming of World War II, the son, now a young man (Peter Lawford) answers the call to arms, while Irene becomes a nurse. During a raid on Dieppe, the son is wounded. He is brought to the hospital where his mother is stationed, dies while she describes a parade of American soldiers seen from the window.

Comment: Aside from the fact that it should encourage a deeper understanding between the peoples of England and the United States, "The White Cliffs" merits high praise for its exceptional audience values. It is definitely a picture for women, and on that point alone should experience a successful box-office career. But it is also a picture that most men will enjoy. One finds it difficult to explain precisely why it is so irresistibly appealing, but as the story of a wife and mother of two wars whose courage remains resolute against tragedy and heartbreak, it succeeds so well in stirring the spectator's emotions that he feels a part of the proceedings. "The White Cliffs" is not all tragedy—not by any means; there are countless moments of delightful humor, still others of nostalgic tenderness and beauty. Its 127 minutes embrace laughter, love, gaiety, tragedy—in fact, nearly every emotional element necessary to capture and sustain audience interest. The picture is a prime example of perfection in every department: direction, photography, settings, production, screenplay and musical direction. And as though performances were being overlooked, let it be pointed out that Irene Dunne's role is perhaps the richest of her career, and she rises nobly to the occasion with a warm and sympathetic portrayal. Alan Marshal, Roddy McDowall, Frank Morgan, C. Aubrey Smith, Dame May Whitty, Gladys Cooper and Peter Lawford are all excellent in supporting roles. Producer Sidney Franklin and Director Clarence Brown have every reason to be proud of their achievement.

Shine On Harvest Moon

Warner Bros. Musical 112 mins.

(Nat'l Release, April 8)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Entertainment as your patrons love it. Nostalgic romance of vaudeville history melodramatically told with a Technicolorful climax.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should hit top grosses. Mass entertainment value for any theatre.

Cast: Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Irene Manning, S. Z. Sakall, Marie Wilson, Robert Shayne, and others. Credits: Produced by William Jacobs. Directed by David Butler. Screenplay by Sam Hellman, Richard Weil, Francis Swann and James Kern. Based on original story by Richard Weil. Photographic direction by Arthur Edeson.

Plot: A vaudeville headliner and songwriter meets a beautiful girl who is working as a singer in a Honky Tonk. He decides to launch her on a career. The owners of the Honky Tonk succeed in breaking up her act when she appears for the first time on a stage and the songwriter then persuades an established actress to join with the girl and form a team act. This combination fails through jealousy and the younger actress joins the songwriter to form a team act. Her former employers still harbor resentment and force this act from bookings, and then the girl leaves the act in order that her sponsor may continue his career. Later they are reunited and achieve headliner popularity.

Comment: As motion picture entertainment, planned deliberately to please the masses this film emerges as a very sizeable chunk of what dollar signs are made of. It will provide just what the average audience enjoys and buys. While it would have been even more enticing had it been produced in its entirety as a Technicolor picture the transposition from black and white to color for the climactic scenes make the color sequences all the more appreciated. The very nature of the plot, employing a showbusiness success story theme, will find popular acclaim from the movie fans, and old-timers in particular will remember the principals (Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth) from real life. The title song still rates tops in popular music. Director David Butler has kept the story interestingly interspersed with light, fun-filled moments, the heartbreaks which dramatize a theatrical career and the thrills of success when it finally is achieved. The colorful vaudevillians around whom the plot has been built provides keen interest for movie fans of all ages and Producer William Jacobs has successfully assembled a very able cast to carry it through. Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan provide fine teamwork in the leading roles with the laughs liberally supplied by Jack Carson, Marie Wilson and S. Z. Sakall.

Fat, Paper Shows in Canada Get Results

Canadian activities in the salvage of waste paper and fat has been reported by S. B. Taube, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario.

On January 29 a Fat Show was held at the Star Theatre, Carlton Place. The local Salvage Committee also tied in with an appeal for paper. Result: over 350 pounds of fat and 3½ tons of paper were collected.

A Saturday morning show was held at a theatre in Kingsville. Gary Hogarth, district supervisor of the southwestern Ontario branch of the MPTA, paid for the rental of the show, gave away $30 in prizes. Over 350 children attended, and 14 tons of paper were collected.

At the Royal Theatre, Aurora, a paper drive brought in 12 tons, while at the Regent, Brockville, sixteen tons of rags and paper were collected at a special show, according to Manager Harry Wilson.

Eight theatres in Windsor, Ont.—Capitol, Palace, Empire, Vanity, Royal, Park, Tivoli and Temple—all held Fat Shows and obtained over 10,000 pounds of fat.

Cooperation and Exhibitor Pledges Sought in the Red Cross Drive

CHICAGO

The tentative Balaban and Katz admission rates, including the 20 per cent tax, have been set at 95 cents for loop evening prices, an advance of ten cents over present charges. The A houses will go from 35 to 40 cents, 50 to 55 cents, and the evening prices from 60 to 65 cents. In every possible case the use of odd penny admissions will be eliminated. Other circuits are expected to follow suit and independent theatre owners will pass the increased tax on to their patrons.

Chicago theatres with large mailing lists will have another cent to pay after March 25, when the letter rate for city deliveries goes to three cents. It is thought possible some mailing lists may be discontinued.

Matt Lavin has been added to the Monogram Indianapolis sales staff.

Eleanor Carlyle is the new manager of the Clark Theatre—the first woman manager in the loop.

Steve Cokins, former managing director of the Verdi Theatre Corporation, is now with the Regimental Special Office, handling the publicity for the First Regiment at Fort George, Camp Meade, Md.

Allied of Illinois members and directors met Thursday afternoon to renew the contract of Jack Kirsch, Allied prexy for the next three years, and to take action on the increased admission taxes and other matters.

Mort Singer, Jr., assistant director of "Gung Ho," was awarded a plaque by the Chicago Marine League at the Palace Theatre premiere, which raised $7,000 for the Chicago Marine organization.

The Chicago Operators Union, with president James Gorman handling the gavel, voted $10,000 for the Red Cross fund, to be raised from 700 union members. Horace Risser, Ridge Theatre operator, was inducted into the Army last Saturday,, making 45 members in the armed services.

Van Nomikos, president of the Van Nomikos circuit, says his Empress Theatre will not add burlesque to the film programs for the present, since suitable bookings are hard to get. They will, however, be arranged as soon as possible. The Rialto Theatre, a loop house under the Nat Barger management, will continue with burlesque and films throughout the spring and will postpone the all-film policy that was to go into effect the latter part of this month.

Ben Isenberg, Chicago Monogram manager, announces the acquisition of the Abe Gumbiner theatres; the Paulina, Royal, and Banner. Michael Seigel has been appointed general manager. Gumbiner is retiring from business.

Gladys Sammons, Cheviot, 13, was winner in the girl's division in the recent Washington Birthday Scrap Paper Matinee, gathering 4,010 pounds of the paper. Ralph DeBrunner, Norwood, 11, took top prize for the boys, collecting 4,389 pounds of waste paper. Each was given a $100 war bond.

Arloa Rae Fetter, 11, Marion, Ohio, was the winner over nearly 3000 entrants in a cartoon contest conducted in connection with the current showing of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," it was announced Wednesday by WLW, radio station, which sponsored the contest in cooperation with RKO-Radio Pictures. The winner had a choice of a one-year scholarship at a recognized art school or a trip to Hollywood with a parent or guardian next summer, with all expenses paid for both. Vern Caldwell, director of public relations for the Disney Studios, was one of the judges.

CLEVELAND

Sam Galanty, Columbia district manager, was the exchange guest of branch manager Lester Zucker last week.

Another important visitor was Arthur Greenblatt, Monogram home office official. It was his first visit here in his new capacity.

Subsequent run theatre owners in the Greater Cleveland area will not try to absorb any part of the new federal admission tax, but will pass it all on to the public. This was virtually agreed upon at a general exhibitors' meeting held last Friday in the offices of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. Because Ohio exhibitors already operate under a state three per cent gross sales tax, this added tax makes for some complicated arithmetic. A chart has been issued breaking down the total price into established price, state tax, federal tax and total.

With the signing of all eligible members of the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange by Local F-5 of I.A.T.S.E. 160, every exchange in this area with the single exception of Universal, is now a member of Local F-5, Dan Cowhig, business manager announces. The Twentieth-Fox deal concluded last week, involves thirteen employees, including bookers, cashier and office personnel.

Sam P. Gorrel, local Republic branch manager, and Charles Raymond, Loew theatre division manager, on Friday entertained members of the Navy, radio, newspapers and Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel, with Cleveland SeaBee John H. Vorhees as guest of honor. The luncheon was part of the big campaign Republic is staging for "The Fighting SeaBees."

Fred C. Dickely, Altec sales official with headquarters in Detroit, was a local National Theatre Supply visitor during the past week.

May 7th is the date chosen by Shirley Sogg, daughter of Jack Sogg, local MGM branch manager, for her marriage to Dr. Fred Soldow of this city.

Tony Stern, Warner theatre head booker, was in New York last week on booking business, and Lou Milder, manager of Warners' Colony, brought a bad cold back with him from Hot Springs, Arkansas, where he went for his health.

Eddie Miller, Hippodrome Theatre manager, is vacationing on the west coast for a couple of weeks.

Jerry Lamm, younger son of Julius Lamm, manager of the Uptown Theatre, spent the week home on furlough from his Coast Guard base at Baltimore, Md.

Marvin Samuelson, Warner theatre booker and former manager of the Colony Theatre, measures up to Uncle Sam's physical requirements. He will report to the Navy any day. Al Sunshine, Republic salesman, has also passed his physical and will be off to join the Navy within the next few weeks. Frank DiFranco, Universal head shipper, left last week, and is now learning to handle a gun instead of tin cans.

Morrison Orr, United Artists branch manager, takes over J. Schmertz' job as co-chairman, with William N. Skirball, of the War Activities Committee in this area.

Nat Wolfe, Warner zone manager, has been appointed chairman of the local Red Cross theatre committee.

Every downtown first run theatre in the city last week played "With the Marines at Tarawa" and gave it feature advertising. It is now released generally throughout the city.

George Bailey, MGM head booker, last week introduced a new sister to his two sons.

Pete Wood, state chairman of the March of Dimes committee, reports that collections this year are approximately $200,000, as against $115,000 last year. This is a boost of 70 per cent.

DES MOINES

Death took away a veteran Des Moines theatre operator, Abe Frankle, 71, former partner of A. H. Blank, and associated in theatres and amusement parks in Des Moines for the past 25 years. He died in Iowa Methodist Hospital in Des Moines after suffering a heart attack brought on by acute asthma. He was owner and operator of the Casino Theatre in the Des Moines loop district at the time of his death.

One of Iowa's oldest exhibitors in point of service, William M. Mart, manager of the Iowa Theatre at Grinnell, Iowa, died of a heart attack. He had been in theatre work for more than 40 years and was awarded a plaque a few years ago as one of the few living exhibitors in the country who had run "Queen Elizabeth" with Sarah Bernhardt, the first full length feature produced.

"The Sullivans" had its midwest premiere at the Paramount Theatre in Waterloo Thursday with the proceeds from the special show going to the Sullivan Memorial fund. The fund, started by Sullivan families over the country, will be used to erect a suitable memorial at Waterloo.

The Crystal Theatre at Manning, destroyed by fire this winter, is expected to be ready for operation again by April 11 when a special matinee will be held for the Omaha Children's Memorial Hospital fund. Theatres in western Iowa and the Omaha territory are holding special matinees on April 11 under the sponsorship of the Omaha Variety Club to contribute funds to the Children's Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Deftless operate the Crystal.

A special meeting of the Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska was held in Des Moines March 6 to listen to tax experts discuss the new federal tax on admission tickets. Leo Wolcott of Eldora, president, presided over the meeting. In addition the Red Cross rally was held at the same time. Following the meeting, the directors of the Allied held a board meeting.

B. C. Marcus, district manager, held a conference with Mel Evidon, Des Moines Columbia manager, with both men journeying to Omaha. Evidon is being transferred to Kansas City as manager there on April 1. No successor has been announced as yet.

State Fire Marshal John Strohm reported in his annual report for 1943 fire losses that 11 theatres had fires during the year, as compared with 13 in 1942. The total loss from the 11 fires amounted to $27,838 as compared with $29,000 the preceding year.

Leonard Fried has been named acting manager of the Paramount Theatre at Waterloo to replace Maurice Crew, who has been accepted for service in the Army. Crew is awaiting his call for service.

Josephine Segar has been appointed as the new biller at Paramount exchange and Mrs. Mary Connell has taken a similar position with Warner Bros. Bob Long, Columbia poster clerk, has enlisted in the Navy.

Word has been received that Lieut. Dick Kappler, former Des Moines Film Row employe, has been wounded in New Guinea. No details were available of the casualty. He formerly worked for the Iowa Film Delivery company and a brother, William, is a booker with Universal, and another brother, Francis, formerly was a booker with Republic.

DETROIT

Earl J. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres, has earned new recognition as a civic leader through his appointment by Mayor Edward J. Jeffries as a member of the Board of Street Railways. Hudson was appointed to the board March 1, filling a vacancy left by resignation of a member. In the 10 years Hudson has been in Detroit, having come here from New York, he has built a reputation for public service as well as of efficient management of the theatre chain he heads. He is a member of the City Employes Retirement System's board of trustees; he helped organize and develop the local Office of Civilian Defense; he has been active in all the bond and scrap drives, and he now is state chairman of the WAC committee conducting the Red Cross drive in Michigan theatres.

The United Artists Theatre ran an interesting advertising campaign making use of street-car advertising in promoting "The North Star."

"Lipstick trouble" is bothering the employes at the United Artists Theatre these days, with their problem accenting the shortage of eligible males in Detroit. A life-size picture of Ray Milland has been in the lobby as part of the display advertising the coming of "Lady in the Dark." It keeps the sign company in the United Artists Theatre Building busy just removing the lip prints that lonely females implant upon the lips and face of Milland's likeness. Milland had better not make any personal appearances in this city.

INDIANAPOLIS

Norman Moray, general sales manager for Vitaphone short subjects, spent Saturday at the exchange and held a meeting with the salesmen, outlining and explaining next year's short subject program.

Rex Carr, manager of Marcus Enterprises, was in Dayton, O., during the week inspecting the company interests and holdings there.

Marc Wolf, of the Y. & W. Management Corp., spent several days in Gary, Ind., on business.

John Micu, Ft. Wayne exhibitor, will give a farewell party in honor of C. W. Becker, manager of the Indiana Theatre in Ft. Wayne, who will be inducted into the Army. A delegation from Indianapolis has been invited.

H. L. Beecroft, temporary manager of the 20th-Fox exchange, spent the week-end with his family in New York.

Don Rossitter, executive secretary, Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, has passed his physical examination.

S/Sgt. Abe Baker, former Columbia booker, is on furlough and visiting his friends.

George Landis, manager of 20th-Fox exchange, who has been on the sick list, is improving and spends part of his time at his desk while on the mend.

Downtown Theatres here, including the Indiana, Circle and Loew's, are showing the United States government film, "With the Marines at Tarawa."

Boyd Sparrow, manager of Loew's Theatre, will act as host to a group from the Indianapolis One Gallon Club of the Red Cross blood donor service at a special preview of Columbia's drama, "None Shall Escape," at 8:15 Tuesday night. Guests will include those who have given 10 or more pints of blood.

Loew's, incidentally, is having quite a run of "A Guy Named Joe." Its first week was the biggest the house has had this year, and the second week was just about the biggest second week Loew's ever had.

MEMPHIS

The Normal Theatre, a neighborhood house, has been taken over by Lyle Richmond, who owns theatres at Hayti, Hernerville, Parma, Senneth, and Campbell, Missouri. The circuit is known as the Missouri. The Normal Theatre was owned by James Augustine.

J. F. Willingham, former branch manager of MGM who has been serving as manager at the St. Louis branch, was visiting Film Row last week. Mr. Willingham has been appointed permanent manager of the St. Louis branch, following the retirement of the former manager there due to illness.

W. L. Moxley, Kayser, Ark., was visiting Film Row last week.

Edmond Rowley, Jr. of the Robb-Rowley circuit, Little Rock, Ark., was visiting Film Row last week.

The Motion Picture Industry division of the Red Cross drive, headed by Edwin Sapinsley, of Malco Circuit, has planned its drive with a 100 per cent pledge from Tri-State territory.

Margaret Cocke, formerly with MGM and RKO branch offices, has joined Macle as a booker. And Vivian Browner, is a new stenographer with the Malco circuit.

Dave Greskind, Malco circuit, who entered the first Army training corps, and was discharged last year because of a knee injury, has been called back to service.

At a meeting of neighborhood theaters it was decided to pass the new tax on to the customers because of high operating expenses, according to M. A. Lightman, owner of Malco Theatres. Admissions after April 1, will be 30 cents for matinees and 35 cents at night. The loop theatres have as yet not decided just what change will be made in admission tickets.

NEW YORK

Red Cross news: Moe Kurtz (20th-Fox) has been appointed assistant to Ben Abner (MGM), who is New Jersey head of the Red Cross Drive. Ray Moon and Moe Sanders (both 20th-Fox) are going to launch the drive in Queens. Ned Depinet (RKO) is moving toward the coast on behalf of the drive.

George Jeffrey and Dick Perry, upstate salesmen for United Artists, were in to the local exchange to make reports last week. Jeffrey is opening an office at 1034 Broadway, Albany, to represent UA.

Sid Mesibov, Paramount ad man, has this to say: "The pending trade screening of 'The Hitler Gang' has Broadway in a feuhrer." (To Harry McNaughton: the correct spelling is "furore.") Sid, incidentally, may go into the Army.

"The Farmyard Symphony," an old Disney, is going into the Little Carnegie for six weeks.

MGM's Eddie Suess, formerly a booker in the New York exchange, then a booker at Albany, has been made office manager there, succeeding Ralph Ripps, who becomes a salesman.

Betty Santner of the Warner contract department has resigned—the stork.

Mention was made last week that Charley Boasberg and Harry Michalson were out on the road in connection with RKO's Ned Depinet drive. Now it develops that Harry Gittleson is also along, thus completing the two trips with Captain Boasberg.

Al Mendelsohn, 20th-Fox N. J. booker, and Charlotte Goldwyn, Paramount booker, have been away from their desks because of illness.

Sally Sasloff, who resigned from United Artists to get married, and who is now on her honeymoon, writes in to her office pals to say that marriage is a great institution.

Among exhibitors seen along the row last week were Louis Weitzman, Strand, Union City, N. J.: and Max Cohen of the Rialto and Liberty, Monticello, N. Y.

Ben Weinstock, general manager of Raybond Theatres, has received word that his son, Cpl. Harvey Weinstock, is somewhere in England. Weinstock's other son, Cpl. Alex Weinstock, formerly of Loew's publicity department, is with the Army Air Force at Fresno, Calif.

OMAHA

A special advance showing for Red Cross benefit of "Gung Ho!" was held March 8 at the Twentieth Century-Fox screening room. The audience was limited to 50 persons who gave $25 or less to the Red Cross last year and are increasing the donation to $100 or more in the current drive.

DeWitt Sinclair, Wymore, Neb., exhibitor, has entered the Army, his wife taking over as manager of the Cozy Theatre.

Harold G. Dunn, owner of the Jewel Theatre at Valentine, Neb., is in the thick of the running for Nebraska's "Honored Hundred" winner. He also has served as county war finance committee chairman.

Joe Scott, 20th-Fox branch manager, spent last week in Des Moines helping work out several new picture campaigns.

M. G. Shakelford, former Columbia salesman, was a visitor along the row.

Dill Boyden has resigned as assistant booker at the RKO exchange.

Paul Walsh, Warner Brothers' salesman, will take his draft exam this month.

B. C. Marcies, Columbia's new district manager from Kansas City, and Mel Eviden of Des Moines visited the local office here outlining the "Cover Girl" campaign for the area. Three hundred elaborate invitations were sent out by Branch Manager Joe Jacobs for a special screening March 13 at the Dundee Theatre.

Robert Bertram, Columbia office manager, was turned down by the Army.

A number of exhibitors, distributors and friends were invited to a special party for Sidney Epstein of the Epstein circuit, who is slated to enter the armed forces soon. He was presented with a fine small-tools kit.

N. H. Moray, general sales manager of short subjects for Warner Brothers, spent a day here with Branch Manager Frank Hannon and his salesmen and bookers.

at St. Anthony's Hospital, resumed his duties a few days ago.

In the suit brought on behalf of a boy injured in a fall from the balcony of a South St. Louis theatre after he had been locked in the house overnight, the case was tried before Circuit Judge William S. Connor a few days ago, a jury being waived. A judgment of $5,000 was entered against the defendant, St. Louis Amusement Company. After the payment of a fee of one-third of $1333,33 to the plaintiff's attorneys, the balance was deposited in the Industrial Bank & Trust Company to be held in trust until the boy attains his majority, or until further orders of the court.

Defendant officials of the Theatrical Brotherhood Local No. 6 in the $102,000 in damage suits brought recently by two former members of an auxiliary union are: Lery Upton, president of Local No. 6; Elmer Moran, business agent; William Kostedt, vice-president; William W. Spears, recording secretary; C. Orville Newlin, financial secretary; John Jordan, treasurer, and Albert Swanson. Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company houses, will head the exhibitors committee for the American Red Cross Drive March 23-29. The industry's goal is $10,000,000 and St. Louis and Eastern Missouri can be depended upon to contribute their share under Mr. Arthur's leadership. Mr. Arthur is due back in St. Louis this week and probably will soon have an important announcement concerning the final organization plans for the Exhibitors Distributing Corporation, to operate somewhat along the lines of the old First National company.

The Villard Theatre, Villa Park, Ill., suffered $750 damages recently through a fire that started in material carried by birds for nests near a neon sign. The fire was extinguished so quickly and quietly the patrons of the house were not aware of the blaze.

The Oak Theatre, Roanoke, Ill., was almost completely destroyed by fire recently. Carl Phillips of Mount Pulaski, Ill., is the owner.

SAN FRANCISCO

Charles P. Skouras, now acting as Pacific area director of the motion picture industry for the Red Cross, played host to more than 200 theatre men from northern California and the Bay area at a luncheon at the St. Francis Hotel here as a pre-campaign discussion of the 1944 Red Cross Drive. B. V. Sturdivant, northern California division manager for Fox-West Coast Theatres and chairman of the Red Cross campaign in northern California, was toastmaster. Harry Brandt of New York and Ned E. Depinet, national distributor chairman for the drive, addressed the meeting.

Al Schmitken, distributor chairman for northern California, and H. Neal East, executive vice-chairman of northern California, were among the guests, who included managers of San Francisco and East Bay-West Coast Theatres, Golden State bookers, managers and operators of the leading film houses, publicity managers from here and Hollywood, exchange managers, and military personnel.

"The Fighting Seabees," which began its run at the Fox Theatre without much more than the usual ballyhoo, has played most performances in the 5,000-seat house to soldout audiences. Along with the showing of the film is the outside exhibition of actual machinery used by the Seabees.

Talk of the town is the unusual long-run of "Jeannie," English film now in its fifth month at the Clay Theatre.

Not to be outdone by other shows around town, the Kearny Burlesk Theatre has now added Sunday matinees to its already heavy schedule of performances.

VANCOUVER

Ed Bickle, owner of the E. W. and Bickle theatres in Courtney and the Ilo-Ilo Theatre in Cumberland, B. C., has revived the weekly War Savings Stamp awards, which proved so popular at his theatres in 1943. Each Thursday night during February $50 in face value (Stamps) are being given away. $20 in the E. W. Theatre and $15 each in the Bickle and Ilo-Ilo theatres.

The housing problem is acute in the Vancouver district, and to make sure they have a place to live, Charlie Ramage, manager of Regal, the (MGM), and Martin Cave, manager of the Kerrisdale (FPCC), have purchased homes in the residential section of the city.

Betty Black, daughter of Harry Black, manager of the Capitol, Penticton, has for the past five years ushered for her father. She has now swapped her usher's uniform for that of a nurse and will train at the Royal Jubilee Hospital at Victoria.

Hoodlums who like to stage their parties in a big way took over the Lyric stage last week-end. Bob Scott informed police the front door was forced open, the piano moved to the middle of the stage, and the carpets rolled back. Nothing was stolen. He thought it was juveniles out for a big time.

Nice to see Charlie Doctor back again at the downtown Dominion after being away seven months with a broken hip.

Bill Jones, RKO manager, and Reggie Dodderich, RKO Calgary manager, are in Portland, Ore., for a sales drive meeting with Captain Boasberg from New York.

Min Habick from Toronto is now assistant manager at the Capitol Theatre. She was connected with the distributing end of the film business in the East.

Mrs. W. R. Smithe, cashier at the Capitol, Duncan, for a number of years is now the manager of this theatre. She follows Fred Poulter, who was called up by the Army recently.

Peggy Lodge, who has been in charge for the past six months at the Alma (FPCC) theatre, returns to her old position as cashier. John Elkins from Kerrisdale is now manager.

Dorothy Bishop, manager of the Varsity (Odeon) resigned this week to go into other business. No successor appointed to date.

E. B. Dewees, veteran projectionist, is leaving Van and will make his home in Seattle.

Another lawsuit is due to come up in the near future over the old Roval Theatre between W. P. Nicols, owner, and Frank Doyle, tenant. Nicols claims $1500 for supplies and services rendered. Doyle's counter-claims the same amount for money loaned during the past two years.

"Black Berets," the Canadian Army show which opened in the East this week, was produced by H. W. Carter-Page, formerly with Walt Disney studios, and is directed by Cecil Mindle, who was with RKO in Hollywood.

It has been reported an independent film distributor of Toronto has been making a bid to represent Eagle-Lion in Canada, and is said to have obtained adequate financing to close the deal. To date nothing definite has taken place.

Selling the Picture

Cite Brock Whitlock For His 'Lost Angel' ExploitationCampaign

Brock Whitlock of Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., has received Honor Roll mention for his exploitation campaign on "Lost Angel." This marks the third time showman Whitlock has been recognized for his campaigns on MGM pictures. If he is successful in receiving three more mentions for a total of six within six months, he will be awarded an Honor Roll plaque by William R. Ferguson, MGM's exploitation manager.

Since Reading newspapers permit no motion picture theatre publicity, Whitlock's campaign had to be planned and carried out minus their cooperation.

Highlight of the campaign was an Angel for a Day contest, which was conducted in cooperation with the Kaufman Furniture Store. For a period of three or four days the store took large-space newspaper ads devoted entirely to a contest in which girls between the ages of six and twelve competed. Basis for the selection of the Angel for a Day: a hundred-word letter written in the child's own language on the subject, "Why We Should Buy More Bonds During the Fourth War Loan Drive."

The little girl selected acted as hostess, or "Angel," to a large group of orphan children, who were guests of the store and the theatre at a special showing of "Lost Angel." Transportation was provided by civic organizations.

She was introduced to the mayor of Reading, who interviewed her over Station WRAW, and presented her with a $25 war bond. With her mother and several prominent citizens, she was tendered a dinner at the Hotel Berkshire.

The winning letter was blown up and placed in the window of Victory House, the store devoted to the selling of bonds in the busiest section of Reading. Star head photographs of Margaret O'Brien were given to the first fifty girls who entered the contest and an autographed photo given to the winner.

Women's clubs, parent-teacher associations, the public schools and other social and civic organizations were guests at a special screening.

Whitlock contacted the superintendent of schools, who agreed to urge attendance at the picture through special announcements in school general assemblies.

Street stencils asked: "Have You Seen 'Lost Angel'?"

On a woman's radio program, names were picked at random from the telephone book. People with the names announced had to call at the theatre for their guest tickets.

Special heralds were distributed in defense plants, an effective teaser advertising campaign was used in the newspapers, and window displays were promoted on fashions for men, women and children.

'C' Ration Cards, Paper Napkins Sell Two Pictures in Houston

The "C" ration card gag, often used with success, was again utilized effectively for the showing of "No Time for Love" at the Metropolitan Theatre, Houston.

In the same city, napkins were distributed for the engagement of "Riding High" at the Majestic. Copy: "Keep 'Em 'Riding High' Over Berlin—Join the Air Wac."

For her outstanding exploitation and advertising campaign on MGM's "Thousands Cheer" (credited to District Manager Elmer Brennan in a report which appeared in STR, Feb. 12, p. 21), Miss Audrey Miller, manager of the Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., was awarded a "Smart Showmanship" plaque during a managers' drive by Standard Theatres Co., operators of the house. A former cashier, Miss Miller has been in show business for the last four years. In photo above, which she will send to her fiance, now on duty in the Seabees overseas, she points to plaque. Picture of fiance whom she hasn't seen in year, is on the desk.

'Twain' Campaign is Outlined at Meeting

Extended exploitation campaigns, to take full advantage of extended run possibilities of top attractions, and more intensive follow-through with new forms of promotional activities in situations where wartime necessity has curtailed some of the usual channels of advertising, were urged by Mort Blumenstock at a meeting of the Warner Bros. field public relations staff Monday. The brief conference preceded the screening of "The Adventures of Mark Twain," followed by a joint session with Harry Goldberg's theatre zone advertising men and a general discussion of the elaborate campaign being mapped for the picture.

Jesse L. Lasky, producer of "Mark Twain," attended the afternoon meeting and gave the field crews some background and showmanship angles on the picture.

On Tuesday, Larry Golob, manager of the field exploitation force, held individual conferences with members of his staff, which was recently augmented by Blumenstock to keep pace with field campaign demands.

Field representatives attending included Ted Tod, Lucia Perrigo, Frank Bruner, Bill Brumberg, Herbert S. Pickman, Glenn Ireton, Don Walker, Jack Leewood, Carl Post, Art Moger, Robert Harris.

Theatre ad men present were J. Knox Strachan, Dan Finn, Robert Paskow, Frank La Falce, Irving Blumberg, James M. Totman, Marcel Brazee, Charles Smakwitz.

'Four Jills' Music Tieups

Four top tunes from "Four Jills in a Jeep" are being plugged on the radio. Music dealers will have the welcome mat out for tieups.

Tour of Anita Colby Results in Barrage of 'Cover Girl' Publicity

Cover girl Anita Colby's tour across the nation as "advance man" for Columbia's Technicolor production, "Cover Girl," is turning out to be a smart idea. By this time, Miss Colby has virtually completed her 6000-mile trek covering 26 key cities, with the result that theatres in those cities are geared for record business when the picture is released.

In New England, first scene of Miss Colby's tour, "Cover Girl" got a big play in the newspapers and over the air. Feature stories and art layouts appeared in Boston, Providence and New Haven newspapers. The Hartford Courant gave its Sunday magazine cover to Cover Girl Peggy Lloyd and the inside cover to a full-page spread of other "Cover Girl" players, while Art McGinley of the Times chatted an entire column about Miss Colby and "Cover Girl."

As the picture ambassadress moved south, she turned on even more heat. Philadelphia's brotherly love worked overtime, the Record crashing through with a full-page St. Valentine's Day spread of Cover Girls.

South of the Mason-Dixon line the magnolias blossomed prematurely in the high temperature generated by the campaign. Chivalrous and patriotic leaders of the Fourth War Loan drive made good use of Miss Colby's status as the nation's outstanding Cover Girl and as a featured player in "Cover Girl" to sell impressive quantities of bonds. In Atlanta, she sold more bonds than an established screen star, and was rewarded by the Constitution with front-page "Cover Girl" features and layouts for five days in a row. In St. Louis, the glamorous press agent addressed a bond rally of nearly 15,000 people, and the picture got a grateful and enthusiastic play in the press.

Besides getting newspaper publicity in all sections of the country, the Cover Girl's tour has also gotten top-notch radio breaks. In addition to bond-selling broadcasts, she appeared repeatedly as guest on other programs.

Now in the middlewest, Miss Colby will complete her tour on March 15. Her itinerary included the following cities: Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Dallas, Memphis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo.

Hard-to-Get Vest Buttons as Gag For 'Miracle of Morgan's Creek'

Word-of-mouth comment on the offer of Manager Howard Burkhardt of the State Theatre, Cleveland, to give $10,000 to the couple duplicating Betty Hutton's miracle in "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" was described as "terrific."

J. Maxwell Joice, Paramount district advertising representative, also obtained considerable advance publicity for the picture by sending a card with two hard-to-get buttons to newspaper film editors and radio commentators. The card read: "You'll laugh so hard at 'The Miracle of Morgan's Creek' the buttons may pop off your vest. So here are a couple of genuine bone pre-war 'spares'."

YOUR TICKET TO A BIG GROSS 'OSCAR' CAMPAIGN

A Warner Bros. Picture

Produced by
HAL B. WALLIS

Directed by
MICHAEL CURTIZ

Starring
HUMPHREY BOGART

THE choice of "Casablanca" as the Academy Award Winner for 1943 provides a tailor-made campaign slant for the new Humphrey Bogart vehicle, since four of the stars of the winning picture play major roles in "Passage to Marseille." While it is basically an action picture and normally should be sold on that premise, the Award slant heightens the possibility of a topical "class" campaign.

The advertising art which is available on this film has exceptional quality, supporting the class approach, while at the same time getting across the action elements for broad appeal.

ADVERTISING COPY

At the right are illustrations of two suggested ad roughs which can be prepared with stock type faces, press book mats and mats from the local newspaper's mat service file. The cut of the rug, mortised for the title is a common one in your newspaper's home-furnishing file. The copy in these layouts is basic, provides for many similar approaches which can be developed. If you are in an action spot we would not suggest the use of this approach. The plot of the story suggests scare-head ads on the Escape, Mutiny, Powerful Action Drama theme. Read the synopsis of the story when you start to plan this latter type of campaign.

SPECIAL HERALD

The old and oft used ticket flyer will tie up quite naturally with this title and can be printed locally. Ticket could be divided into sections labeled: "Passage to Marseille via New Caledonia," with appropriate sales copy describing a journey of high adventure. Repeat the title as the heading for each section covering Panama, Devil's Island, Marseille (at which port the characters in the story never arrive), England, and as a patriotic tag coupon you could use a War Bond Slogan with the copy, NEXT PORT Somewhere in Europe?, Destination . . . Berlin, Germany! If you want the action to the fore you will be able to get good stills to point up appropriate copy for each phase of the journey.

CONTEST

The title suggests to the average person a point for Allied landing on the Continent in the near future. Why not set up a guessing contest as to where the first landing in force will be made for attack on Hitler's "Fortress Europe," excluding the Italian Peninsula? Tie up with a bank and promote a safety deposit box in which the guesses will be sealed with the opening of the box and judging of the entries to take place five or ten days after the invasion takes place. Promote numerous prizes in the form of War Bonds from local merchants and have a newspaper or radio station sponsor the activity. You can build this into a big city-wide stunt with the mayor witnessing the sealing of the entries. Co-op ads of cooperating merchants could build interest and capitalize on the widespread conjecture which has every American guessing.

WINDOW DISPLAYS

You can use stills on this film to good advantage in patriotic War Activities window displays, along with machine guns, war equipment and nautical accessories in particular. A display of different type shells with each labeled "This Ticket Good for One Passage to Marseille . . . and Berlin or Tokyo!" will net attention and get the title across. For a class display in good windows you might have gilded cutout figures of the Academy Award statuette with an attractive scroll presenting the association copy suggested in the layouts shown at right. Use stills to dress the display mounted in attractive mats with a classic column and velvet drape as background atmosphere. A fashion still of Bogart or Michele Morgan can provide the opening wedge for other window tieups.

Music stores will have the song sheets on "Someday I'll Meet You Again" which is the hit song of the picture. This will provide an "in" for music window displays.

LOBBY DISPLAY

The map idea suggested in the press book will undoubtedly make the most impressive and attention-commanding lobby piece. All you need is a war map from a local gas station for the central portion of the display. Use appropriate stills and run red, white and blue ribbons to the various ports of call on the map associated with the story. A display of French flags will dress the lobby and attract attention providing a continental flavor.

Another type of lobby display which will help put this picture across consists of a series of enlargements or poster art portraits of the seven principal characters as they appear. These star heads could be coupled with introductory copy such as: "Meet . . . Matrac The Devoted" etc. with the star's name and picture title on each. Mount or frame the heads on "A" boards and line them up as a series on one side of the lobby or foyer so that patrons have an opportunity to meet the cast of the picture as they enter the theatre. This treatment will build interest with smashing effect.

TEASER CAMPAIGN

The press book supplies a series of four excellent teaser ad mats which build up the roles portrayed by each of the principal stars. The only drawback may be the size in which they are furnished, one column X three inches, which may make them prohibitive where lineage rates are high. If you like the general copy slant, want to use less space or cover more of the important characters of the cast, there is a series of smaller thumbnail heads in Mat No. 304 which can be adapted to illustrate a series of one inch teasers to very good advantage.

The ADVERTISING CLINIC by Old Doc Layout

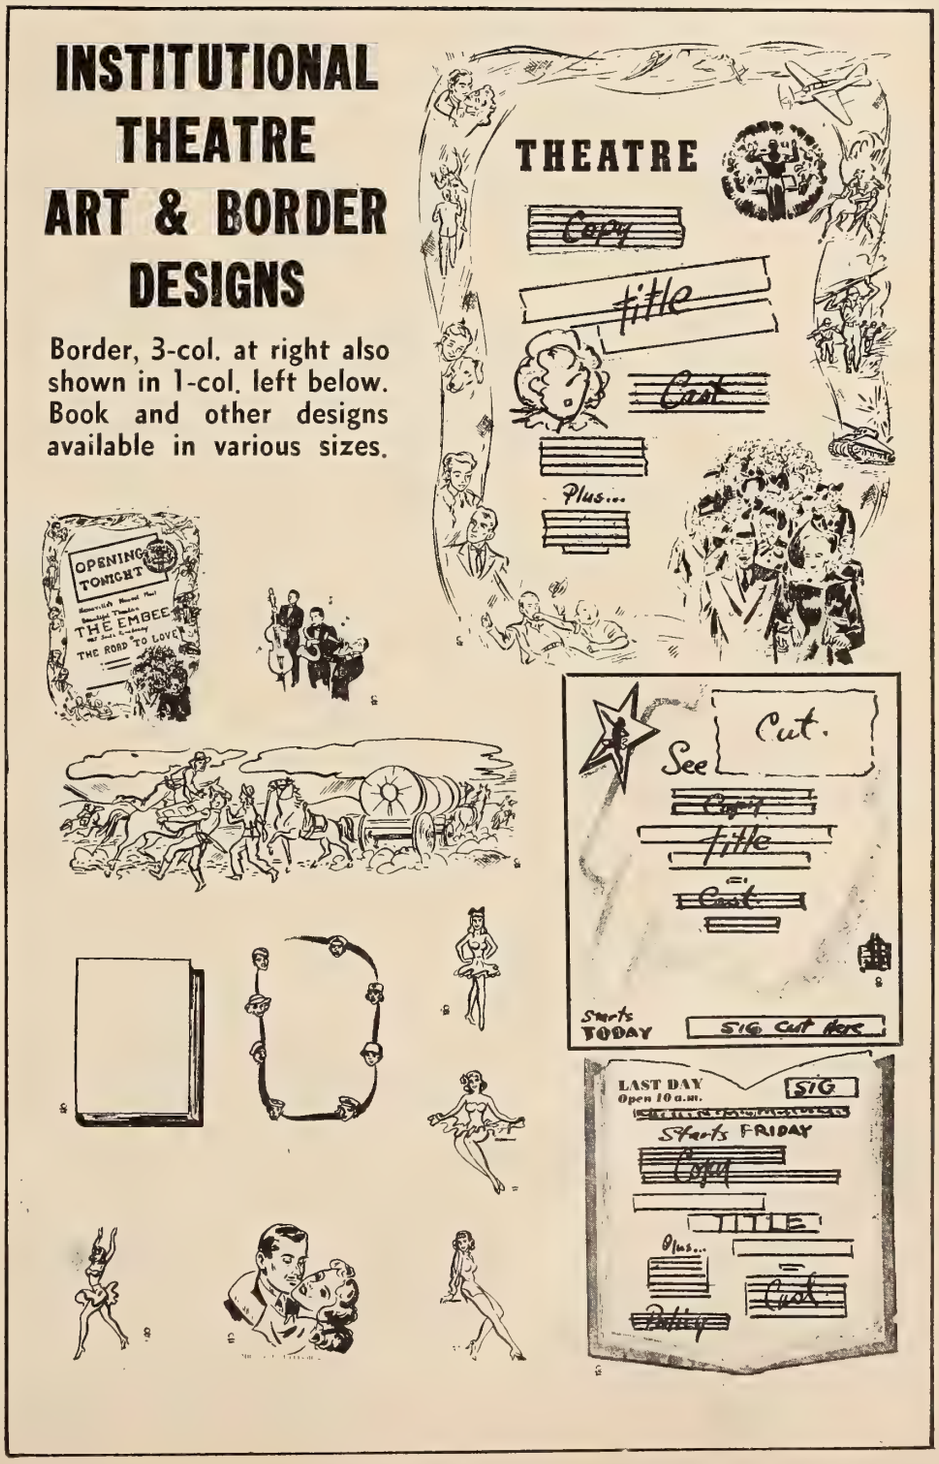
Your Newspaper Can Supply Art for Displays

Cooperation of STR and Meyer Both Company Provides Needed Aid for the Theatre Advertising Man

So frequent, and numerous, have been requests from theatremen for mats following publication of each of the Advertising Clinic features in this department, that Showmen's Trade Review, with the cooperation of Meyer Both Company, has done something about it. As a result of this cooperation, the advertising art illustrated on this page and in similar subsequent features, will be made available to newspapers which may not, at the present time, have the particuar mats for the creation of show-selling newspaper advertisements.

Inexpensive Display Art

Meyer Both Company services newspapers, large and small, throughout the country with mats for the illustration of all types of advertisements. Theatremen frequently make use of this material in designing advertisements, but the full resources of the mat material has not, by any means, been as extensively used by theatres as the needs require. At this time there is difficulty in obtaining engraving work, and the mat has been recommended by government and publication officials as a method for conserving critical metals. Moreover, the ready-made art that mats furnish speeds up the work in getting a display into print and reduces costs to a point that the theatre can afford to pay.



Wide Variety of Designs

We believe the illustrations on this page clearly indicate the purposes that can be served by having the local newspaper supply the pictorial matter, such as decorative borders, for an eye-catching advertisement of either large or small size. The material illustrated may be had in one-column or two-column size, is flexible and the average newspaper print shop can make castings from the mats and eliminate any portions of the border or design that might not be desired for the particular layout—simply by cutting away the portions or sections of the casting on a jig saw such as is found in any print shop.

The amount of material which is adaptable to theatre advertising is far greater than is indicated by the limited number of examples shown on this page—but the illustrations suffice, we believe, to indicate the practicability of using such stock mats for special advertisements. The book designs, for example, can be used with any picture based on a novel of such popularity and reputation that this "book-lover" appeal has definite selling value. Similarly, the illustration showing a western scene could be used in toto, or, if only a small decoration is required, that section of it at the left—showing three human figures—might be cut away and placed as an "atmosphere" spot in a newspaper ad for an "added" western feature.

We have reproduced (through reduction of about one-half actual size) the first page to be sent out as part of the Meyer Both, March 1944 Service, and the art illustrations range from a three column institutional border (see largest ad), to the small dancing figures. This first grouping is sufficiently diversified to provide practical material for ads on almost any type picture or added attraction. Your local newspaper subscribing to the M. B. Service has actual size proof pages from which you can clip the designs in order to paste-up and write your ads. If your local paper does not subscribe to Meyer Both Service, the mats illustrated here can be obtained from Meyer Both. Your local paper in so doing will not be obligated to subscribe to the entire service and the only cost will be the twenty-five cent charge plus postage.

Look for these mats at your local newspaper. Publishers make no charge as a rule for this service so that you will have a new and growing source of special ad-art material at your command and in most cases, for free.

Mats for these illustrations are available at your local newspaper if the latter subscribes to the Meyer Both Newspaper Service. If this service is not placed in your city have your newspaper request the mats for you. As a special service to help you advertise more effectively through your local newspaper, under the cooperative plan with STR, Meyer Both will make the mats available to any non-subscribing newspaper without charge except 25 cents, plus postage. Requests must be made direct by the newspaper to Meyer Both Co., 20th & Michigan, Chicago 16, Illinois.

Program Exchange

Informing Patrons of Coming Pictures Well in Advance; Raisler's Program Inserts

We wish we were a meteorologist or whatever they call the guy who works with a lot of graphs, charts and instruments to find out which way the wind will blow tomorrow and whether it will be cool or hot. Were that occupation in our line of endeavors, we could provide a worthwhile service to our readers. As an introduction to each edition of the Program Exchange, we could predict the weather. For example, we might say: "Don't bank on a big opening-day's business tomorrow. It will snow, with snow turning to rain and sleet." And then again we might offer this prediction: "It's okay to use a street ballyhoo tomorrow. The sky will be clear, the air cool." But since we have no means of foretelling future weather conditions, all we can say now is that a snowy, cloudy and blustery yesterday has given way to a bright, sunlit, cloudless, cool today. And from where we're sitting, we can't see a speck of snow.

Quotes From a Review

What we thought might be a birthday card (because our birthday was near, and the envelope was of greeting card size) turned out to be sample copies of the new March program for the Utopia Theatre, Flushing, N. Y., managed by Paul Raisler. But we were not disappointed, for it's a pleasure to look over Raisler's monthly guide. Inserted in each program was a small slipsheet quoting a Cue review on "The Biscuit Eater." Underscored was the line, "Don't miss it on any account." Copy also included theatre and playdate. These small slipsheets were probably prepared at minimum expense, and since space in the program permitted little more than the title and featured player, Raisler had a good reason for his action. We're inclined to think that the slipsheets were worth their little extra expense. Raisler knows his seasons, too, or perhaps we should say his months, for March is usually a windy and breezy month. So, in keeping with this idea, he has had his artist design a cover with this copy: "March —an excellent programme of Breezy Hits at your Utopia Theatre." The words, "March" and "breezy," as designed by the artist, suggest breeziness, as though a strong gust of wind was beating unmercifully at each letter. Good layout and good lettering.

In the program for the Midway Theatre, Davison, Mich., operated by Harry Hobolth and managed by Miss Pat Alexander, a blank page is utilized to let patrons know that Hobolth "just completed contracts on 'Thank Your Lucky Stars,' 'Desert Song,' 'Northern Pursuit,' 'Old Acquaintance,' 'This Is the Army,' 'Frisco Kid,' 'Passage to Marseille,' 'Jack London,' 'Three Russian Girls'." Which reminds us:

A Time of Rejoicing

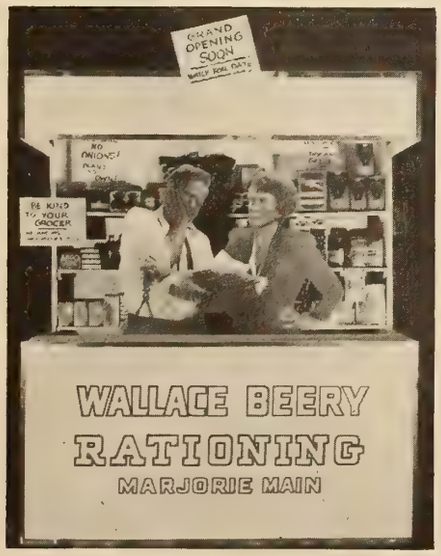
During the years we were around a small-town theatre "contract time" was a time of rejoicing. With contracts for the new season's product signed and approved, we were naturally elated over the fine pictures we had bought. We were eager for our patrons to know what was in store for them. So we held a conference and mapped out a full-page ad listing the really big pictures covered by the deals. And that special ad caused much comment and brought many inquiries as to when we would show this or that picture.

Our theatre didn't use programs in those days, hence the newspaper display ad. But where programs are used nowadays, it seems to us that some space could occasionally be devoted to listing attractions which have been contracted for, just as Miss Alexander has done for the Midway.

Stars of Coming Attractions

On the other hand, star values could be played up by featuring several photos of stars, together with the names of the pictures in which they will appear. This could be done, for instance, in tabloid or news-style programs. In other types of programs, brief selling paragraphs on coming attractions could be used as fillers. But regardless of the manner in which you handle the matter, keep plugging the attractions patrons will see at your theatre. (There may be, of course, certain clearance regulations which prevent you from advertising coming attractions until they have played an earlier-run theatre in your territory. But if you are bound by no restrictions, then go the limit in keeping forthcoming films before your public's eye.)

Personal Message From You



Another angle on this same topic is a personal message from you—the manager. When you see what a big line-up of hits you have on the way, surely your enthusiasm can be directed to your patrons through a me-to-you letter, either used as an ad in the newspaper or as a part of your program, or brought to the public's attention in both program and newspaper.

In a space approximately two and one-half inches wide and one and one-half inches deep there is space for an illustration of two lovers, another illustration of three service men, a listing of at least 36 stage, radio and screen stars, the copy "48 Stars and a Great Love Story," also "6 great bands," and the title of the picture "Stage Door Canteen." All this, and a border too, in the small space allotted for announcing "Stage Door Canteen" in the program for the DeLuxe Theatre, Imlay City, Michigan. And a person with average eyesight can read every bit of it.

Wonder what's happened to Orris F. Collins' Cinemag? Haven't received a copy in a long time. Several other fine programs we'd like to receive. How about yours? Put us on your mailing list now.

The red light has flashed, so we must conclude this discourse. We'll see you here again next week.

P.S. In New York from Canada this week was Sydney Goldstone, manager of the Centre Theatre, Peterborough, Ontario. Although Goldstone issues no programs, he said he liked to read our "interesting columns." Since he has put over some good publicity stunts, we hope he will forward some of them to us after he returns to Peterborough.

Promoting real groceries, Manager Bill Aiken of Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga., created this advance lobby display on MGM's "Rationing." The cut-out figures of Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main were blown up from a still. Showmen should duplicate this eye-catching display executed by theatre artist, Sid Smith.

Boy Who Lost Dog Wins Pup in Contest

Showman Lige Brien, in his new capacity as manager of the Enright Theatre, Pittsburgh, has forwarded details of one of his first selling campaigns at that Warner house. The picture involved was "Lassie Come Home," and while it has played in a great many situations by this time, some of Brien's stunts are worthy for their duplicative possibilities on the recently-announced forthcoming "Son of Lassie" or on other films in which a canine plays a prominent part.

The Enright theatreman began his campaign two weeks in advance with radio plugs via station WWSW. Announcements went out over the air direct from the theatre stage.

Three attention-getting lobby displays, one involving a tieup with Friskie Dog Foods, were used.

Human-Interest Angle Publicized

A collie pup was given away at one of Brien's regular kiddie shows. By a coincidence, the pup was won by a youngster who was still mourning the death of his own dog, and this human-interest angle received newspaper publicity.

Several window displays, involving Friskie Dog Foods tieup, were promoted. Two thousand book marks were distributed to local high schools and to students in nearby Wilkinsburg. Book covers were also distributed. Twenty-five attractive standees were promoted from the publishers for window displays. Ads were run in five newspapers.

This 15-foot lobby display on 20th Century-Fox's "The Gang's All Here" was used by Manager J. G. Samartano of the Loew-Poli Palace, Meriden, Conn., for the film's New Year's Eve show and regular engagement. Copy on notes at top of display had only to be blacked out to make the setpiece suitable for regular use.

DENVER

The headquarters office force of Fox Intermountain Theatres gave Rick Ricketson, president and general manager, a royal welcome when he returned home from his bond drive activities. Huge bouquets of flowers adorned the offices, while appropriate window cards were all over the place. Robert Selig, who is chairman of the "Honored Hundred" contest, returned at the same time, but goes back to New York soon to judge the entries in the contest. Selig is a district manager for Fox Intermountain Theatres.

Ned Depinet and Harry Brandt were in Denver for a day in the interest of the Red Cross membership drive, and with Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., as toastmaster, addressed a luncheon meeting of theatre and exchange men. They urged theatre men to put stress on theatre collections, and to use freely an advertising trailer that is available. Among theatre men attending were Robert J. Garland, acting head of the Colorado War Activities Committee; Harry Huffman, Denver Red Cross publicity director for theatres, and Len Gruenberg, state distributor chairman for the drive.

Tom Bailey, recently salesman for RKO in San Francisco, moves to Denver as exchange manager, replacing Al Kolitz, who will be placed in another spot.

Larry Starsmore, manager for Westland Theatres, has passed his physical and is on his 21-day furlough.

James T. O'Neill, Sr., owner of the Vita, Spearfish, S. D., was in Denver visiting his son, James, Jr., who expects to join the Army soon.

Ralph Batschelet, manager of the Bluebird, has been re-elected president of the East Denver board of trade.

F. A. Bateman, Republic district manager, spent a day here conferring with Gene Gerbase. Jimmy Ecker, former Republic salesman, has left for the West Coast to enter the Merchant Marine.

S. L. Guy is reopening the Hotchkiss, Hotchkiss, S. D.; O. K. Leonard is opening the Central, Central, N. M.; and Arnold Benson is reopening the Pecos at Pecos, N. M.

Ray Davis, formerly a district manager for Fox Intermountain Theatres, was here on furlough from the Merchant Marine. He went to St. Louis to enter further training for a month, after which he will receive an assignment.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen on the Row included: Mrs. Lee Mote, Riverton, Wyo.; George McCormack, Canon City, Colo.; George Lesher, Springfield, Colo.; Herbert Gumper, San Luis, Colo., and L. F. Flower, Bayard, Neb., and two of his managers, one his son, Charles Flower, and Leonard Beckman.

Novel Screen Plug

A new wrinkle in advance trailer announcements is now being employed by the New York Paramount for the forthcoming engagement of "Going My Way." As an introduction, Organist Don Baker plays several hit tunes made famous by Bing Crosby, while the audience vocalizes the words flashed on the screen. Following the last number, Adelaide Hawley, well-known women's commentator, extols the high entertainment values of "Going My Way" while Organist Baker plays soft background music and an appropriate decorative slide is projected on the screen. (Miss Hawley's voice was recorded on film.) Then comes the trailer, especially prepared by the theatre's advertising department. No scenes from the picture are included.

Lions' National Campaign Aid to 'None Shall Escape' Playdates

In connection with "None Shall Escape," Columbia exploiteers arranged for a speech before the Lions (Host) Club of New York by General Marcel de Baer, chairman of the Inter-Allied Commission for the Punishment of War Criminals, in which the prophetic picture received specific and honorable mention.

Led by the New York club, Lions Clubs are staging a national campaign to spotlight the problem of post-bellum Axis war-criminal trials and to get it Congressional attention. Highlight in the campaign—embracing nation-wide newspaper, radio and organizational contacts—will be the use of the 15-minute radio transcription of General de Baer's speech.

Exhibitors are being urged by Columbia to extend full cooperation to the Lions in their campaign.

Special Promotion On 'Follow the Boys'

With the announcement this week that Universal is heralding "Follow the Boys" as show business' tribute to show business, plans for the united cooperation of all elements of the theatre in connection with the promotion of the picture, reached the point of conclusion.

"Follow the Boys," produced for Universal by Charles K. Feldman, not only tells the story of the Victory Committees' activity in furnishing entertainment for the members of the Armed Forces, but also presents a nostalgic cavalcade of Broadway.

According to an announcement made by the home office advertising department, Universal has allotted the largest budget in ths history of the company for the promotion of the production. Two special events have already been programmed. Highlighting the New York activity will be a special trade showing on March 15th at the Normandie Theatre and a special preview at midnight, March 27th at the Palace Theatre for all branches of show business. Details for this event will be announced next week.

In general, advertising plans for "Follow the Boys," include a special coast-to-coast radio program jointly sponsored by Universal and representatives of various theatrical organizations. The home office advertising department has also indicated that radio will be used extensively immediately in advance of the picture playdates in important key cities, in addition to the increased newspaper lineage anticipated.

Plans have also been formulated through the Universal field force for key city cooperation with various entertainment groups to promote premiere openings in their respective territories.

Short Subject Reviews

To Heir Is Human (Poor)

Columbia (5431) All Star Comedy 16 mins.

Una Merkel, a capable comedienne, is teamed with Harry Langdon but the result is far from what an audience would hope for. Instead of a bang-up comedy, the short proves very low-brow entertainment. Miss Merkel, in a case of mistaken identity, gets hired to find a missing heir in the person of Harry Langdon, window washer very ordinary. Of course, Miss Merkel, after a reel of slapstick and hokum not only locates the rightful heir but saves his fortune from a gang of crooks who are trying to kill Langdon so that they can control the estate. We just can't hand this one much as entertainment for average audiences. The cast includes Christina McIntyre, Eddie Gribbon and Lew Kelly. Produced by Hugh McCollum and directed by Harold Godsoe from a story and screenplay by Elwood Ullman and Monty Collins.

Strange Innertube (Hilarious)

MGM (W-456) Technicolor Cartoon 8 mins.

Mr. Donkey tries to be a patriotic citizen in the scrap rubber drive and in an effort to at least equal or top his neighbors' contribution he goes digging in the yard for scrap. With the stretch of the animator's imagination unlimited by priorities an old innertube plays havoc with the donkey's aplomb and in a manner makes a sure bet for a blow-out of solid laughter by any audience. For a while the innertube has the donkey making an ass of himself but in the end the donkey tops his neighbors by a pile.

Mrs. Lowell Thomas' Fur Farm (Average)

Universal (8375) Person-Oddities 9 mins.

Mrs. Lowell Thomas, wife of the radio news commentator, is shown raising fox and mink on a commercial scale at Pawling, N. Y. Charles Goelz of Sonora, Calif., makes grandfather clocks with all wooden mechanisms as a hobby. A drug store for poultry at Petaluma, Calif., is perhaps one of the most unusual stores in America. Teachers who learn their profession with borrowed students are shown in a unique school in Shepardtown, W. Va., and Alfred Marx, a successful business man of Houston, Texas, plays at the role of circus clown for unfortunate kiddies as a praiseworthy hobby. A good variety reel comprised of interesting subjects which rates about average for the series.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

Come on you Edward G. Robinson fans, we're going to Columbia today to see him on the "Mr. Winkle Goes to Town" set. Tis is the picture in which Robinson is put through all the real, honest-to-goodness training of boot camp, the same as your boy and mine.

As we enter the set, we hear voices singing Sweet Genevieve long before we get a peek at what the scene is all about. So we go forward on tiptoe in order not to disturb the action.

At a lull in the proceedings, we move up to the front line and there find ourselves in a beer joint. Over in one of the booths we see Robinson, Robert Armstrong, Richard Lane and Bob Haymes. They're all in uniform and celebrating Robinson's first furlough, with beer and popcorn. As a man of forty-four, Robinson is being complimented on the way he's taken all the punishment meted out in the training of a soldier, standing up under it with the youngest and best of them, refusing to take advantage of the release offered men over thirty-eight.

The camera, with Director Alfred E. Green seated under it, is up close so that just the four men are within its range. This is the second day they've been rehearsing this scene, so that by this time they're letter-perfect . . . and strangely enough show no sign of wear and tear.

With each rehearsal they take a sip of beer from the glass in front of them and between rehearsals, the glasses on the table are refilled by a prop man, so that when Armstrong pours the beer into the glasses, just before they make a toast, it isn't flat. They've evidently learned how to manage the stuff, for it hasn't affected any of them.

Director Green has rehearsed the scene so often because there are many details to iron out. There's the dialogue, the timing . . . and especially the singing. When the scene finally clicks the way he wants it, he okays the "take."

This releases the players for lunch, so we go over to meet Mr. Robinson. Our visit with him brings up the subject of what the boys go through in boot camp and how tough it is, for he had to crawl under barbed wire, go out on bivouac, learn to handle a bulldozer and do many other hazardous things, for his role in the picture.

We also discuss our favorite radio actor, Elliott Lewis, now in uniform; and how the stars used to ask for him to play opposite them. Then Robinson bids us adieu, and we leave.

Until next week.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Wellman to Direct Beery Film for MGM; James Cain Novel Purchased by Warners; Massey Cast in 'Once Off Guard'

Kay Linaker, who appeared as Ginger Rogers' mother in "Lady in the Dark," and Jimmy Conlin, a member of Preston Sturges' "stock company," have been signed by Paramount for the Technicolor musical, "Bring on the Girls," which stars Veronica Lake, Eddie Bracken, Sonny Tufts and Marjorie Reynolds. Sidney Lanfield is directing.

William A. Wellman is set to direct MGM's forthcoming "Airship Squadron No. 4," starring Wallace Beery. The picture marks Wellman's return to the MGM lot after an absence of seven years. Sam Marx is producing the film, which gets under way as soon as Beery completes his stint in "Gold Town."

Richard Lane has been signed by Monogram to play an important role in "A Wave, a Wac, a Marine," which will be produced by Biltmore, headed by Edward Sherman and Sebastian Cristillo, father of the comedian, Lou Costello. Lane will appear opposite Sally Eilers in a cast that includes Elyse Knox and Ann Gillis. Phil Karlstein is directing.

Mabel Paige, who last appeared in "True to Life" as Victor Moore's wife, has been cast as an aged defense worker in Paramount's musical film, "Girls' Town." The picture co-stars Fred MacMurray and Veronica Lake. George Marshall will direct.

The cast of "Tucson Raiders," first of Republic's Red Ryder series starring Bill Elliott, has been completed. Gabby Hayes has the chief character lead, ranking equally with Peggy Stoddard who plays opposite Elliott. Others include Bobby Blake, as Little Beaver, Alice Fleming, LeRoy Mason, Joe Whitman, Ruth Lee, Ed Cassidy, Bud Geary, Ed Howard and Carl Hackett. Spencer Bennett is directing.

Edward Dmytryk, who recently directed Ginger Rogers in "Tender Comrade," has been assigned by RKO to direct "Farewell My Lovely," to be produced by Adrian Scott under the supervision of Sid Rogell. John Paxton is now writing the screenplay which is based on a murder mystery novel by Raymond Chandler.

Raymond Massey, currently appearing in a New York stage play, has been signed by International Pictures for a leading role in "Once Off Guard," mystery screenplay written and to be produced by Nunnally Johnson. Edward G. Robinson and Merle Oberon are co-starred in the picture. Massey leaves New York for Hollywood March 27th.

Monogram has added scenes to the King Brothers production, "Johnny Doesn't Live Here Anymore." Simone Simon, James Ellison, William Terry and entire cast of principals were called back to the cameras to complete the new sequence under direction of Joe May.

Danny Dare, Paramount dance director, is rehearsing two dozen film chorines for the spectacular song and dance number which Marjorie Reynolds and Billy Daniels will do in the Technicolor musical, "Bring on the Girls." Miss Reynolds and Daniels have been working on their dance for three weeks and now have the routine perfected.

Ary Barroso, the Irving Berlin of South America and composer of the song hit, Brazil, is in Hollywood. Barroso is here to write the musical score for Republic's film musical, "Brazil."

Gertrude Purcell has been signed by Associate Producer Felix Feist to write the final screenplay of Universal's "Make Way for Love," which will star Gloria Jean. This will be Feist's initial task since being raised to the status of producer.

Jack L. Warner, executive producer, announced the purchase of "Mildred Pierce," popular novel by James M. Cain. The production has been assigned to Jerry Wald.

Saul Bernie, brother of the late Ben Bernie, has joined PRC as casting director, relieving Martin Mooney of the chore. Mooney is associate producer and supervisor of advertising and publicity.

Leslie Goodwins has been signed by Associate Producer Frank Gross to direct the Universal "chiller," "Murder in the Blue Room." The production was set to start March 9th. Grace McDonald is set in the feminine lead.

Vanguard Films, Inc., announce through their president, Daniel T. O'Shea, the purchase from Paramount of an original screen story titled "Houdini," by Dore Schary and Frank O'Connor.

Roy Rowland, who directed "Lost Angel" starring Margaret O'Brien, has been assigned to direct the forthcoming MGM film, "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." The picture will co-star Miss O'Brien and Jackie Jenkins, who sprung into the limelight overnight in "The Human Comedy."

A distinguished group of the Catholic clergy of Los Angeles and New York attended a special screening of Leo McCarey's Paramount production, "Going My Way," which stars Bing Crosby and Rise Stevens. Among those present as guests of McCarey and Miss Stevens were Archbishop John T. Cantwell, Bishop Joseph T. McGucken, Monsignor Timothy Manning, Father John Devlin, Father Thomas McCarthy, Bishop James E. Walsh and Father Francis J. Caffery.

Frank Strayer has been signed by RKO to a term deal as producer and director. As his first assignment, he will produce "The Girl Rush," which will be under the supervision of Sid Rogell, with Gordon Douglas directing.

"Song of the Hills," a Universal musical has been assigned to Associate Producer Warren Wilson. Clyde Bruckman is working on the story. Production has been tentatively scheduled for late this month.

Columbia has lined up a second unit crew which will film San Francisco landmarks as

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO ROUND-UP

Only one new feature went into production last week during this period of the traditional slack period in Hollywood, setting a new record—during the corresponding week last year three pictures were started. The details:

RKO RADIO

NONE BUT THE LONELY HEART—Principals: Cary Grant, Ethel Barrymore, Joseph Vitale. Director, Clifford Odets.

TITLE CHANGES

"Curly" (Col.) now ONCE UPON A TIME.
"Mr. Co-Ed" (MGM) now BATHING BEAUTY.
"One More Tomorrow" (WB) now ANIMAL KINGDOM.

Stromberg Signs Andre De Toth

Andre De Toth, director of "None Shall Escape," has been signed by Hunt Stromberg for his organization. Under long term contract, De Toth begins with the direction of "Dishonored Lady," which will be co-produced by William Pereira for Stromberg for United Artists release. Before that, Stromberg starts "Guest in the House," starring Anne Baxter, with Lewis Milestone directing and Lee Garmes at the camera.

To Film Blue Book Story

Armand Schaefer, executive-producer at Republic, has announced that "Secrets of Scotland Yard," adapted from the Blue Book story, "Room 40—O.B.," will go before the cameras March 20th. At the same time Denison Clift, the author, informed the studio that the Blue Book story will be published as a novel soon by Hillman-Curl Publishing Company of New York.

Plan 'Life of Remington'

Plans to film "The Life of Frederic Remington" have been announced by Producers Corporation of America. It is likely, although not definite, that Joel McCrea will portray the artist of western subjects in the picture, which is to be made in color.

Laughton Set for Mystery Film

Charles Laughton has been signed by Universal to star in a mystery drama, "The Suspect," which is an adaptation of James Ronald's novel, "This Way Out." This will also serve as the initial production for Associate Producer Islin Auster, who recently signed a Universal term deal. No production date has been set.

William Bendix as First Mate

William Bendix will return to Paramount to portray the tough first mate in "Two Years Before the Mast." Alan Ladd will play the star romantic role in the picture and Brian Donlevy will be the martinet skipper. The picture will be produced by Seton I. Miller, and is scheduled for April 1st.

Fanny Brice will play Baby Snooks in MGM's forthcoming "Ziegfeld's Follies."

What Are Your Needs?
Joe Hornstein Has It

Ford Beebe, celebrating his 30th anniversary in the production end of motion pictures, was honored on the occasion at Universal studios a few days ago. Among those celebrating were Alan Curtis, Andy Devine, Frances Langford, Mr. Beebe, Lon Chaney, Jr., Jon Hall (above, l. to r.).

Grant Faces Strenuous Schedule For 'None But the Lonely Heart'

Facing one of the most strenuous filming schedules ever experienced by any star, Cary Grant will work before the cameras continuously on every one of the 66 days set for the shooting schedule on "None But The Lonely Heart," the Richard Llewellyn novel in which he stars at RKO.

Film schedules usually allow for days of inactivity during the course of production, but the script on this David Hempstead production, which was written by Clifford Odets and which he will also direct, calls for the appearance of Grant in one or more sequences every day. Ethel Barrymore makes her second talking film appearance, playing the part of Cary Grant's mother.

P.A. Tour for Frances Langford

Frances Langford, currently playing Army camps with the Bob Hope program, will make personal appearances at pre-release showings of the Jack Schwarz-PRC picture, "Dixie Show Boat," in which she is starred, in cities in which the radio show originates. Initial appearance is at Mobile, Alabama. She sings some of the songs from "Dixie Show Boat" during her stage appearances.

More Shorts to War Effort

Continuing its war effort program in the short subject field, the motion picture industry will contribute another 26 one-reel pictures and 26 newsreel bulletins together with seven or eight trailers on national campaigns, under a WAC-OWI schedule set up for the year beginning July 1.

Frank Buys 2 Original Stories

W. R. Frank, who produced "The Private Life of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels," has bought two original stories, "Union Depot" and "Crossroads of the World." Former is by Charles Manson, short story writer, and the latter is by Peter Muelson. The producer intends to make "Union Depot" first and follow with "Crossroads of the World."

Production Notes From Studios

background for "The Impatient Years," which Irving Cummings will direct and produce.

"To Have and Have Not," screen drama based on the story by Ernest Hemingway, got under way at Warners with Humphrey Bogart starring and Howard Hawks directing. A Martinique cafe, setting for the opening sequence, employed 225 atmosphere players.

IN HOLLYWOOD IT'S NEWS...

Says Ed Raiden

That . . . Eddie Rhine returned to his former spot in the RKO casting department after an absence of two years . . . Dale Evans has been signed again by Republic, and that's a gal to watch . . . Monogram's song hit, You Gotta Talk Me Into It Baby, from "Hot Rhythm," is fast becoming hot rhythm . . . Moe J. Siegel, former president of Republic and one of the studio's founders, has joined MGM as an executive . . . Richard Fantl will be film editor on "Mr. Winkle Goes to War" . . . Saul Oppenheim, for 15 years promotion manager of Scholastic Magazine, joined Warners' publicity staff . . . Patricia Harper wrote the screenplay on U's "Trigger Trail" (Pistol Packin' Mama?).

That . . . eight of the fourteen stages at RKO are monopolized by sets for the current Frank Sinatra filmusical . . . Arthur Lang music-directs "Belle of the Yukon" which stars Gypsy Rose Lee (soft music, maestro?) . . . Irving Pichel will direct "A Medal for Benny" . . . Sylvan Simon will direct "Son of Lassie" . . . Irwin Franklyn, PRC writer, joins the parade of changes over there to be an associate producer . . . "Brazos Bill Rides Again" with J. Benton Cheney pushing him around with a typewriter . . . Marcel Dalio, who has played many of the important French roles in the past year or so, will become one of the most important Frenchmen in history when he assays Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger of France" in "Wilson" . . . Loretta Young, signed by International, starts with "Home Is the Sailor" . . . (And husband, Colonel Tom Lewis, is in the Army) . . . Monogram bought "Victory Girls," which shows that when you prosper you can get most anything.

Val Lewton's "Mlle. Fifi" will be Simone Simon, and he'll permit Robert Wise to give the directions . . . "The Falcon in Hollywood" (it's about time) will be the tenth in the series . . . Heaven comes to Washington, D. C., should be the heading for Warners' announcement that Hotel Universe of "Horn Blows at Midnight" has been converted to Hotel Grayson, Washington, for "Doughgirls" . . . Quite a bit of dual personality for Will Cowan, who for years has been master of U's many musicals and now is making "Dead Man's Eyes" of the Inner Sanctum series . . . Seven reindeer arrived at Paramount to share the "Road to Utopia" with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and the Lamour gal, (maybe the reindeer are the horses on the road to Utopia) . . . Joseph Pasternak still wears the mantle of producing a picture with a girl's orchestra and gets to do it again with MGM's "Dear Barbara."

Lana Turner, Laraine Day Teamed

Lana Turner and Laraine Day, two of Hollywood's most talented stars, will be teamed in "The Wacs," MGM's picture about the women in Army uniform who are doing such a valuable job for their country. Screenplay for the picture is being rushed so that production can begin as soon as Lana Turner winds up "Marriage Is a Private Affair." Edward Buzzell will direct and George Haight will produce.

To Star in 'Roughly Speaking'

As the first picture on her new Warner contract Rosalind Russell will have the starring role in "Roughly Speaking," an adaptation of the best-selling autobiograph by Louise Randall Pierson. Henry Blanke will produce. Miss Russell's last appearance on the Warner lot was with James Stewart in "No Time for Comedy."

Wolfson to Write Screenplay

Making his debut as a screen writer, Victor Wolfson, Broadway playwright, has been engaged by Lester Cowan to write the screenplay for "Tomorrow the World" current New York and Chicago stage hit, which the producer will film for United Artists' release.

Goodman to Play Mozart Quintet

Benny Goodman will play classical music for the first time on the screen when he performs the Mozart Quintet for his current 20th Century-Fox starring film, "Sweet and Low-Down." The band leader will also play about a dozen numbers for the jive fans.

PILEBUCK (Col.) Drama. Principals: Pat O'Brien, Carole Landis, Chester Morris, Ruth Warrick, Wallace Ford, Tom Tully. Director, Eddie Sutherland. Plot: An ex-foreign correspondent, supposedly broken-down but really a special agent, starts work at a shipyard as a pilebuck, to uncover saboteurs. His brother is the shift boss of the pilebucks. The correspondent finds himself saddled with a lovely wife and two children as part of his special assignment. An old-time sweetheart, now going with his brother, complicates his budding affair with his "wife." He foils the saboteurs; his brother wins his ex-sweetheart and he leaves for Combat Intelligence after obtaining his "wife's" promise to wait.

PRACTICALLY YOURS (Para.) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Fred MacMurray, Claudette Colbert, Allyn Joslyn, Cecil Kellaway, Isabel Randolph, Rosemary DeCamp. Director, Mitchell Leisen. Plot: A returning hero finds himself saddled with an unexpected sweetheart and publicity provided by his former boss. He and the girl carry out the farce of being in love until they actually do fall for each other. A boy friend provides some amusing complications, while the hero's dog turns out to be he girl's rival. But it ends happily with the hero and the girl marrying before he returns to active duty in the Pacific.

IT HAPPENED TOMORROW (UA) Drama. Principals: Dick Powell, Linda Darnell, Jack Oakie, Edgar Kennedy, John Philliber, Edward Brophy. Director, Rene Clair. Plot: A young newspaperman finds himself with a copy of tomorrow's newspaper, and after reading the news becomes involved in the happenings yet to come. Because of this, he's arrested as an accessory to a robbery; he saves a young lady whom he's interested in from drowning and he learns about his own death. He finally gets everything straightened out . . . and wins the girl he saved from drowning.

FORTY THIEVES (UA) Western. Principals: William Boyd, Andy Clyde, Louise Currie. Director, Lesley Selander. Plot: Hoppy gets the wind taken out of his sails by the bad element who gang up on him for all the punishment they received because of his work. When the Governor of a state sends for him to help clean up the town, Hoppy falls into the hands of the gang waiting. They frame him and he suffers a terrific amount of punishment at their hands, before he is freed and things are straightened out.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR (Col.) Drama. Principals: Edward G. Robinson, Robert Armstrong, Ted Donaldson, Bob Haymes, Sam Flint. Director, Alfred E. Green. Plot: After being inducted into the Army at the age of forty-four, a bank clerk proves his mettle by taking it with the youngest rookies—and remaining after the law permitted the release of all men over thirty-eight. He'd had a disagreement with his wife before he left, but is reconciled with her after he gets an honorable discharge for being wounded in action.

OME..... and here, too, the Red Cross is the friend in need

"Confidence, courage, energy to be a good soldier, sailor, marine, or coast guardsman—these are possible only if the man in uniform can be relieved of anxiety for the welfare of his family. Because problems on the home front so vitally affect the progress of the war effort, Home Service is organized in every Red Cross Chapter to assist families of service men in meeting the social and economic problems which arise while the men are serving in the armed forces . . . In carrying out the responsibilities imposed by its Charter, every Chapter shares in the American Red Cross program of Services to the Armed Forces by providing Home Service for men in the military and naval forces and their families and for discharged men and their dependents."—American Red Cross

OME SERVICE

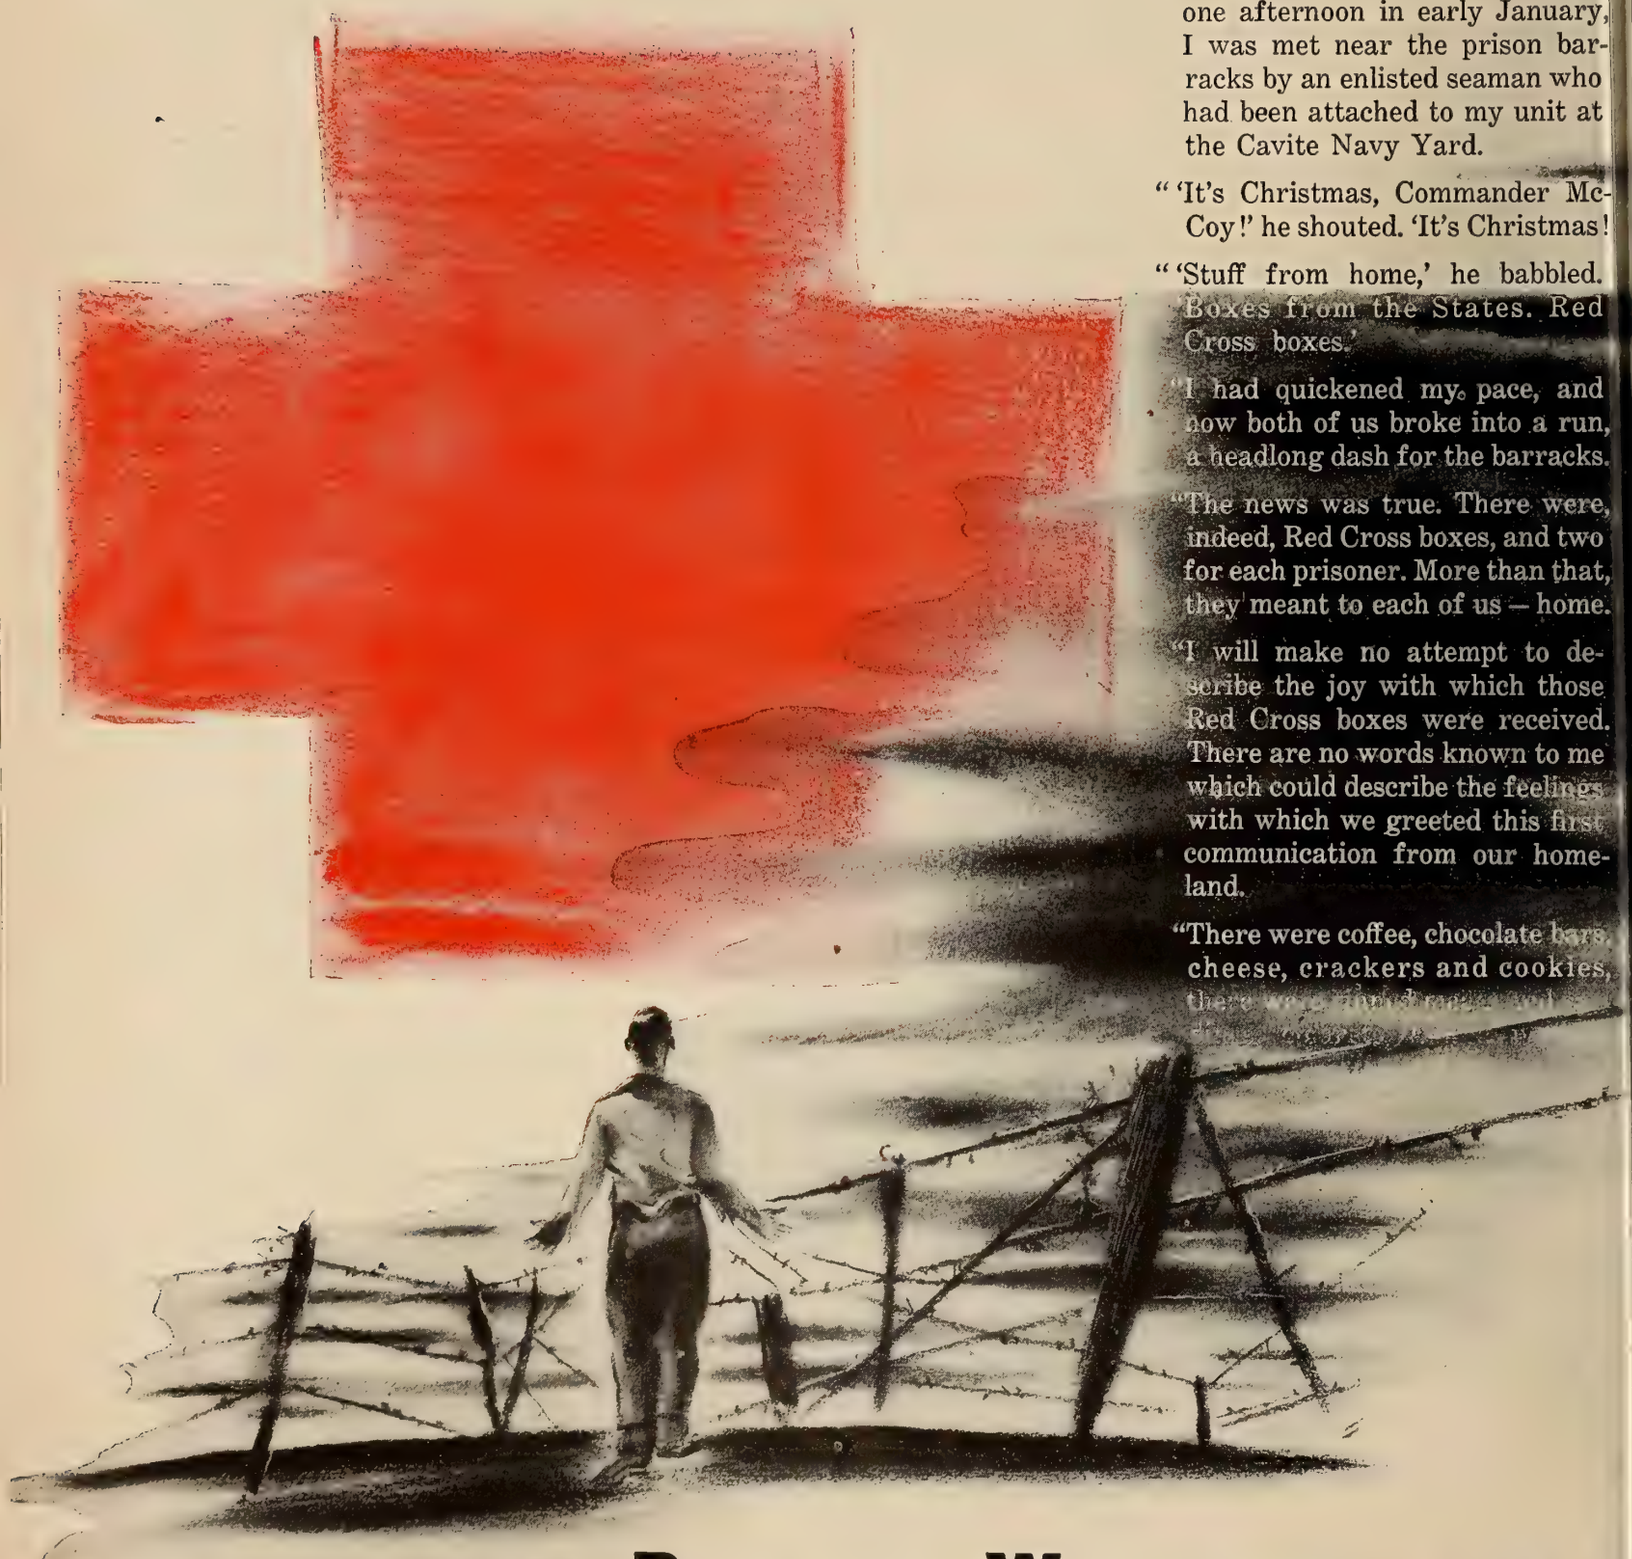
It happened in a Jap prison on Mindanao

From a verbatim report by Commander McCoy, U. S. N., an escaped Prisoner of War:

". . . The escape plan had not matured, when there occurred an event which brightened the lives of all the American prisoners, at least temporarily.

"As I was returning from work one afternoon in early January, I was met near the prison barracks by an enlisted seaman who had been attached to my unit at the Cavite Navy Yard.

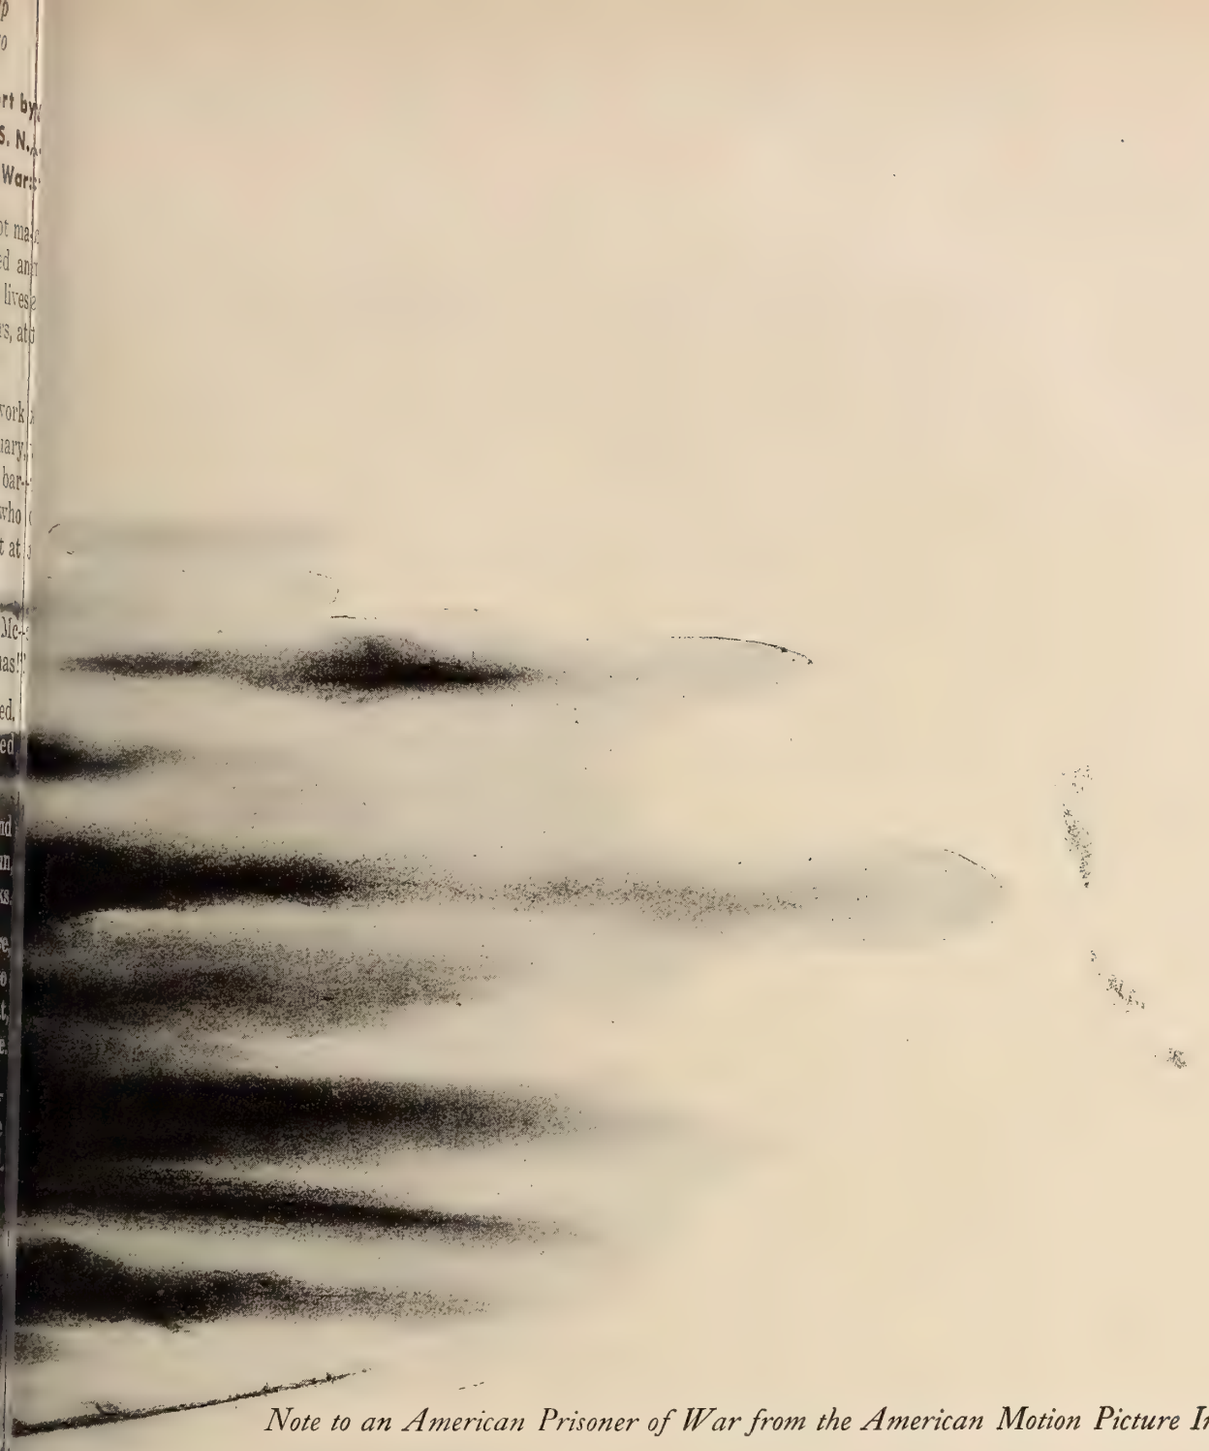
" 'It's Christmas, Commander McCoy!' he shouted. 'It's Christmas!



" 'Stuff from home,' he babbled. 'Boxes from the States. Red Cross boxes.'

"I had quickened my pace, and now both of us broke into a run, a headlong dash for the barracks.

"The news was true. There were, indeed, Red Cross boxes, and two for each prisoner. More than that, they meant to each of us — home.



"I will make no attempt to describe the joy with which those Red Cross boxes were received. There are no words known to me which could describe the feelings with which we greeted this first communication from our homeland.

"There were coffee, chocolate bars, cheese, crackers and cookies, there were [illegible]"

Red Cross "CLUBMOBILES" on the Fighting Fronts

"Clubmobiles" are one more of the vital services provided by the Red Cross for our fighting men. These motorized units, staffed by Red Cross personnel, are close to the front lines in all the combat areas that 85 such units can cover. To thwart the icy grip of Winter weather they bring hot coffee, in the steaming tropics cold drinks for parched throats. Cigarettes. They make doughnuts by the thousands. And what is even more God-sent—a cheery smile and a word of good fellowship from these Red Cross workers who live again the heritage of heroism and mercy of their glorious organization. Think what this means to battle-weary, hungry, thirsty, and frequently wounded fighting men.

There are but 85 of these Clubmobile units —hundreds are needed. That's another reason why this year's RED CROSS WAR FUND must receive the utmost in effort and results from every individual and theatre in the industry.

If every American could follow the Red Cross down the battle-lines of our beach-heads, our mountain trenches, and our jungle outposts, they would say: "God bless the Red Cross. They shall never appeal to me for support, in vain. They are not only a heaven-sent agency for the saving of lives; but they are one of our most powerful morale-sustaining forces as well. What, indeed, would we ever do without them?"

And if the Red Cross did nothing more than handle the avalanche of messages between service men and their families, this great American angel of mercy would still have first claim upon our affections, our patriotism, and our pocketbooks.

Requests for emergency communication service are pouring into Red Cross headquarters now, at the rate of 20,000 a month. But recently, that figure was swelled to 142,000 messages for a single day.

In Order To Give Our Fighting Men All They Need, Through The Red Cross, We Must Have the Aid of All Theatres In This Drive

IT IS an old military maxim that victory is won by the last reserves. In our campaign to reinforce the Red Cross those last reserves are the last few thousand theatres whose pledges to enlist with the rest of the industry are still to come.

It has been a thrilling experience for me as Chairman of the Industry's Committee for the Red Cross campaign to witness the spontaneous rush of thousands of individual showmen to sign up for the campaign. I doubt whether any other industry, undertaking a similar home front job for the war effort, could show such magnificent response in so short a time from people scattered all over the country. It is evidence of the instinctive patriotism and the prompt response to a call to duty which has been characteristic of our far-flung industry long before the actual beginning of the war.

Thousands of theatres already waiting for the zero hour equipped with trailers, posters, etc., will by themselves undoubtedly collect a sum exceeding that in previous drives. But to make the industry's contribution significant, to give the Red Cross, and, through the Red Cross, our fighting men everywhere what they need, we must have the theatres still marking time and remaining outside the industry's enrollment.

The great distributing organizations of the industry have sent their men out in these few remaining days to contact all exhibitors who have overlooked or neglected the Red Cross appeal and request their joining with the rest of us for this indispensable work.

In pledging cooperation to the industry's Red Cross Week—and following through with collections at every performance—the exhibitors of America are not only giving help to their own, but enhancing the importance of their theatres to the community and to the war effort.

I am confident, that when the collections begin throughout the country, very few will fail to answer the roll call.

Showmanalysis

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY RED CROSS WEEK MARCH 23-29

"THIS TOO—MR. SHOWMAN IS YOUR BABY!"

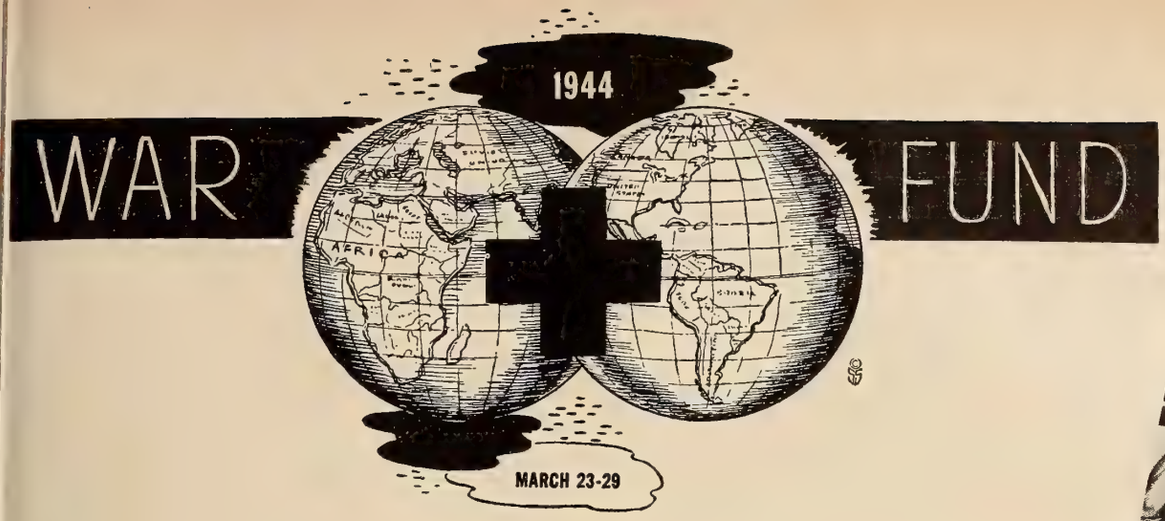
AN OPPORTUNITY TO SERVE WHICH CALLS FOR S. R. O. BUSINESS

There are two 'Grand Old Flags' flying together over every hamlet and city in a free America this month. One, men fight and die for . . . a symbol of liberty which they give their all to preserve. The other a symbol of mercy, of life-giving which calls for home front giving in order that those who fight are cared for, shown the heart of a grateful nation while they are far from home and friends. These two flags going into battle symbolize the power, the glory and mercy of a great people struggling for high ideals of peace and fraternity among men.

Just as the Motion Picture Industry has distinguished itself in a glowing record of past achievements whenever and wherever opportunity has presented itself, again the motion picture theatres of America gird for another great performance. The showmanship which has produced gratifying results in past patriotic, civic or charitable campaigns is now to be mustered for an all-out, one-week, whirlwind drive to raise funds for the support and sustenance of the Red Cross War Fund. In the only true tradition of showbusiness, this drive must be bigger, better and more exhaustive than any of its predecessors. There are definite things which every showman can do to stimulate, inspire and induce giving, generous giving, by the theatregoers of America. In the knowledge that the suggestions we submit can be done because they have been done, we present the ideas as reminders that you may be inspired to carry them through successfully in your situation in the interest of a most worthy cause and to the credit fo your industry.

Preparing the Ground

The spade work in this Red Cross campaign so far as concerns community build-up is already an accomplished fact in practically every locality. Flags fly on sidewalk poles, buildings and windows are displaying the appeal posters. Your first job is to let the people of your community know that there is going to be a campaign within a campaign which will be known as Motion Picture Theatres' Red Cross Week from March 23rd through 29th. Special accessories have been prepared to help you tell your people of the 'share' your theatre is seeking to raise to swell the national fund. Your spade work is to spotlight this special week through the utilization of every available publicity channel in a completely showmanlike way, to book screen attractions which will associate themselves with the appeal, to create an atmosphere of the spectacular with dignity, to get an opening that will pay off in the collection plates through the entire week. To the showmen of America falls the task of dramatizing the appeal and stimulating the generosity of the masses. Your theatre becomes the focal point in meeting the most important home front challenge for funds in the nation's wartime history.



Getting An Opening

The most effective way in which results can be obtained is to treat Red Cross Week in the same manner in which you would prepare a campaign on the biggest picture of the year. There are several angles worthy of consideration in this regard: (1) Blood Plasma Premieres; (2) "Angels of Mercy," a stage presentation utilizing local talent, Red Cross personnel, wounded service men to entertain and dramatize the war program of the Red Cross; (3) Civic Rally on the stage with local service men and wounded heroes to stir enthusiasm; (4) musical prologue preceding audience collections at each major performance using local amateur theatrical groups to present a dramatic sketch with choral background which will point up the work of the Red Cross and the need for funds. Any of these four suggestions will serve the dual purpose of drawing crowds to your theatre and stimulating their generosity. One thing is certain, you will receive the utmost cooperation from every local organization in staging either one of these events, and win the respect of your town folk for your effort and your theatre's part in a highly regarded activity.

The unique point about this activity is that to serve best the showman must first serve himself by packing his theatre with paying customers at each and every performance. Empty seats cannot contribute to the Red Cross collection plates. It's up to you!

Plasma Premiere

Since the collecting and handling of blood plasma is one of the outstanding activities undertaken in this war by the Red Cross you can serve doubly by staging a Blood Plasma Premiere during Red Cross Week and at the same time garner more ticket selling publicity for your attraction than any other campaign ever netted. Set aside the opening performance or a late preview with tickets to only those pledging blood plasma donations. Merchants will cooperate with generous displays on your picture and the promotion of the event in their ads, radio time, window displays. Newspapers will editorialize, publicize and cooperate to the limit. A mayor will gladly proclaim the event. Civic groups will help promote donors, publicize your premiere attractions and help the Red Cross in handling the event. The local representatives of the Armed Forces will supply personnel for addresses, equipment for displays and add color to the event. The crowds attending will give generously at the performance and the publicity acquired will bear fruit at the box-office and in the Red Cross collection boxes throughout the week. This is a showmanship natural. It has been done in numerous cities and towns with phenomenal success and is being done in others and will be done in still others. It's up to you!

Stage Presentation

Irving Berlin's popular song, "Angels of Mercy" can well supply the inspiration for a stage presentation which can be produced locally with amateur talent, a choir or chorus, Red Cross personnel and service men and women. The script for such a program could be written by a local person with a flair for dramatics and your Little Theatre director or head of the high school dramatic club could serve as producer in staging the show. A series of short sketches could be spotted through a musical program to supply GI comedy and drama which would be well received. One scene might take place in an overseas Red Cross Club, another during a blackout, another in a front line Red Cross dressing station under fire for dramatic effect. The finale could be an impromptu show behind the lines with the entertainers planted in the audience and called upon the stage to bring the audience into the spirit of the environment. For the setting of the finale a campfire scene could be simulated with tents and guns for background atmosphere. The elaborateness of this show of course will be determined by your stage facilities. Great or small, the audience reception of such a stunt will be tremendous.

Musical numbers which suggest themselves for such a show include: Irving Berlin's "Angels of Mercy," "When the Lights Go On Again," "Over There," 'When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "Fellow on a Furlough" a new tune from a Universal Short Subject, (This makes a good short for your screen program). 'No Love, No Nothin'" (Girl singing to a photograph number), "I've Got Sixpence" (Soldier group in blackout sketch), "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," "Buckle Down Winsocki" and a host of other appropriate numbers you can recall which will build up a sketch. Promote a local orchestra and dress them in uniform, bringing the orchestra on as a pick-up band in the camp show sequence. This may sound like an awful lot of work but if you have the will to go to town it can be done in the small towns as well as the large and reflect its value in the payoff at the box-office. It's up to you!

Civic Rally

This activity needs little elaboration for it is just a repeat of what you did during the War Loan drives to stimulate bond sales, the only difference is that you swing the stunt around to stimulate Red Cross donations in the theatre with civic leaders and returning service men to make the appeal. These boys who have already tasted the bitter cup of war in the front line will eloquently tell your patrons of the gallant work the Red Cross is doing and they need not be silver-tongued orators to do it. A few words, uttered can speak volumes for the cause. You know how to go about this type activity so it's up to you!

Dramatic Prologue

Your high school dramatic club or Little Theatre group can produce a brief dramatic sketch employing a local choral group to furnish background music and atmosphere to be presented as a prologue to the Red Cross collection at the principal performances in your theatre. Such a sketch might well be entitled "At His Side." The scene could be that of a behind-the-lines dressing station where a wounded boy is carried in and administered plasma. The sketch might open with a mother and dad eagerly reading a letter from their son by lamp light off to one side of the stage with the entire house blacked out. As they read of the boy's life being saved by plasma the scene could switch to the dressing station as a flash-back of what happened. The scene could return to the mother and dad, who upon finishing the letter, start to write to their boy telling of the Red Cross Blood Donors of the home town with the choral group—massed on the other side of the stage around the dressing station scene in Red Cross uniforms—softly singing while the boy tries his crutches with their voices gradually drowning out the words of the mother and dad as they write. When the voices fade out and the lights dim on the scene the mother's trembling words could repeat: "The folks back home are with you son, they'll not let you down. Through the Red Cross, we're at your side. God bless you and bring you home Johnny." At this point the appeal trailer should hit the screen and you're on the way to record breaking contributions.

Exploitation

First of all, get the Mayor or Burgess to proclaim Motion Picture Theatres' Red Cross week and get the text planted on the front page of your local papers. Decorate the front of your theatre with Red Cross Flags, the posters, pennants, burgees, and accessories which are being supplied through the War Activities Committee direct to theatres and through National Screen Service branches. Create a lobby display utilizing the map and picture of your theatre front as a means of dramatizing the points to which funds collected are spread over the face of the globe. You can get a large war map from a local gas station or promote a big globe of the world. Use red, white and blue ribbons to connect the photo of your theatre to the map as pin-on streamers. Use a large Red Cross Flag for background atmosphere. This is a display idea which will get attention and can be done at a cost which will not be prohibitive to even the smallest theatre.

Promote store windows and get your theatre's attraction prominently worked into the setup for the success of the collections depends on full houses from which to collect the fund. Use the slugs which are being supplied in mat form in your theatre ads and get local merchants to cooperate by carrying the slugs in their regular advertising in advance and during the week. Explore every avenue of press and radio coverage, put out lots of window cards and don't miss a bet to pack the house with paying customers during Red Cross Week. It's up to you!

Making Collections

Collections taken in public places can be great or small, generous or begrudging. The secret of successful collections rests with the atmosphere or mood in which the appeal is presented. The American moviegoers are the most spontaneously generous givers in all the world as evidenced by the record of their contributions to worthy causes in the past. The home front is realistically aware of the fact that there is a war going on. Large numbers of America's sons and daughters are gone from the local scene for the duration and their loved ones are grimly determined to make that word "duration" have the shortest meaning possible. They want to get back to the good old days and there are but very few who would not give their all to hasten the day of victory. These same people, too, know their Red Cross and the magnificent work it is doing in war as in peace. Letters from the boys and girls in service give them the facts in their V-Mail from the four corners of the world. You greet your patrons with an appeal that they are ready and willing to answer. The degree of their generosity rests with you and your showmanly presentation or atmosphere surrounding the actual collections.

"Lights Up . . . Live up to your pledge," is more than a slogan to the men and women of showbusiness. It is a command from the battle front of our America. In more elaborate language it means that you should hold an intermission between every performance in your theatre. It means that your auditorium should be lighted during the taking of the collection and, what's more, the appeal should be dressed up with appropriate stage effects, music, personal appeal speeches by either yourself, prominent citizens, wounded service men or local boys who happen to be home on leave. It means that a collection should be taken at each and every performance and, if you like, announce the results to date at each show to spur giving toward a high goal. Make your appeal trailer stand out from the rest of your screen show by using special stage lighting treatment. Set the mood for generous giving. It's up to YOU.

School Appeal

Several neighborhood theatres in the Philadelphia area have conceived the idea of contacting schools and having their pupils contribute to the Red Cross at a designated performance during Red Cross Drive week. Actual collection of the money will be made in advance at the schools, and at the special performance. Either the theatre manager or a war veteran will make a direct appeal to the kids, naming their school and stating the amount which the children are contributing to the Red Cross fund.

Davis Says Theatres Will Hit New High

Greater theatre participation than ever before, resulting in substantially greater collections, is seen by Norman H. Davis, Chairman of the American Red Cross, in a letter to Si Fabian, WAC-Motion Picture Theatres Division Chairman, dealing with the industry's part in the 1944 Red Cross Drive, March 23-29.

"The executive committee of the Theatres Division is of the opinion that even more than last year's 14,000 participating theatres will join in this year's campaign, provided local chapters make it clear that this important cooperation is desired," the letter said in part. "With close cooperation between local chapters and local exhibitors, a substantially larger sum can be secured toward this year's increased national goal.

"The eagerness of the motion picture industry's leaders to undertake aggressive participation in this great humanitarian effort is evidenced by copy of letter attached, written by the chairman of the Theatres Division to 16,500 member exhibitors. I have provided the War Activities Committee with copies of this letter to you, so that each exhibitor may have one.

Last year's experience amply demonstrates that the benefits from Red Cross Week in American motion picture theatres are many. Literally millions of people gave a second time; other millions never reached by personal solicitation responded to a fervent appeal from the screen. Since all local quotas constitute minimum goals, we believe that theatre collections should be conducted in every community during the fourth week in March, even though the minimum goal may have been reached or exceeded in the community."

Harmon Enthuses Over Spirit of N.E. Exhibs

"I have never been as gratified with anything in my life as I am with the magnificent response and cooperation of the New England exhibitors and distributors in the Industry's 1944 Red Cross Campaign," said Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee, following his return from New England.

"The reaction of the exhibitors and distributors at the meetings," said Harmon, "was so marked, the enthusiasm so vociferous, one would have thought that they were on the receiving end of this campaign, rather than on the giving end. Exhibitors and distributors vied with each other, and ideas and suggestions for a successful campaign floated over the meeting with such rapidity that one could hardly take them all down."

Harmon stressed the high quality of the presentation made by the Red Cross representatives at both meetings. Veterans of several South Pacific battles brought the exhibitors and distributors to their feet cheering.

Lauds Film Salesmen for Aid to Campaign

Film salesmen, pitching in to do their bit on behalf of the Motion Picture Theatres' Red Cross Drive, have been directly responsible for more than 1,200 theatre pledges to date, it was revealed in New York Monday by Ned E. Depinet, Chairman of the Distributors' Division in the 1944 Red Cross campaign.

With several thousand exhibitors in the country who cannot be reached in any other way, the film salesmen were depended upon by the regional campaign chairman to bring in the pledges from the most remote situations.

The weather is still heavy in the western part of the country and many of the salesmen ventured out in storms and snowdrifts which they would hardly be expected to combat in pursuit of their regular business.

Soon after the assignments were made the pledges started pouring in from the salesmen. And when the campaign is all over, the salesmen will have done even more than was expected of them, Depinet said.

Each distribution chairman has a check-off list of theatres from which he compiles a daily list of unpledged houses compiled from lists submitted by the War Activities Committee. If a theatre appears on it too long, the salesman who covers that particular town is sent out to sign it up. With this assistance the Red Cross Drive had signed more than 11,400 theatres up to Monday of this week, and the salesmen are responsible for a good share.

Robbins Reminds 60% Increase Is Needed

Every major company in the industry will increase its contribution to the Red Cross by at least 60 per cent, it has been announced by Herman Robbins, chairman of the Corporate Gifts Committee in the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres' 1944 Red Cross Drive. The companies were requested to do this on the basis that last year the total asked for the Red Cross was $125,000,000 while this year, the total asked is $200,000,000. Since this represents an increase of 60 per cent every company must subscribe at least an equivalent increase over last year.

There will be three divisions in the corporate gifts set-up. First is the gifts from all non-theatre units, including producers, distributors, exchanges, laboratories, newsreels, film libraries, film delivery companies, non-theatrical concerns and related enterprises.

Secondly, a top executive has been appointed in each company to obtain individual gifts from the other top executives. The committee chairmen include Samuel Schneider, Warner Bros.; Neil Agnew, Paramount; Jack Cohn, Columbia; Malcolm Kingsberg, RKO; William Michel, 20th Century-Fox; John J. O'Connor, Universal; Gradwell L. Sears, United Artists; James R. Grainger, Republic.

The third field is for the general employes of each company. A chairman for each company will be named by those mentioned above.

Northern N. J. 1st 100 Per Center

Northern New Jersey is the first region in the country to report 100 per cent pledges for the industry's Red Cross campaign. The proud Newark co-chairmen, Harry Lowenstein and Don Jacocks, have received 250 signatures—which is nine more than National Screen's tabulation of 241 possibilities for the area.

Key Cities, Small Towns Gear Up for Campaign

Showmanship Goes to Work for Red Cross; Exhibitors Set Plans

One of the outstanding campaigns planned for Red Cross Week is that of the New York area. Arranged by publicity chairmen Harry Mandel and Eddie Dowden this campaign embraces every field of exploitation publicity and advertising.

Mandel and Dowden recommend that every exhibitor in the area use the press book prepared by the War Activities Committee. They also urge use of the trailer and free kit provided by National Screen Service. The latter comprises a one-sheet, 40 x 60, and midget window card. In addition, National Screen is handling at cost price a valance, a banner, streamers, stills and dashes.

New York theatres are asked to be sure to have their theatres decorated during the week of March 23 to 29 particularly. Red Cross displays should be kept in prominent spots. A Red Cross collection container should be chained down on the Bond booth, it is suggested, in order to collect the odd change from War Stamps, etc.

Managers should contact local Red Cross chapters asking them to furnish one or more Red Cross workers to aid depleted house staffs. It is suggested that A.W.V.S. women, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other organizations of this type also be used.

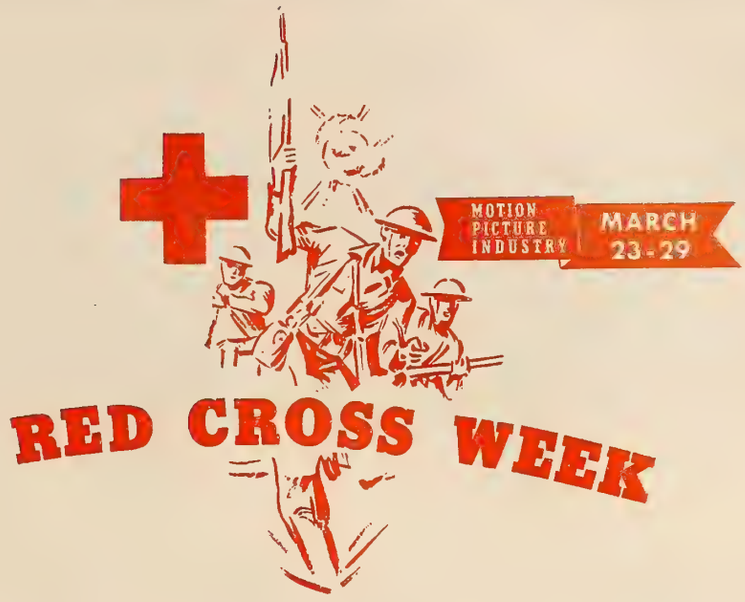
"Red Cross Week should be opened with a gala parade,' Dowden and Mandel state in their instructions. They urge that exhibitors contact the local chapter for cooperation in getting Red Cross nurses, mobile units, canteens, flags, bands, etc. Since the Red Cross Drive will have been under way for three weeks before the theatres get into it, the parade will make a big splash to revive the interest.

Through the Red Cross, the Army, Navy or Marines a hero can be obtained to make an appeal from the stage. Giving his own personal experiences, a lad from the front can do more to loosen an audience's purse strings than anyone else.

Theatres with stage shows, or special stage nights such as amateur shows, are asked to incorporate a Red Cross pageant during the week of the theatre collection.

It is suggested that during the collections a Red Cross slide be used so the screen will not be blank. Stirring music can be played to accompany the collection.

Additional suggestions in the manual sent to all theatres in the New York area include an idea for utilizing theatres' radio time for an appeal; and the use of ad slugs. In the latter connection it is urged that every theatre in the area use a Red Cross slug in its ads during the week of March 23 to 29.



Mandel and Dowden point out to the theatres in the area that since 100 per cent of all collections this year go into the Local Red Cross Chapter, this is an added selling point to make in theatre collections.

City-Wide Campaigning Marks Plan in Motion at Denver

A flat car has been roaming the extensive tracks of the Denver Street Railway System for two weeks with displays changed daily, all in the interest of the Red Cross Drive collections in motion picture theatres in Denver. Rick Ricketson, local exhibitor chairman, has arranged an impressive campaign.

A large neon Red Cross has been installed against a background of a 24-sheet on the site

There Can Be No Compromise With Results

Activities on behalf of the war effort are, undoubtedly, many and varied. And we assume that some of them are not as important as others despite the industry's pledge to our country that we would do an "all-out" job on each and every assignment.

In an army of some sixteen thousand theatremen there are bound to be some slackers or conscientious objectors, just as there are among those called to the armed services.

We've heard stories about how this or that theatreman laid down on his job and failed to put his best efforts or enthusiasm into certain war activity work. But the results from those who did a fine and patriotic job so overshadowed the slackers that they were literally lost in the shuffle and with only their own consciences to plague them for not "backing the attack" by the men on the firing lines.

Now we are faced with an assignment that is definitely second to none. Your Red Cross is doing the kind of job that is so important that it runs equal, almost, to the actual fighting in the various theatres of war operations.

Theatremen have been asked—not ordered, mind you—to help make this vitally important drive a success. The people you are asked to contact via your theatre screen are anxious to help. They will welcome the opportunity to contribute to this important and worthy cause.

Therefore, it is the duty and responsibility of every theatreman in this country, regardless of type, size or location of his theatre, to cooperate one hundred per cent by making certain that the Red Cross collection is made with all lights on at each and every performance. Under no circumstances or for any reason whatsoever should you skip a single performance throughout the week of this drive in the theatres. And you should also see that donations can be accepted in front of your theatre for the passersby and in the lobby where your patrons can add a bit more to what they will give inside on their way home.

Any theatreman, whether he be the owner of the theatre or the man charged with the operation of it, who fails in this important work deserves to be run out of the industry on a spiked rail. Since that won't, indeed, can't be done, we CAN and perhaps we should publicize such persons because they are not only a disgrace to the industry but to their country as well.

There can be no compromise with results. YOU and YOU and YOU must see to it that your theatre registers the greatest audience and theatre collections possible.

of the Pioneer Monument. A scene of the Red Cross in action at Tarawa has been placed in a prominent window of J. C. Penney & Co. Street flags are all over the downtown section. An impressive tableau of wounded soldiers and nurses climaxed the kick-off luncheon.

Speakers will be used on the stages of all important theatres during the week of the collections. Radio transcriptions and newspaper stories will be employed to tell about the theatre collections. In a tieup with industries and business concerns in the city, 500,000 envelope stuffers were used.

Every Showmanship Angle Being Utilized in Detroit

Every conceivable showmanship angle to draw the public's attention to the Motion Picture Industry's 1944 Red Cross Campaign is being utilized by Moe Duddleson, Distributor Chairman in the Detroit Area. Special lobby displays, back-of-the-house displays, Red Cross messages on flashing marquees, and in addition to the regular screen trailer, a special trailer is being devised as an added follow-up screen appeal.

Among the theatres in the District already pledged to cooperate in their entirety, are the Butterfield Theatres, Cooperative Theatres, General Theatres, Mutual Theatres and Allied Theatres.

Kincey Says Charlotte Area Will Far Surpass 1943 Total

About 80 per cent of all the theatres in North and South Carolina have been pledged to take Red Cross collections and the local chairmen expect to eventually sign up all the rest, H. F. Kincey, exhibitor chairman for the Charlotte territory, announced this week. "Carolina exhibitors expect to surpass the 502 pledges taken last year," he said. Detailed bulletins have been sent to all theatres represented at the territorial rally held last week.

'Top All Drives' Pittsburgh Slogan

American love slogans and Pittsburgh showmen have added another to the already almost limitless list to take its place alongside of the daddy of them all; "Remember Pearl Harbor." The new slogan, "Top All Other Drives" comes from Herbert Greenblatt, Distributor Chairman of the Pittsburg Area of the Industry's 1944 Red Cross Campaign.

public relations for the Area, the slogan has caught on and the enthusiasm it is arousing promises excellent results in the collections-at-every performance campaign now in progress among the exhibitors of the Pittsburgh area.

Cincy Aims to Triple '43

Theatres in Cincinnati are confident that their collections in the 1944 Red Cross Drive will exceed any previous year's by 300 per cent. They are all set to attempt this goal in an all-out campaign. Radio stations, newspapers and store windows will be used in the campaign, according to Col. Arthur Frudenfeld, exhibitor chairman. Returned war heroes will speak in key houses at the time of collections.

Says N.O. Will Top Record

"The New Orleans area in the 1944 Red Cross Campaign will definitely top its fine record of accomplishment made in 1943," declared E. V. Richards, Exhibitor Area Chairman for the Southeastern District, following a trip around the territory.

"Up to the present," Richards said, "five hundred and fifty theatres have pledged themselves to "mop up" in the general theatre solicitation starting March 23. Early an efficient planning by all of the committees throughout the Area, and their tie-in with the local Red Cross and other recognized civic organizations, presages a most successful campaign in this territory."

K.C. Theatres Apply Showmanship

Trailers announcing the date of the Red Cross drive and the Kansas City quota of $1,195,000 have been attached to the WAC Red Cross film, "At His Side," for all showings in the K. C. theatres. Arrangements have been made to obtain the services of 75 speakers who will talk from the stages of theatres in the city and vicinity. A giant kick-off rally was held at the Municipal Auditorium with practically all of the 14,000 seats filled. Speaker of that occasion was Hal Boyle, AP correspondent who has been at the front and could give a vivid picture of what the Red Cross means to the boys there.

Over 360 theatres in the area are pledged to make collections at every performance every day, the largest number ever signed up in the territory for any drive.

Loew Columbus House Recruits Blood Donors Through Display

Loew's Ohio Theatre in Columbus was the first Central Ohio house to set up a special Red Cross blood donor display and application counter as part of the advance campaign for the industry's Red Cross Drive week.

The lobby set-up was manned by Red Cross workers and included Red Cross posters and literature. Several hundred blood donors already have been obtained in this way.

RKO Theatres All Set

RKO Theatres throughout the country have indicated in their reports that they will give the forthcoming Red Cross drive the same enthusiastic support which has characterized their every war activity in the past, it was indicated at the circuit's New York headquarters following a checkup by E. L. Alperson of individual theatre's plans and progress to date in the campaign. Every manager expects to exceed all previous collections in his theatre.

Schine's 'Grand' Guy

The Schine Circuit has inaugurated a "Grand" Guys Honor Roll for managers in whose theatres $1000 is collected for the Red Cross. The "Grand" in the name signifies the figure. Seymour Morris, advertising and publicity chief, in a letter to all of the chain's theatres has cutlined a campaign to tie in with the industry's drive. He points out that a majority of the Schine theatres are in small towns and that $1,000 is a comparatively large sum for most of them to collect.

Depinet Recommends Assistant Chairmen

Exchange Area Chairmen for the Motion Picture Theatres' 1944 Red Cross Campaign have been instructed by Ned E. Depinet, Distributor Chairman, to appoint Assistant Chairmen to aid them in their work.

Depinet urged that these appointments be made at once so that the alternate may be ready to take over on a minute's notice in case the regular chairman is called out of town or otherwise becomes unavailable at any time during the drive.

Further support would be given the chairman by the assistant in case of the former's illness which might prevent him from personally attending to the details of organizing other exchanges in the operation of the campaign, and also makes it possible for New York headquarters to have close contact with the individual areas at all times.

Depinet suggested that other heads of exchanges be appointed as Assistant Chairmen—those branch managers who had not previously served as chairmen.

Evergreen Extends Drive

The Evergreen Theatre Circuit of Seattle has decided to extend the time of collections in the Industry's 1944 Red Cross Campaign beyond the deadline of March 29 set by the War Activities Committee as its extra gesture of further cooperation in the Drive.

New England Area 100%

"A one hundred per cent increase in collections this year over 1943's campaign is expected for New England," said Al Kane, Distributor Chairman for the New England territory in the Motion Picture Industry's 1944 Red Cross Campaign at a district meeting in Boston Tuesday.

War Hero in Limelight

One of the best stunts so far reported to the WAC on the Red Cross Drive is the campaign engineered by Clayton C rnell, manager of Schine's Strand Theatre, Amsterdam, N. Y. Cornell prevailed upon one of Amsterdam's outstanding heroes, Staff Sgt. Louis B. Sykes, to appear in a stage program called "Amsterdamians Save Lives." The Strand manager was uniformly successful in obtaining the cooperation of all merchants to carry a box in their ads calling attention to the stage show. Sergeant Sykes is a turret gunner on a B-26 bomber and has flown on 40 missions over enemy territory. He holds the Air Medal with seven Oak Leaf Clusters.

War Vets to Reach Non-Theatre Towns

Marcel Brazee, zone advertising manager for Warner Theatres in Milwaukee, is working out a plan for managers to organize a group consisting of war veterans and a prominent speaker to visit communities having no theatres and staging a local rally in behalf of the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres 1944 Red Cross Drive. Contributions obtained at these rallies will be included in the totals reported for the industry's collections.

Brazee points out that many effective showmanship angles can be employed in staging these events by the use of Red Cross nurses with boxes, large bulletin boards showing the name of the community and the amount given to the Red Cross fund, stage announcements in the theatres of nearby communities patronized by the non-theatre town, local radio programs, and merchant and school cooperation.

First application of the plan will be made in the Milwaukee territory. The New York headquarters of the industry's drive, under National Chairman Joseph Bernhard, is passing the idea along for adoption nationally.

Connecticut Chairmen to Tour Territory to Aid Campaigns

County and city chairmen will go about the state of Connecticut during the Red Cross Drive to set collections and assist the theatres in the campaign, it was decided at a meeting held in New Haven Monday. This checking committee will follow through to see that collections are being made smoothly, will line up speakers to make stage appeals and will help to obtain girls to make the collections. Exhibitor Chairman I. J. Hoffman and Distributor Chairman, Ed Ruff, have named a chairman for each city and one for each county to act on this committee.

Practically every theatre in the state is set for participation in the drive.

N. Y. City Theatres Going All Out

Six hundred theatres, from the largest to the smallest, in Metropolitan New York are set to give every support to make Red Cross Motion Picture Week the biggest collection ever, it was stated Tuesday by Sam Rinzler and Fred Schwartz, co-chairmen of the exhibitors' division for this city.

All theatres will display the material supplied in the Red Cross kit and in addition will use flags and valances. Houses will fly the Red Cross flag and stage-show theatres will have special Red Cross offerings. All boroughs have cooperatively arranged for parades.

In 23 key city meetings held as advance rallies for the WAC-Motion Picture Theatre 1944 Red Cross Drive exhibitors representing more than 10,000 theatres are being reached by fifteen industry executives who volunteered to tour the country on their own time and expense.

In order more efficiently to reach the exhibitors in the smaller communities the distributors assigned salesmen ten theatres and have instructed these men that their first duty during the Red Cross drive is to get signed pledges and promises from the showmen to make "Collections at Every Performance—Every Day" in order to meet and exceed the industry's $10,000,000 goal.

Close Harmony in Albany

A heavy turnout of exhibitor and distributor representatives from the entire upstate New York area attended the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres Division luncheon rally in Albany Wednesday.

Leading Red Cross officials and workers were guests at the meeting. Plans were shaped for the March 23-29 collection week by Ed Ruff, local distributor chairman, and Lou Golding exhibitor chairman, in closest cooperation with the local Red Cross chapter.

100 Per Cent in San Francisco

Following the pre-campaign luncheon held at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco for the 1944 Red Cross Drive, pledges from all of the 200 attending exhibitors have been received, it is announced by Charles P. Skouras, Pacific Area Director.

B. V. Sturdivant, chairman for the campaign in Northern California, presided over the meeting, which also was addressed by Ned. E. Depinet and Harry Brandt.

Idaho-Montana Cooperate

Because of the size of the states and the travel difficulties involved,, Idaho and Montana have appointed a number of sectional chairmen for the industry's Red Cross Week campaign in order to insure maximum attention to details. The Idaho chairmen are: Harold Jones, Nampa; John Trewhela, Coeur d'Alene, and Paul DeMordaunt, Blackfoot. The Montana chairmen are Finus Lewis, Livingston; Bill Fower, Missoula, and Jack Suckstorff, Sidney.

Then he sold the paper to the Ohio Paper Mills and the money received was donated to the Red Cross Fund. This was publicized in the local Daily Examiner.

Depinet, Brandt, Skouras in L. A.

High-ranking officials of the armed forces and the Red Cross, as well as more than 500 Southern California exhibitors representing all the circuits, independents and exchanges in the region, attended the WAC-Motion Pictures Theatre Division 1944 Red Cross Drive luncheon-meeting at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles.

Main speakers were Ned Depinet and Harry Brandt, of the industry's touring group, and Charles Skouras, local exhibitor drive chairman.

"There is no magic secret to success in this 1944 Red Cross Drive," Depinet said. "All it requires is the sincere effort of every theatre manager regardless of how small his house may be."

Brandt stated that the industry "must coordinate itself on such a basis that the maximum results will be accomplished in this drive." Skouras assured the gathering that the Southwest will double all previous efforts in this drive.

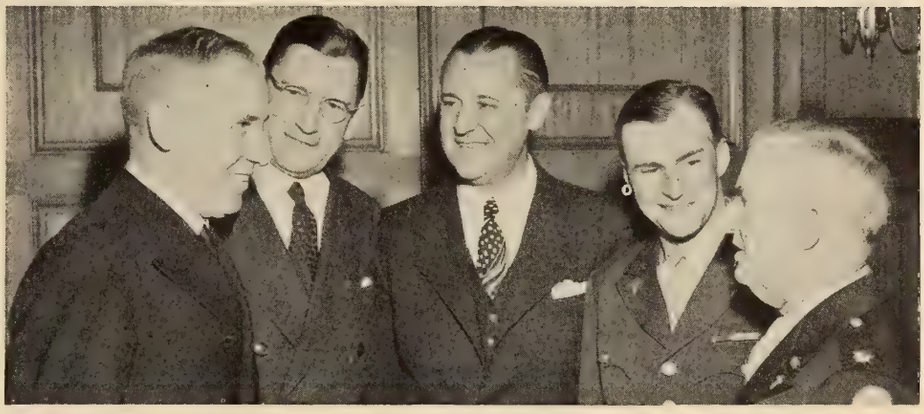
Also at the speakers' table were: Bowen McCoy, Los Angeles chapter of the ARC; Hugh Bruen, leading independent exhibitor; Mrs. Roland V. Lee, chairman of blood donor recruiting for ARC; Marco Wolff, Hollywood Victory Committee; Robert H. Poole, co-chairman of War Activities in Southern California; Miss Eileen Tyler, assistant program director for the ARC, and Sgt. Peter Yezierski, marine hero of Guadalcanal.

St. Louis Jumps Gun

Theatres in Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri will jump the gun on the rest of the country by inaugurating their 1944 Red Cross collections March 15 and carrying on a "Collections every performance—every day" policy for two full weeks instead of simply the March 23-29 period, it was announced over the weekend by Harry Arthur, Jr., film chairman in St. Louis.

Arthur also stated that his region's aim is a collection of two to three dollars per seat per theatre in an effort far to exceed the $300,000 quota announced at last Thursday's industry meeting by E. L. Alperson, Ben Kalmenson and Ben Shlyen, speakers.

Among those on the dais at the rally were Harry Hynes, local distributor chairman; Red Cross Field Director Calvert D. Jessup; Chief Pharmacist's Mate Rex Moore, wounded war hero who wears the Purple Heart; and Capt. Roger Heimer, Coast Guard Commander of the 9th Naval District.



Inspiring Meeting at Boston

At one of the most inspiring meetings to be held thus far by the theatre industry of New England in connection with the war effort, the 1944 Red Cross Drive was officially launched at the Copley-Plaza, Boston, by Martin J. Mullin, chairman of the meeting: Charles F. Rowley, General Chairman, Greater Boston 1944 Red Cross Fund; Marine Corp. Hobbs, Mr. Edgar

In Boston the minimum goal is $3,367,000—in greater Boston, $4,600,000—which is $1,200,000 more than last year.

Fabian Reports on Atlanta

"Every theatre in the Atlanta territory will collect at every performance every day," declared Si Fabian, Chairman of the Theatre Division of the War Activities Committee, following his return from the meeting held in that city.

Mr. Fabian said the meeting was enthusiastic to the nth degree. It was held in the Variety Club of Atlanta, to which every film man in the city and most of those in the territory belongs. William K. Jenkins, head of the Lucas-Jenkins Theatres, was named chairman for the territory, and he presided at the meeting. Among those who spoke was Bob Wilby of the Wilby-Kincey Theatres. Fifty exhibitors, exchangemen and local Red Cross representatives exchanged pledges of support.

'Full Support' Des Moines Slogan

Approximately 80 per cent of the theatres participating in the 1944 Red Cross Drive in the Des Moines area already are pledged to give full support to the Drive," it is announced by A. H. Blank, State Chairman for the Motion Picture Industry's campaign.

At the State meeting held last week with E. L. Alperson, Ben Kalmenson and Ben Shlyer as additional speakers, Blank called on exhibitors to triple last year's collections. All Tri-States, Central States, and RKO-Singer Theatres are pledged 100 per cent for collections at every show.

The local Red Cross chapters also are cooperating.

Treasurer for Salt Lake Area

To facilitate clearing of all motion picture industry donations from the Salt Lake City area through a central point, so that the film division may receive full credit for its collections in the Red Cross Drive, Henry Ungerleider has been appointed County Motion Picture Red Cross Treasurer. He will open a special bank account for the deposit of all theatre monies received for the Red Cross, including the collections and corporate gifts. One group check eventually will be made out and presented to State ARC officials.

Window Displays in Denver

Motion picture industry committees in Denver are at work on intensive window display coverage throughout the neighborhoods as advance promotion for Red Cross collection week, March 23-29.

Merchants are being very cooperative in providing suitable space for the displays, according to Mark Alling, theatre chairman.

Skit Features Milwaukee Meet

A pantomime skit about blood donations, put on by the local Allen Bradley Dramatic Club, was one of the highlights of Milwaukee's Red Cross Drive meeting at the Hotel Schroeder. The skit showed a middle-aged man saying goodbye to his Army-bound son, with the father proceeding to donate a pint of blood at his local ARC center.

WASHINGTON, D. C. The regional meeting in the national capital brought forth enthusiastic pledges of cooperation in the Drive. Among those present: George Peters, Jack Foxe, Frank LaFalce, Nat Browne.

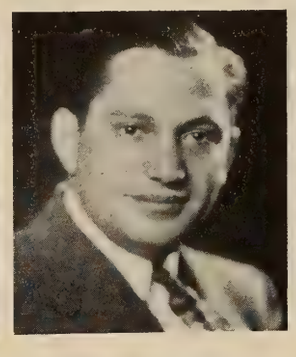
Mayor Samuel Lauds Theatremen

The motion picture industry can do more than any other agency to bring before the people the full importance of the Red Cross drive, Mayor Bernard Samuel told the Motion Picture Theatres Division 1944 Red Cross campaign luncheon meeting at the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia Monday. More than 365 exhibitor and distributor representatives in attendance from Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware also heard Joseph Bernhard, the industry's national chairman for the drive, and Ned E. Depinet, national distributor chairman.

Samartano of Meriden Arranges $10,000 Advance for R.C. Show



A stunt which will net about $10,000 for the Red Cross has been arranged by Joseph Samartano at Loew's Poli Palace, Meriden, Conn. The War Manpower Commission has cited Meriden as the ideal American town, and it will be visited by commission heads on March 20. That evening the MGM short, "Main Street Today," will be premiered at the Palace. The bands of the training command from the schools at Yale and Capt. Glen Miller will augment the show. There will also be speakers from the stage.

Governor, Mayor Praise Theatres' War Efforts

Harold J. Fitzgerald, Wisconsin State Chairman of the WAC 1944 Red Cross Drive, has received telegrams from the Acting Governor and from the Acting Mayor of Milwaukee giving official recognition of the industry's vital role in the war effort and expressing the conviction that the nation's theatres will be one of the key media in the success of the current campaign.

"I am deeply mindly and grateful for the magnificent work motion picture exhibitors and distributors in Wisconsin are accomplishing in war efforts," Acting Governor Walter S. Goodland wrote. "When called upon for recruiting men and women you have responded splendidly. You have not failed us in the past. I know you will not fail us now."

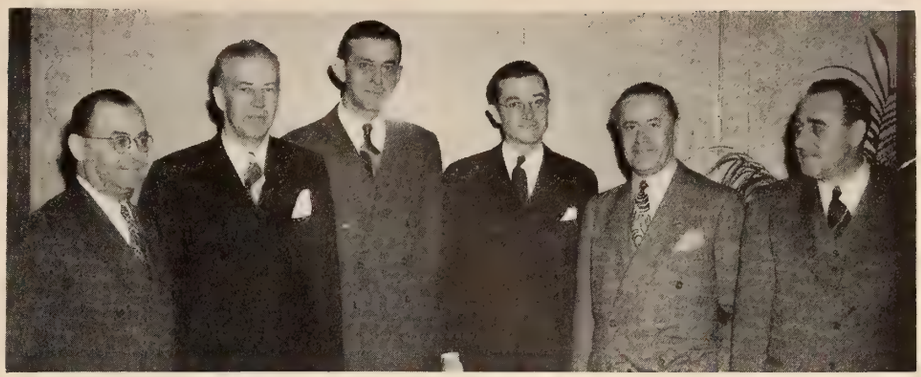
John L. Bohn, Acting Mayor, wired: "I wish to take this opportunity in the name of the citizenry of Milwaukee to commend your organization for its valuable contributions to the war effort. It is gratifying to learn that you have again marshalled the forces of your industry in the interest of the American Red Cross collection drive to be held in all the theatres during the period of March 23 to April 2. You need no greater inspiration than that provided in the courageous and unselfish work this great humanitarian institution is performing."

Praise Industry in K. C.

"There is no other industry in Kansas City doing the kind of job being done by the motion picture industry in the war effort. I am depending on the theatres to give their usual excellent support and cooperation in this drive."

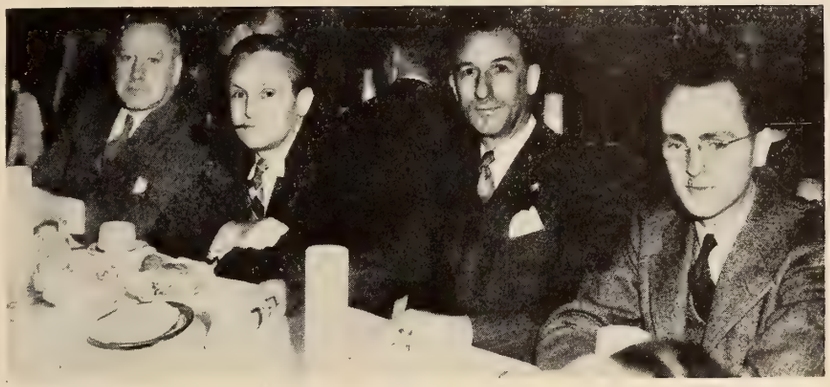
This was the ringing praise from Byron Shutz, general chairman for the American Red Cross in Kansas City, following the exhibitor rally with E. L. Alperson, Ben Kalmenson and Ben Shlyen as leading speakers. The highly enthusiastic meeting, held at the Hotel Muehlbach, opened this exchange area's WAC-Motion Picture Theatres Division 1944 Red Cross Drive. Ben Lawler, Fox mid-western district manager, presided. Almost 200 distributor and exhibitor representatives attended the luncheon-rally, and their response left no doubt that this area would meet and exceed its quota in the campaign.

New Orleans Theatres in Line



Sam Dembow and Andy Smith, Jr., of the industry's touring Red Cross Drive speakers, left New Orleans with more than 60 per cent of the city's theatres already pledged to participate in the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres Division of the 1944 campaign, and every indication that more houses than ever before will be involved.

At the exhibition-distribution rally at the Roosevelt Hotel, Dembow told his audience that "the South is better organized for this industry drive than it ever has been before. The South is certain to break all records for theatre collections."



Maurice F. Barr, WAC coordinator, presided at the meeting. On the dais were Ralph Nicholson, chairman of the Citizen's Committee of the Red Cross 1944 War Fund; Mrs. Charles F. Buck, chairman of the Theatre Volunteer Workers; Mrs. Philip Werlein, chairman of the Women's Division; E. A. Landaiche, local distributor chairman, and Lt. Chas. Armbruster, USAAF hero of the Mediterranean and Italian campaigns.

'Biggest Ever' in Buffalo

More theatres in the Buffalo exchange area are pledged to participate in the 1944 Red Cross campaign than ever before took part in a single industry drive, Max M. Yellen, local exhibitor chairman, told the gathering of Exhibitors at the Statler Hotel.

CHARLOTTE. Seen in the group above, snapped at the Carolinas exhibitor-Red Cross meeting, are: John Bachman, J. E. Holston, Roy L. Smart, Andy W. Smith, Sam Dembow, Lester Sipe.

The Box Office Slant

Hi Good-Lookin'

Universal Comedy-With-Music 62 mins.

(Prod. No. 8044—Nat'l Release, Mar. 24)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Enjoyable, entertaining filmusical for the entire family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Top grade supporting attraction.

Cast: Harriet Hilliard, Eddie Quillan, Kirby Grant, Betty Kean, Roscoe Karns, Vivian Austin, Marjorie Gateson, Fuzzy Knight, Milburn Stone, Frank Fenton, Robert Emmett Keane, Ozzie Nelson and His Orchestra, Jack Teagarden and His Orchestra, Delta Rhythm Boys and Tip Tap and Toe. Credits: Directed by Edward Lilley. Original story by Paul Gerard Smith. Screenplay by Paul Gerard Smith, Bradford Ropes and Eugene Conrad. Director of photography, Jerome Ash. Associate Producer, Frank Gross.

Plot: A topnotch radio singer, in order to help a young lady in whom he's interested, get a singing spot on an all-night show, becomes her partner to the detriment of his own show. Everyone becomes interested in the unknown singer, including his own sponsor, but he keeps his identity hidden until the sponsors sign them up as a team.

Comment: This latest filmusical from Universal is an enjoyable, entertaining picture for the whole family, for wrapped up in its sixty-two minutes of running time are good musical numbers, two name bands and specialties by the Delta Rhythm Boys and Tip, Tap and Toe. It also introduces to the picture-going public a newcomer called Kirby Grant, whose lovely voice and pleasing personality will leave its mark with many an audience. He plays the romantic lead opposite Harriet Hilliard and together they offer some very good vocal numbers, among them one called You're the Sweetest Thing; bound to attract attention. The Delta Rhythm Boys present that oldie, Paper Doll, in their own inimitable fashion, while Fuzzy Knight, as an all-night radio anouncer, gets a few laughs with his rendition of a fast tempo song. Others in the cast who are an important part of the proceedings are Eddie Quillan, Betty Kean, Roscoe Karns and Marjorie Gateson. The direction by Edward Lilley is commendable for it showcases the newcomer, Kirby Grant, well and also keeps the picture moving at a good pace.

Buffalo Bill

(Technicolor)

20th Century-Fox Biography 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An entertaining, exciting and colorful biography of the famed frontiersman. Ideal screen fare for the masses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should get by in metropolitan centers, but its largest grosses will be forthcoming from average communities. An excellent opportunity for old-fashioned circus-type exploitation.

Plot: Joel McCrea (Buffalo Bill) meets and marries Maureen O'Hara. When the Indians rise up against the white people who are taking their land and their food, McCrea leaves his wife and child to fight at Bonnet Gorge. Maureen and the son return East. For his heroism in the battle, McCrea is called East to receive the Congressional Medal from the President. When he finds his son has died because of a disease occurring only in "crowded civilization," he upbraids his wife for coming East, then leaves her. Shortly afterward, fabrications engineered by wealthy Easterners who resent his support of the Indians, doubt McCrea's heroism, turn people against him. He gets a job in a shooting gallery, becomes reconciled with Maureen. So that Easterners will have a better understanding of the West, McCrea organizes a Wild West Show, which later becomes world famous. Finally, the last performance is given, and McCrea, now an old man, gives a farewell address to a packed stadium.

Comment: Buffalo Bill has been the idol of thousands of children, and this Technicolor biography of events in his life, some true, some legendary, should for the most part please young and old. It is not an entirely convincing story, and some of the characterizations lack sincerity; but, on the whole, it is entertaining, exciting and colorful and should win strong support from the masses. A few complaints not likely to affect the general audience reception may involve the fact that the first half of the film has all the action, riding, Indian battles and incidents most fans expect in a story of Buffalo Bill, while the latter half depends more upon characterizations and dramatic developments to carry through the story of the frontiersman after he left the plains for the East. William A. Wellman has directed capably, although his material in this instance lacks the depth and emotional situations that have brought him praise for many former efforts. Production by Harry A. Sherman shows that no expense has been spared to bring forth a colorful story on a spectacular scale. Joel McCrea is a satisfactory choice for the title role, and Maureen O'Hara is lovely and appealing as his wife. Among the supporting cast, Thomas Mitchell and Edgar Buchanan perform best. "Buffalo Bill" may not get by discriminating metropolitan audiences and critics without encountering a few criticisms, but in the average communities, where after all it will find its largest and least critical audiences, it should garner big grosses. Excellent opportunity for old-fashioned circus-type exploitation is available for those smart showmen who take advantage of it.

Nine Girls

Columbia Mystery 74 mins.

(Nat'l Release, Feb. 17th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Crime that involves "Nine Girls"; should be a special treat for the armchair detectives.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Very satisfactory supporting fare because it will entertain all types of theatregoers.

Cast: Ann Harding, Evelyn Keyes, Jinx Falkenburg, Anita Louise, Leslie Brooks, Lynn Merrick, Jeff Donnell, Nina Foch, Shirley Mills, Marcia Mae Jones, William Demarest, Willard Robertson, Lester Matthews. Credits: Directed by Leigh Jason. Screenplay by Karen DeWolf and Connie Lee, Adapted by Al Martin from the play by Wilfred H. Pettitt. Director of photography, James Van Trees. Produced by Burt Kelly.

Plot: The selfish, spiteful nature of one of the girls of a sorority causes everyone to dislike her, including the teacher and chaperone. They all go to the sorority mountain cabin for a week-end, where they learn of the girl's death. Everyone is suspected and there is a mad scramble to hide anything incriminating. The teacher finally has one of the girls write an innocent looking letter to the victim's father. This plays into the hands of the police and helps solve the crime.

Comment: The solution of a crime, when it involves "Nine Girls" should be an extra special treat to all those armchair detectives who find entertainment in that job. Especially in a story that is as tightly knit as this one and as full of suspense, excitement and all the other ingredients they seek. It's good film fare for the supporting spot on any bill, for it's the type of picture that should please many other than the whodunit fans. Ann Harding does a swell job as the girls' chaperone, while Evelyn Keyes, Jeff Donnell and the other girls register well in their respective parts. Anita Louise, as the girl who gets murdered, doesn't get much chance to show what she can do for she only appears briefly in the beginning of the picture. Willard Robertson and William Demarest, as police captain and cop, respectively, handle their assignments in the looked-for manner and Lester Matthews capably fills the part of the murdered girl's father. Good suspense and thrills have been well built up under Leigh Jason's deft direction and the production departments have been well taken care of by Burt Kelly. For street ballyhoo, arrange for "Nine Girls," with signs on their backs, to walk through town, asking for people to pick out the guilty party. Other mystery exploitation should work.

My Best Gal

Republic Musical Comedy 67 mins

(Nat'l Release, March 28)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Neighborhood folks probably will enjoy the comedy musical numbers despite shallow story.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Withers and Lydon names plus the fact that this is a musical are only drawing factors.

Plot: Jane Withers works in a drug store, refusing to seek a stage career despite the Tax Trailer Explains

With the double purpose of striking the patriotic angle and suggesting further attendance at the theatres, National Screen Service has completed a trailer to be used for notifying patrons of the new admission tax. The trailer points out the need for the increased tax, and shows that the more people there are attending the more tax goes to the Government. Another trailer explaining the penny shortage is also ready, both trailers now being available at National Screen exchanges.

Monogram Sets 1944-45 Budget at $7,500,000

Monogram will spend in excess of $7,500,000 for its 1944-45 production program, it was revealed to the 125 delegates at the west coast regional meeting which took place at the Chapman Park Hotel, Los Angeles. Steve Broidy, vice-president and general sales manager, who presided at the three-day conclave, pointed out that this established a new record for the company.

"The success of Monogram's high-budget pictures gives us the confidence to continue to appropriate greater sums than ever before for production purposes," said Broidy. "Not only have we played a large number of deluxe houses for the first time with 'Where Are Your Children?' and 'Women in Bondage,' but in 70 per cent of these engagements we have held over for one to four additional weeks."

Broidy pointed out that Monogram now has 8700 accounts, an increase of 1700 since the start of the season 1943-44. He said he expected the figure to reach 10,000 within a year.

Ask Summonses Be Quashed

Two of the film companies named in the $606,000 suit of a group of independent exhibitors in Oklahoma against the Griffith interests on an anti-trust charge this week asked the Federal District Court in Oklahoma City to throw out summonses on legalistic grounds. Universal Pictures Corp. declared it is not a Delaware corporation, as indicted in the summons, while Paramount charged improper venue. A third defendant, United Artists asked for a bill of particulars.

RKO Pension Plan Ratified

The RKO Radio Pension Trust Plan was approved and ratified by the stockholders of the company at a special meeting Tuesday at Dover, Del. The plan, introduced several months ago, was accepted by stockholders just as recommended by the Board of Directors. The Option Agreements between the corporation and its three principal executives were also ratified.

Charge Fraud In Percentage Returns

Seven distributing companies this week brought separate actions in Pittsburgh against William Finkel and the Carson Amusement Co. on the charge of falsifying statements of grosses made on percentage pictures.

The complainants' brief charged that Finkel and the Carson Amusement Co. had entered into a scheme to report "intentionally false and incorrect written statements of gross receipts" from their Arcade and Colonial theatres in Pittsburgh on pictures they had rented on a percentage basis from the distributing companies. Furthermore, the plaintiffs charge, the defendants conspired to induce checkers to join in with the plan by falsifying written reports.

The complaining companies—20th Century-Fox, Paramount, RKO Radio, Columbia, Universal, Vitagraph, and Loew's—claim many thousand dollars damages and demand that the theatres' books be examined to determine the true receipts. Pending discovery and an audit of the books, the court was asked to enjoin or restrain the defendants from altering or disposing of the books. The distributing companies also asked punitive damages. The complaints were filed in the U. S. District Court of Western Pennsylvania.

National Theatres Business Meet Ends on Patriotic Note

Showing a trend to further expand the organization's war effort, the annual business meeting of National Theatres Amusement Company at Palm Springs, Calif., closed on Tuesday with plans completed for a new spring sales campaign to be known as the Second Charles P. Skouras Drive. The 35 executives attending also discussed such matters as the new admission taxes and population trends in territories where NTAC operates.

F. H. Ricketson, president of Fox Intermountain, and George Bowser, southern California division manager of Fox-West Coast, were presented with bonus checks by Skouras as the winners of the drive completed New Year's Day. Speakers during the session included President Skouras, Mr. Ricketson, Mr. Bowser, Elmer Rhoden, Frank Newman, Harold Fitzgerald, B. V. Sturdivant, and Herman Wobber.

WE Declares 50c Dividend

At a meeting of the directors of the Western Electric Company held Tuesday a dividend of 50 cents per share on its common stock was declared. The dividend is payable on March 31, 1944, to stock of record at the close of business on March 24, 1944.

James A. Mulvey, general representative for Samuel Goldwyn, Sylvan Oestreicher and Harry Archinal, left New York Thursday for conferences in Hollywood with Goldwyn.

Decree Up to Distribs

The next sequence in the consent decree scenario came this week when Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark announced in Washington that his department had finished compiling exhibitor suggestions for revision of the distributor brief presented last month. These had been broken down to a single document, he said, and would now go to distributors for their consideration. The Department of Justice will not demand, for the present, acceptance of the exhibitor revisions. Clark will instead attempt to get big company reaction and then open negotiations for revision. However, Clark indicated that if the distributors still refuse to alter the proposals they placed before him he may then order court action.

The Assistant Attorney General declared the rumor that he was returning to Texas to run for Governor or any other political office was incorrect.

Flesh or Films in Television? SMPE to Talk It Over Mar. 22

One of the basic questions of television—"Should television broadcasts be made from live action or from a film previously photographed and edited?"—will be discussed at the next meeting of the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers March 22 at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Both sides of the question will be considered, with Willis Cooper of NBC, a former Hollywood director, taking a film producer's viewpoint and Worthington C. Minor of CBS looking at it as a radio broadcaster.

World Theatres Buys Belmont

World Theatres, Inc., which operates both the World and Belmont theatres, New York, has picked up its option to purchase the Belmont, it was announced this week by Gilbert Josephson, president. Both houses will continue to present Mexican and other Latin-American films in their United States premieres.

'Youth in Crisis' in 16 mm

The March of Time this week announced that the juvenile delinquency release, "Youth in Crisis," will be made available to the public, film libraries, and colleges in 16 mm prints. The film will be ready for sale in the 16 mm size almost immediately.

Adjusted Rentals Coming

Film rentals computed only after consideration of a theatre's operating nut will soon be expanded to apply to every exhibitor, said William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, during a highlight of the Chicago meeting of MGM sales heads. Rogers declared the success of his company depended on the success of the customers and "there is no reason why the exhibitor's problems should be minimized." He felt the end of the war would bring the necessity for readjustment in many situations due to population shifts and other causes, which would call for new sales approaches all around.

Republic Enjoins Rodeo Star From Using Roy Rogers 'Tag'

Roy Rogers, Republic Productions, Inc., and Republic Pictures Corporation this week obtained an injunction in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, enjoining Sunbrock Shows, Inc., Larry Sunbrock, and Ken Rogers, who is appearing at a rodeo at the Coliseum here, from advertising in newspapers or over the radio that Ken Rogers is "King of the Cowboys" or "The Cowboy King," and from using any type of advertising that would tend to confuse Ken Rogers with film star Roy Rogers, who has had the tag line, "King of the Cowboys," associated with him in all Republic advertising.

Century Circuit Goes Over Top As Dinner Climaxes Bond Drive

Century Circuit far exceeded its quota of $3,000,000 for the Fourth War Loan by selling a total of $9,000,000 worth of bonds.

The circuit climaxed the Fourth War Loan Drive with the Nassau Million Dollar Dinner at the Garden City Hotel. Admission for this dinner was by purchase of a $5000 war bond only.

Including admission to the affair, and proceeds from the auction, a total of over $2,300,000 in war bonds was sold.

Blumenstock, Kalmenson on Coast

Mort Blumenstock, eastern publicity head for Warner Bros., and Samuel Schneider, assistant to Harry M. Warner, made connections with General Sales Manager Ben Kalmenson this week in St. Louis, and the trio then went on to Burbank for a general conference for launching "The Adventures of Mark Twain."

Heineman Ends 2½-Month Trip

William J. Heineman, general sales manager for Samuel Goldwyn, returned Wednesday from a two and a half-month tour of the United States and Canada.

'Kenny' Film On Again

Charles W. Koerner, production chief at RKO Radio, this week revealed that "Elizabeth Kenny" would be made by his studio as soon as the story is in proper shape to complete a shooting script. He denied that at any time had Rosalind Russell refused to appear in the picture.

'Purple Heart' Set in 180 Runs

Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Purple Heart" has been set for runs in 180 key city situations during the next two weeks, it was announced by William J. Kupper, general sales manager of 20th Century-Fox.

Philadelphia WMC Designates Film Workers 'Locally Needed'

Ned E. Depinet, chairman of the Distributors' Division of the War Activities Committee announced at the Red Cross meeting in Philadelphia Monday that the War Manpower Commission in charge of the Philadelphia labor market area has designated the activity of motion picture distribution in that area as "locally needed." This designation was approved by the regional headquarters of the WMC for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, of which Frank L. McNamee is director.

The application for the designation "locally needed," after having been approved by the heads of all national distribution organizations at the home offices, was signed not only by the representatives of these companies in Philadelphia, but also by all the independent exchanges in that city. Sixteen exchanges signed the application representing 543 workers.

Negotiations for obtaining the "locally needed" designation have been going on since January 19, 1944, with the distributors being represented by Leon J. Bamberger, assistant to Chairman Depinet and the War Manpower Commission represented by Milton M. Weiss, technical operations officer, acting for John N. Patterson, area director. Mr. Bamberger was aided in the drafting of the ten-page petition by A. A. Schubart of RKO Radio Pictures.

On February 8, 1944, a meeting was held in Philadelphia attended by all the exchange managers of the national distributors, at which time a tentative draft of the application was submitted and the film men were questioned by Mr. Weiss on various points concerning their operations. Called to this meeting were also representatives of the Operators' Local Union, the Film Exchange Local Union, representatives of the ODT and others.

Only five other activities have heretofore been classified as "locally needed," in the Philadelphia area. These are laundries and the distribution of milk, coal, fuel oil and food.

"Locally needed" activities are those which do not appear on the National List and Index of Essential Activities, but have been designated "locally needed" by the War Manpower Commission Area and Regional Director because they are:

1. Determined to be vitally necessary to the health, welfare, and safety of the area.
2. Unable to meet the minimum demand for its services without the special protection afforded by such designation.

An activity designated as "locally needed" has the same status as an "essential" activity under Employment Stabilization plans and other War Manpower Commission recruitment and placement programs. The outstanding protection afforded to a "locally needed" designation is represented by the following:

> All workers in establishments designated as "locally needed" come within the terms of the Employment Stabilization Plan which prohibits the separation and hiring of a worker by a new employer without a release or a Statement of Availability issued either by the old employer or by the local War Manpower Commission Office servicing the employer's place of business. Such release can only be issued in accordance with the provisions of the Employment Stabilization Plan which, briefly are:
> (a) Discharge of the employe.
> (b) Lay-off of the employe for a period of seven days or more, or for an indefinite period.
> (c) Where the continuation in employment would constitute undue personal hardship for the worker. This refers to the physical condition of the worker as related to his employment.
> (d) Where the wages or working conditions are sub-standard or in violation of State or Federal regulations.

Applications from activities to be designated as "locally needed" can only be accepted by the War Manpower Commission in such areas as come under classifications I or II in the current labor situation groups as classified by the WMC Headquarters in Washington. In areas classified Group I, the labor situation is critical. In areas classified II, the labor situation is imminently critical. Areas presently classified in Group I include: Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, Portland, San Francisco, Washington and Jacksonville. Among those found in Group II are: Albany, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, New Haven, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, Sioux Falls, Columbus and Charlotte.

The classifications of labor areas are subject to review at Washington every six months. Mr. Depinet declares now that the industry's application for "locally needed" designation has been acted upon favorably by the Philadelphia area office, the next territory in which application will be made will be Pittsburgh. Applications for other areas will be filed as fast as the necessary data can be assembled and meetings arranged.

No area office of the WMC will consider a petition from any industry to be classed as locally needed unless it is signed by establishments representing at least 75 per cent of all the workers engaged in that particular industry in that area.

Designations are credited to so-called activities and not to individual organizations. Many facts and figures are necessary in the filing of such application. It was brought out in Philadelphia that of the 543 workers employed in the exchanges there, 58.7 per cent are women.

Postpone 'Going My Way' Release

Paramount has temporarily withdrawn "Going My Way," Bing Crosby picture previously scheduled for release in the fourth block, and will set it for release later in the season, it was announced by Neil Agnew, general sales manager. Reasons given for delaying release of the picture are the extended playing time being accorded "Lady in the Dark" and "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek," as well as "The Uninvited" and "Standing Room Only" in first-run situations.

N. Y. Theatres Sell 285,574 Bonds

The 600 film theatres in the New York Metropolitan area have sold 285,574 bonds worth $31,971,325, as so far recorded, it was announced this week by Edward L. Alperson, chairman of the WAC in the Fourth War Loan Drive. Mr. Alperson predicts the final money figures will reach $40,000,000.

MEETING COMES TO ORDER. The gathering of home office executives, division, district and branch sales managers of MGM in Chicago at Blackstone Hotel. (For another scene of meeting, see p. 62.)

Rodgers Hails War Position of Industry As MGM Sales Heads Gather in Chicago

Seeing the need for film industry war activities long after the war itself is won, William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general sales manager of MGM, urged branch and district managers to even greater war efforts as he addressed the company business conference which opened at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, last week-end.

Mr. Rodgers declared the motion picture industry would have no need for re-tooling—that the job now being done during the war would have to be carried on after the last shot is fired.

"The dislocations of war will require that the motion picture industry continue its present job of enlightening the American public on the problems facing our country and the world," he said.

Rodgers recommended that the present physical set-up of the War Activities Committee be continued with distributor representatives in the field to take the same active part in its operations as they have up to now. Insofar as MGM is concerned, he declared, the turning point in favor of the Allies is no signal for a letup in the various drives being sponsored and to be sponsored by the War Activities. On the contrary, he pointed out, the emphasis will be on increasing activity by MGM men placing Government business ahead of company affairs. Rodgers emphasized that War Activities will get prior attention of MGM forces both at the home office and in all its branches.

"We of MGM have booked and served 153,453 war film showings in theatres in the United States," said Rodgers. "But all of this is more or less training for the work we face in the coming years. War Activities is no short term obligation, but a continuing task, that in my opinion may run on for several years. For my part I am willing to consider it such and am ready to pledge myself and this organization to whatever may be required of us in the shape of things to come.

"If we are to live in a better world, we must help make it. Our Government saw fit to enlist us at the very outset of the war. I believe we must and should volunteer to remain in service, not only for the duration, but as long thereafter as our Government continues to consider us such a valuable adjunct to its efforts to unify the nation."

As if to emphasize further the war role played by the company, the MGM executives on Monday were told that "Tunisian Victory," the film on which Capra was co-producer and which is being presented jointly by the British and U. S. Governments, will be sold separately by MGM to assure quick circulation. The picture is slated to open day and date in New York and London on March 24. A further reminder came when Fred C. Quimby, head of the shorts department, announced that MGM will make two of the 26 Government shorts to be produced this year by the industry.

The seventh block of MGM's 1943-44 program will consist of five pictures, it was announced late at Monday's session of the Chicago sales executive meeting by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager. The five pictures, according to probable releasing order, are "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble," "Gaslight," "Meet the People," "Three Men in White," and "Two Girls and a Sailor."

Monogram Gets Loan

Monogram franchise holders, company executives, and others associated with the company have agreed to loan Monogram $252,113.89, repayable by the company within fifteen months by the issuance of 84,037 and 955/1000 shares of stock. When the new stock is issued total shares of the common will reach 500,000.

20th-Fox Tradeshow Held

Tradeshows for "Buffalo Bill" and "Four Jills in a Jeep" were held on Thursday in all exchange cities. "Buffalo Bill" is listed in Block 9 and is an April release, while "Four Jills in a Jeep" belongs in Block 8, with a March release date.

FILM TRAVEL-LOG

Herman Starr, Warner vice-president in charge of the company's music publishing interests, has gone to the coast with Mort Blumenstock and Sam Schneider for studio conferences.

Ned E. Depinet is back to the home office at RKO Radio after his trip to the coast on the behalf of the Red Cross campaign.

Jack Dietz, Monogram producer, returned to Hollywood last week-end from New York, where he went in search of story material.

Hugh Owen, Paramount eastern division manager, left New York early in the week for Boston to confer with William Erbb and A. M. Kane, Paramount New England executives.

Sol A. Schwartz, RKO western zone manager, and Bill Howard, head of the vaudeville booking department, left New York last week-end for points west—notably San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Nathan E. Goldstein, Springfield, Mass., circuit head, and Mrs. Goldstein held a reunion with their three soldier-sons in Washington, and stopped off in Manhattan before returning home.

Robert M. Gillham of Paramount is back from Washington, where he arranged a Constitution Hall preview for "The Story of Dr. Wassell" on April 1.

Small Town Theatres Emerge from Doldrums

That small towns drained by the draft and shift of war workers are recovering from the box-office headaches of last year was the finding of George A. Smith, Paramount western division manager, when he completed a swing this week through western exchange territories. Smith reported that good pictures were attracting large audiences everywhere in localities that were languishing six months ago. At that time, Smith said, the people who remained in war-drained towns were not in a mood to attend picture shows because families were broken up and young women were not accustomed to going to the theatre without escorts. Now both the economic situation and the mood of the public have changed.

"This is a very healthy condition for the entire motion picture industry and augurs well for the future," he added.

On the west coast theatre operators foresee a problem in handling the increase anticipated from the industrial and population growth of that region in the next few years, Smith declared. The feeling there is that after the final stage of the European war there will be a heavy concentration of war activity on the Pacific front and as a result this region will experience its greatest activity ever, particularly in manufacturing, military and shipping areas.

In addition to those observations, Smith noted during his trip the exhibitors' reaction that the industry is making a sincere effort to turn out good product, as reflected at the box-office. He reported specifically that never before have Paramount pictures enjoyed such wide acceptance by exhibitors and that "business for Paramount is excellent."

Smith conferred with exhibitors and Paramount sales staffs in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Denver, holding meetings in each exchange center. He was accompanied on the tour by Oscar A. Morgan, sales manager for short subjects and Paramount News, who also held sales meetings.

Columbia Division Managers In Line for Sales Prizes

Columbia has set aside special cash awards for division managers in the company's "Dates To Win" sales campaign, it was announced this week. The four division managers whose districts take from first to fourth place in the drive are eligible.

The Columbia district managers are: Nat Cohn, division manager, Metropolitan New York, Long Island, Upstate New York and Northern New Jersey; Carl Shalit for Albany, Buffalo, Detroit, Indianapolis, and St. Louis; Sam Moscow, representing Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Memphis, Oklahoma City and New Orleans; Sam Galanty for Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Washington; Jerome Safron in charge of Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle, and Ben Marcus for Des Moines, Kansas City, Minneapolis and Omaha.

Walter L. Stokes, Long Identified With Paramount, Dies in Atlanta

Walter L. Stokes, auditor for the Wilby-Kincey Theatre Circuit, with headquarters in Atlanta, died in that city last week. He was 56 years old. Funeral services were held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Old Greenwich, Conn.

Widely known in the industry, Stokes for many years was at the home office of Paramount Publix in New York, serving in the accounting department, and was transferred to the Wilby-Kincey organization in 1933

Seek Newspaper and Radio Cooperation in 'Cover Girl' Contest

Newspapers and radio stations are being lined up by Columbia exploiteers to sponsor, or cooperate in, a national search to find the "Cinderella Cover Girl of 1944" in connection with "Cover Girl." All cities playing the Technicolor production are invited to participate and submit their final choices to Columbia in New York for final judging.

Local winners will be wined and dined in their home towns and presented with a flock of gifts including clothes and a substantial war fund. The national winner, the "Cinderella Cover Girl of 1944," will be brought to New York by Columbia for a screen test, a Bradshaw Crandall portrait on a cover of Cosmopolitan and a contract as a model with the Harry Conover agency.

Proving that a good idea will get space, even in these days of newsprint shortage, Columbia's field men arranged for the contest to be sponsored, in connection with local pre-release date engagements of "Cover Girl," in the Washington, D. C., Times-Herald, which is playing up the search with extra large picture and story breaks; the Portland, Me., Herald Express; the Hartford, Conn., Times. In Richmond, Va., Radio Station WRVA is backing the contest with a constant flow of spot announcements. The Baltimore, Md., News-Post and the New Haven, Conn., Register are cooperating in their cities but are not sponsoring the contest. Washington alone reported over 1000 entrants in the first five days. Reports from all the participating cities indicate an overwhelming response from interested young ladies and the swains and families of others.

'Cover Girl' Is Theme of Saks' Fashion Show at Waldorf-Astoria

The much-publicized "Cover Girl" received urther attention this week in New York when aks Fifth Avenue, leading department store, resented "Cover Girl Fashions" at a luncheon show in the Sert Room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. Fashion correspondents and representatives of the metropolitan and trade press were among the guests at the show.

In addition to the fashion show-luncheon, Saks is devoting six of its Fifth Avenue windows, as well as newspaper advertisements, to "Cover Girl" fashions, with full credit to the picture.

Big Campaign on 'White Cliffs' In Magazines, and Key City Papers

Following a preview on "The White Cliffs of Dover," starring Irene Dunne with Alan Marshal, MGM will use a heavy-budget advertising and publicity campaign in leading national publications and key city newspapers in advance of release date. Preliminary print order of 260 is now being rushed through the laboratory to cover key city showings. Final print order for domestic and overseas will pass the 400 mark. Sidney Franklin produced, and Clarence Brown directed.

With a midnight opening, necessitating an extra feature showing at 3 a.m., as announced on the marquee, Monogram's "Where Are Your Children?" smashed all house records during the opening week at Warners' Stanton Theatre, Philadelphia. Manager Eddie Muehlman worked with Mark Freeland on campaign with WB publicity dept.

'Navy Way' to Get Impressive Sendoff

World premiere of Paramount's "The Navy Way," the William Pine-William Thomas production, on March 24 at the famed U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill., will be short-waved to America's fighting men on land and sea throughout the world. The broadcast of the patriotic ceremonies will be part of one of the most impressive radio send-offs ever given a film opening.

During the six-day period of the premiere occasion, six national broadcasts and ten local Chicago programs will be made with stars from Hollywood appearing as guests. The colorful opening ceremonies before thousands of bluejackets at the training base where the picture was filmed will be broadcast on the "Meet Your Navy" Blue Network show, going to 126 stations in the United States and 28 in Canada. High-ranking Navy officers will participate with the screen players, Robert Lowery and Jean Parker of the picture's cast, Jean Heather, Hillary Brooke and others in the program to be short-waved overseas.

After the broadcast, the stars will take part in a gala public premiere at nearby Waukegan.

Other coast-to-coast shows in which members of the premiere troupe will take part: The National Barn Dance, March 25, over NBC, which will originate from the auditorium at Great Lakes, with an audience of 5000 sailors; the Quiz Kids, March 26, on the Blue Network with Producer Pine and a player appearing; the CBS special Red Cross show, March 22 and the Don McNeil Breakfast Club, Blue Network program, on March 21 and 23. Star appearances at local Chicago stations will be made on a number of bond and other war service programs.

Judy Garland Cover Painting

A painting of Judy Garland appears on the cover of the April issue of Cosmopolitan. With Judy now making "Meet Me in St. Louis," showmen have a tie-up opportunity. Tieups can also be made on Judy Garland films now being exhibited.

Wide-Awake Peters Uses Ration Angles To Exploit 'Rationing'

When the chance comes to tie a picture to something that is happening in the news every wide-awake manager is sure to take full advantage of the opportunity. And that is what George Peters of Loew's in Richmond, Va., certainly did when he played the Wallace Beery-Marjorie Main feature, "Rationing." As you probably know, in the picture Wally has one hell of a time trying to figure out the ration stamps as the owner of a grocery store, and has to go to Marjorie for advice, much against his will. This is something everybody can understand, for most consumers need advice too.

This was a direct tieup to begin with, but Peters didn't stop there. The recent introduction of tokens made the subject of rationing not only news, but spot news. So, with the help of MGM Exploiteer Tom Baldridge and the theatre staff, he proceeded to kill two birds with one stone: he got his theatre publicity and also served the public. A grocer's counter was set up in the lobby a week before playdate, and this was manned by volunteer workers from the Richmond ration board. The workers gave out information to all comers concerning ration buying, budgeting, and the use of the new tokens. Naturally, the background of the counter was filled with stills from the picture and ad copy. Naturally, too, many of the people who took advantage of this service also drifted in to see the picture. As a result, the Richmond News-Leader used 40 inches of art and story on the stunt two days before the opening.

Merchants also cooperated strongly on the rationing angle. Richmond Food Stores distributed five hundred 14x22 two-color display cards, showing the following copy: "Your best buy in ration foods are at Richmond Food Stores —Laughs are not rationed in 'Rationing,' with Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main at Loew's." Safeway Stores made up their own 22x28s featuring reproduction of a still and suggesting that any Safeway grocer would be glad to assist in explaining the token system. The Sunlight Laundry chipped in with inserts for the laundry packages, using the occasion to advise calling their drivers early.

Before the opening two radio programs were arrranged, calling attention to rationing. One was a contest in which the theatre organist played numbers indicating unrationed articles for the listeners to identify, while the other was an interview between Drama Critic Edith Lindeman and the local ration board chairman. It was pointed out, of course, that one of the things unrationed were laughs, which the listeners could find in the picture.

The theme that laughs are unrationed was also used in a series of window cards in shoe stores, the tieup being with unrationed shoes.

Another tieup with the ration board consisted of letters mailed to different organizations calling attention to the token system and also to the picture.

Last, but not least, Peters fell back on the street ballyhoo. He had an old rubber tire rolled on the street and carried on buses and street cars two days before and after the opening. In the center of the tire was a card with this copy: "This is rationed, but laughs are not! See Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main in 'Rationing' at Loew's."

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY RED CROSS WEEK MARCH 23-29

Program Exchange

Maisel's Magazine Program Good for Small-Town Houses; Some Calendar Observations

It's a beautiful morning! Here it is, early in March, and already there are signs of spring in the air. A bright sun and a cloudless welkin (sky to you) stirs our adventurous spirit. Contrast this ideal New York weather with that of Houston, Texas, as reported by Interstate Theatres' unofficial weather observer, Jack Jackson. On February 29, according to a newspaper clipping forwarded by Jackson, the temperature hit a new low of 47 degrees. Since we have no thermometer, we can't say for sure, but we're willing to guess that the temperature right now is close to the sixties here in New York. Jackson is considering discarding his threadbare mittens and moving south, probably to some region close to the equator. Why not head up this way, where the sun smiles brightly on you, the gentle breezes stir your platinum locks and good old Mother Nature bids you a warm welcome?

Last week we mentioned the visit of Sydney Goldstone, who was in town from Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. More on that subject. Goldstone informed us that Canada's paper restriction edict had been postponed. He is planning a small bi-weekly program probably of vest-pocket size. We shall look forward to seeing the first issue, if and when he decides to go through with his plan.

A Working Man's Town

Peterborough, where Goldstone manages the Centre, an independent theatre, is a town of 30,000 people engaged in diversified industries. It's a working man's town, he says, and therefore week-ends are the best show-going times. Besides the Centre, which operates on a second-run policy with twice weekly changes, Peterborough has two other houses operated by Famous Players. As in most situations these days, business is good. It was nice talking to Goldstone, and we hope to receive programs and exploitation reports from him at frequent intervals in the future. By the way, theatremen issuing small vest pocket-size programs would be doing Goldstone a good turn by mailing him a sample. Just address him thus: Mr. Sydney Goldstone, Centre Theatre, 346 George Street, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. He'll appreciate it.

Through a letter received from Dennis Maisel, manager of the Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas, we learn about a new program Maisel has introduced in his situation. Called the Ritz-Ette, it's the news-style house organ, employing (we assume) press book scene mats and publicity stories. Its size, at present: folded, five by eight and one-half inches; open, eight and one-half inches by approximately nine and one-half inches. The next issue, Maisel tells us, will be larger in size, and he is going out after some advertising to defray the cost.

Sets a Plan for Small Towns

Referring to the Ritz-Ette as a "magazine-program," the Ritz theatreman writes: "I think this may be of interest to other small-town exhibitors, as it sets a plan for small towns, where there is no great newspaper coverage of motion pictures. This magazine helps to keep alive interest in these situations, and the cost of production is only $8.50 a thousand, including mats. However, the cost has been brought lower by the fact that we use the back page, as is, for our weekly advertisement in the local newspaper."

Notes on Your Screen Favorites

Red Skelton, "King Louis" in "Du Barry Was a Lady," was born in Vincennes, Ind., on July 18. In the course of his varied career he has been a packer, circus clown, burlesque comedian, tent show performer and vaudeville star. He started in show business by playing show boats on the Mississippi and trouped in vaudeville all over the country. He went into pictures in 1939, and has played in "Flight Command," "Lady Be Good," "People Vs. Dr. Kildare," "Whistling in the Dark," "Whistling in Dixie," "Panama Hattie," and "Ship Ahoy."

Would Look the Same Way

Whenever Jim Owen's calendar reaches us from Branson, Mo., it looks as though it had been through a ticket chopper. After all, we'd probably look much the same way if we made that same trip all the way to New York. A study of the attractions for March reveals an interesting observation or two. For instance, Owen plays his biggest attractions on the first three days of the week. One wouldn't quarrel with such choices as "Wintertime," "So Proudly We Hail" and "What a Woman!". But the metropolitan skeptics will raise their eyebrows and look down their noses at the other attraction booked for the best days of the week: Lum and Abner in "So This Is Washington." What these skeptics don't stop to realize is that the adventures of these Pine Ridge characters are heard four or five nights a week by millions of radio listeners, and the majority of these listeners are in the average communities that dot the nation from New York to San Francisco. Thus, outside the metropolitan centers, the names "Lum and Abner" mean money at the box-office. And logically, enough, Owen books their latest picture on the days that other big box-office attractions play. By the way, we hope none of our sophisticated New York friends read this, but—sssh—we listen to Lum and Abner every evening they broadcast. We find their rustic humor delightful and refreshing.

Another thing we noticed on Owen's calendar: A revival of "The County Chairman," which Will Rogers made early in 1935, is announced as a midnight show. Rogers' pictures were always enjoyable in peacetime, but his wise, homely philosophy, as conveyed in the dozen or so pictures he made prior to his untimely death, should be especially welcome in these trying times.

From behind a secret panel or something our editor-in-chief unearthed a batch of programs that came his way back in the early thirties. We've had a lot of fun looking them over, and have found that many of them could well serve as patterns for today's house organs. We'd like to discuss them more fully, but since our allotted space is fast giving out, we'll have to postpone the discussion until next week. We hope you'll join us. Meanwhile, send us copies of your programs.

'Curie' Publicized in Childs Menu 'Notes'

"Madame Curie" received extra publicity in New York through mention in "Footnotes to Childs," a daily human-interest column in paper-strip form attached to menus of the Childs restaurants.

Experiencing a sense of futility in comparing his purchase of an $18.75 war bond with the cost of one battleship ($100,000,000), the writer, who signs himself "John Galahad of Childs," was reminded of "Madame Curie"; "There I saw the Curies with their bare hands, shoveling, heating and refining tons of pitchblende to produce on a saucer a tiny stain that was and is radium. Thereupon I was again impressed with the reflection that in this life every action, however tiny, has its inevitable reaction . . ."

Galahad, in concluding his discourse, reproduced Madame Curie's Declaration of Faith:

"Even now, after 25 years of intensive research, we feel there is a great deal still to be done. We have made many discoveries. Pierre Curie, in the suggestions we have found in his notes and in thoughts he has expressed to me, has helped to guide us to them. But not one of us can do much, yet each of us, perhaps, can catch some gleam of knowledge, which modest and insufficient of itself, may add to man's dream of truth. It is by these small candles in our darkness that we see before us, little by little, the dim outlines of that great plan that shapes the universe. And I am among those who think that for this reason, science has great beauty, and with its great spiritual strength will in time cleanse this world of its evils, its ignorance, its poverty, diseases, wars and heartaches."

The thought introduced by Galahad, linking war bonds with the pitchblende sequences in "Madame Curie" might well be used editorially in other situations. And the Declaration of Faith might also be used as the basis for an editorial or a merchant-theatre cooperative institutional ad. Furthermore it might well be reproduced in heralds and throwaways.

Marines to Shane's Rescue

Ahead of his playdate on "Salute to the Marines," Don Shane of the Paramount Theatre, Omaha, had Marine officers write special letters to leading stores asking for their cooperation, landed several cooperative ads, got the mayor's permission to use posters on 250 downtown light poles.

Film Premiere and Opening of Radio Studios is Colorful Event

A premiere in keeping with the gay colorfulness of "Lady in the Dark" ushered in recently the first Northwest showing of the Technicolor production and the grand opening of the beautiful Radio City Theatre, Minneapolis, and the new studios of radio station KSTP, Twin Cities outlet of NBC, located in the theatre.

A record-breaking crowd extending full four blocks was on hand for the 6:30 p.m. opening, and the 4000-seat theatre was filled to capacity for the two premiere showings.

The distinguished premiere audience included high officials of the state of Minnesota and the Twin Cities, business and industry leaders and motion picture, newspaper and radio executives. Among the important film industry executives present were Leonard H. Goldenson, Paramount vice-president in charge of theatre operations, and Sam Dembow, Paramount theatre department executive, who came from New York; John Balaban, executive of Balaban & Katz, Chicago; Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-States Theatres, Des Moines, and Ben Marcus, Columbia Pictures division manager, of Kansas City. John J. Friedl, president of Minnesota Amusement Co., which operates the theatre, was host to the visitors.

The dedicatory program was conducted by the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association and had a number of special entertainment features. There was a 30-piece orchestra under the direction of Leonard Leigh, KSTP musical director, and a mixed chorus of 12 voices.

Network Program Salutes 'Lady'

A coast-to-coast network program on NBC saluted KSTP, the theatre and "Lady in the Dark," with several announcements during the 50-minute program, which originated in Chicago. The opening was also saluted by WCCO, outlet of CBS in Minneapolis.

Among the opening features was the initial presentation of "The Minute's News Flash," a 60-second resume of up-to-the-minute news broadcast by KSTP over the theatre's public address system. This will be a regular feature, presented following the newsreel.

Future promotion for the Northwest's largest entertainment center also calls for close cooperation between the theatre and KSTP, in an arrangement worked out between John J. Friedl and Stanley E. Hubbard, president and general manager of the station. With the opening of Radio City, the station started a series of tours through its new quarters, with demonstrations of radio broadcasting and television. All advertising of the theatre carries the line: "Be sure to visit KSTP Radio City studios."

Charles Winchell, advertising and publicity director for the theatre, put on an outstanding selling campaign which made use of every showmanship angle. A large newspaper advertising campaign was started two weeks in advance. Every available radio spot was turned over by KSTP for three weeks, plugging the opening and "Lady in the Dark." The theatre also used considerable paid radio time on the picture.

Important Stores Use Tieups

The large Dayton Company department store used radio, newspapers and window displays plugging the picture from the fashion angle. A "Lady in the Dark" style show was staged by the store, featuring original costumes worn by Ginger Rogers and other players in the picture. All important stores devoted windows to fashion tie-ups on the picture.

Numerous business houses saluted the opening in a full-page cooperative advertisement in the Minneapolis Sunday Tribune, featuring fashion and other tie-ups, including a Ginger Rogers coiffure. A four-color half-page ad broke in the Sunday Tribune rotogravure section.

The advance campaign was also outstanding from a publicity standpoint. The Minneapolis Star Journal carried an editorial saluting the theatre as "one of the finest in the country." All newspapers ran style art layouts featuring the glamorous gowns, plus news and feature stories and 4-star reviews.

Radio Aids 'None Shall Escape'

George McKenna, manager, and Bill Brereton, publicity man, went all-out in an extensive campaign to welcome "None Shall Escape" to the Basil's Lafayette Theatre in Buffalo, N. Y. In addition to over 100 radio spot announcements, Station WGR conducted a letter contest and also aired a roundtable discussion, participated in by local notables, on "How Shall We Treat the Nazi War Criminals After the War." The large Polish population of the city participated via radio, newspapers and the circulation of "None Shall Escape" petitions.

Paramount theatre executives present for the opening of the Radio City Theatre in Minneapolis, which featured the northwest premiere of "Lady in the Dark," included: (l.-r.) Harry French, Minneapolis Amusement Co.; J. W. Finely, director of legal department, Minneapolis Amusement Co.; Sam Dembow of New York, Paramount theatre department executive; John J. Friedl, president Minnesota Amusement Co., operator of the house; C. W. Perrine, treasurer and comptroller, Minneapolis Amusement Co.; Leonard Goldenson of New York, Paramount vice-president in charge of theatre operations; John Balaban, executive of Balaban & Katz circuit, Chicago. The theatre houses the new broadcasting studios of KSTP.

Urge 'Oscars' for Best Theatre Advertising

A proposal to award "Oscars" for best theatre advertisements, best exploitation and publicity campaigns was voiced in Los Angeles recently at a luncheon meeting of all owners and first-run theatre managers, as well as film exchange heads.

In offering the suggestion, Harlan G. Palmer, publisher of the Hollywood Citizen-News, said: "Theatre advertising has improved, and the men who prepare it are entitled to recognition in this industry. I would like to suggest a series of annual awards by theatremen themselves for accomplishments in this field."

The meeting was in the form of a get-acquainted luncheon to welcome to Hollywood two new first-run managers, and brought together 75 Los Angeles and Hollywood showmen. Welcomes were extended to John Gallagher McManus, new manager of Warners' Hollywood Theatre, and to Robert Corbin, who was given a similar post at the Pantages. Hosts were Rodney A. Pantages, Louis J. Halper and B. H. Wallerstein of the Warner circuit.

McManus came to Hollywood after 13 years at the Midland in Kansas City. Corbin was formerly operating supervisor of the 16 key theatres in Detroit.

Zabin's Leap Year Stunt Good For Duplication in 1948

Because February 29th comes only once every four years, James B. Zabin, general manager of Cinema Circuit Corporation, decided to do "something extra" in his theatres, wherever possible. Reports Zabin:

"In some theatres we gave each lady a 'leap year flower with the best wishes of the management.' The ladies were delighted. In one theatre we gave a beautiful corsage to the youngest service bride in the audience. In another theatre we had a 'Leap Year Contest' and offered girls over 18 a war bond for the best or funniest proposal.

"It all added up to extra good will. If you let this Leap Year pass without extra effort, watch out for February 29th, 1948."

That may seem like a long time away, but it'll roll around before you know it.

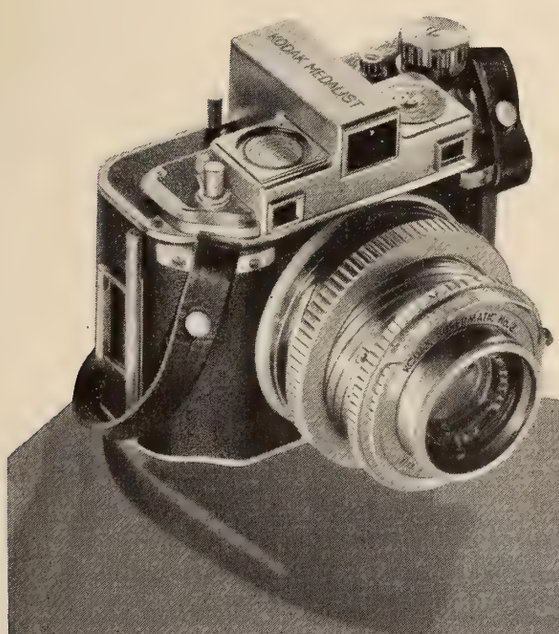
The Navy Commissioned Kodak Medalist "as is"



IN THIS WAR, the camera has full military status. From Admirals down, Navy men carry a Kodak Medalist as casually as binoculars. It is the impartial fact-gatherer and reporter of action. You have seen plenty of Medalist shots among the terrific pictures released to newspapers and magazines. But you've only seen a fraction.

When the war broke, the Medalist had just been created—for civilian camera enthusiasts. Navy experts tried it out. It looked and acted "Navy"—clean, precise, inherently fine—structurally as sound as a battle wagon, compact as a submarine.

The Navy bought every Medalist available "as is," ordered production stepped up. Since then, wherever units of our fleet have operated—from PT boats to capital ships and aircraft—the Medalist has seen action. Twice as many were on duty the second year as the first.

After the war, the battle-conditioned Medalist will be at your service in civilian life. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N.Y.

A fistful of efficiency, the compact Medalist produces full-scale pictures—2¼ x 3¼ inches. The lens, Kodak Ektar f/3.5—incorporating Kodak's revolutionary new optical glass—assures pictures of incomparable clarity and brilliance, either in black and white or full color.

Lens and Kodak Supermatic Shutter are mounted in a unique helical gear focusing tube which provides hairline focusing, with unequaled rigidity. All operating controls, in "shooting" position, are at the fingertips. The eyepiece of the split-field range finder is directly below the view finder.

The Medalist, optically and mechanically, is an achievement of the Kodak experts responsible for the latest gunfire control apparatus used by our armed forces.

urging of her grandfather, an old showman, who also works in the store. She meets Jimmy Lydon, young playwright who is trying to sell his musical show script built around the sons and daughters of show people who hang out in the drug store. A screwy producer is wangled into buying the show and the kids finally have their big chance with the tryout performance at an Army camp where Jimmy is stationed following his induction.

Comment: With more considerate handling this picture could have emerged as a very good little musical but the director and script writers to all appearances permitted their imagination to go too far afield to suit the discriminating audience's sense of reality. As a result of this deficiency the film provides light entertainment but fails to build up a quality of sympathy or realism which is so essential in creating enthusiasm for a picture to take it out of the run-of-the-mill class. Jane Withers and Jimmy Lydon are both very capable performers with a box-office following in the community theatres and do their utmost to save a very uninspiring story idea. Taking the picture for what it is, "My Best Gal" provides a good box-office title, two star names with Craven and Pangborn for support and a satisfactory show for booking in the dual feature spots with a stronger partner of more substantial dramatic character.

The Lady and the Monster

Republic Horror Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A gripping, absorbing horror tale of the Class A variety that will provide a full measure of wartime "escapist" entertainment for your patrons.

Cast: Vera Hhruba Ralston, Richard Arlen, Erich von Stroheim, Helen Vinson, Mary Nash, Sidney Blackmer, Janet Martin, Bill Henry, Charles Cane, Juanita Quigley, Josephine Dillon, Antonio Triana, Lola Montes. Credits: Associate Producer-Director, George Sherman. Screenplay by Dane Lussier and Frederick Kohner. Based on the novel, "Donovan's Brain," by Curt Siodmak. Director of photography, John Alton. Special effects, Theodore Lydecker. Art direction, Russell Kimball. Musical score, Walter Scharf.

Plot: In his Arizona mansion, Erich von Stroheim, self-centered scientist, has the assistance of Richard Arlen in conducting experiments with an Arlen-invented machine which records the activity and possibility of human life in the brain after death. Vera Hruba Ralston, daughter of von Stroheim's deceased colleague, objects to this inhuman desecration which the scientist passionately defends. The brain used for the experiments, it is learned, belonged to a famous financier, Donovan; and his widow and her sweetheart, searching for the financier's hidden fortune, hope the experiments will reveal it. To receive messages from the brain through mental telepathy, Arlen submerges his own personality, soon is dominated by the brain. He goes to Los Angeles, where the Donovan influence bids him make withdrawals from the Donovan fortune, on secret deposit in a bank there, to free a young man convicted of murder. He nearly kills a witness who would prevent the man's freedom, but when the brain back in Arizona is drugged by Mary Nash, a jealous neurotic, Arlen regains his own personality. Returning to Arizona, he tries to destroy the brain, succeeds when von Stroheim is killed by Mary. Arlen proves the California murderer's innocence, but must himself serve a term because of the unlawful experiment. His term is short, and Vera is waiting for him when he comes out.

Comment: Just in case the title leads you to believe that this is the stereotyped, everyday horror tale to which you have become accustomed, let this be a warning: you are off the beam. "The Lady and the Monster," which boasts not a single fur-bearing made-up human in its cast, is definitely Class A product that will provide gripping, absorbing entertainment for your patrons. Good enough to top most double bills, here is a prime example of a murder mystery being invested with an eerie, fascinating story easily developed, rapidly achieving an horrific momentum that carries it to a smashing climax. So well produced and directed are the entire proceedings that what otherwise might be a bizarre and utterly fantastic plot attains a strong measure of credibility and reality which overpowers the spectator's conviction that nothing like this could ever happen. Cast in her first important dramatic role, Vera Hruba Ralston projects it with a full, potent personality. In one of the choicest assignments of his career, Richard Arlen delivers a forceful characterization of one evilly dominated by another's brain. As the diabolical, self-centered scientist, von Stroheim is at home in a baleful, warped role, though his performance must take second place to those of Miss Ralston and Mr. Arlen. "The Lady and the Monster" provides a full measure of wartime "escapist" entertainment for your patrons, and it will profit at the box-office through word-of-mouth comment.

Four Jills In A Jeep

20th Century-Fox Musical 89 mins.

(Nat'l Release, March)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Taken from some of the actual experiences encountered by Kay Francis, Martha Raye, Carole Landis and Mitzi Mayfair; this is an entertaining picture for the whole family. It is not a War Picture.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With the draw of the names and the proper exploitation, this should be one of the tops at the box-office.

Cast: Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye, Mitzi Mayfair, Jimmy Dorsey and His Orchestra, John Harvey, Phil Silvers, Dick Haymes, Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda, George Jessel, Lester Matthews, Glenn Langan, Paul Harvey, Miles Mander, Winifred Harris, Mary Servoss, B. S. Pully. Credits: Directed by William A. Seiter. Screenplay by Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Snag Werris. Story by Froma Sand and Fred Niblo, Jr., based on actual experiences. Director of photography, Peverell Marley. Musical direction by Emil Newman and Charles Henderson. Produced by Irving Starr.

Plot: Four Hollywood stars leave on a tour to entertain the boys overseas. They get to London, where one meets and falls in love with a flier; another meets the man she quarreled with at home and the other two have minor love affairs. They eventually land in North Africa where they continue to entertain, and also help with the wounded, until they are sent back home.

Comment: By taking actual experiences encountered by Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair while they were overseas entertaining our boys, and adding some extra embellishments, Fox has turned out a picture that is crammed with entertainment for every theatregoer in the nation. Very little of the hardships they endured is shown, there are just a few spots where one sees how they lived and how they pitched in when necessity arose. Most of the picture consists of the numbers they did to amuse the men with their dancing, singing and clowning. By bringing in the radio show, "Command Performance," the one produced expressly for our boys, the picture gives you a shot of Betty Grable singing Cuddle Up; of Alice Faye singing You'll Never Know, and of Carmen Miranda singing I Like You Very Much. Even Carole Landis sings—and very well. It introduces to the picture-going public Dick Haymes, the radio singer, and Jimmy Dorsey and His Orchestra do their bit of entertaining. There's a romance running through the story that ties up with the actual romance Carole Landis found in England. All-in-all it's good musical entertainment that everyone will enjoy, although some may be disappointed not to see more of what their boys are doing. One thing is certain—no one can call this a war picture, so be sure to make this clear in all your exploitation. The deft direction of William A. Seiter keeps the action continually rolling and the musical numbers well interspersed. Credit goes to Producer Irving Starr for a production that is bound to be box-office. Newspaper headlines telling of the girls' experiences could be used for lobby display. Distribute imprinted heralds calling attention to these true experiences and tying it up with the picture.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Victor Young Scores 'Frenchman's Greek'; Vanguard Buys 'Houdini'; Myron Brinig to Write Durbin Film Screenplay

Norman Taurog has returned from Clinton, N. Y., where he and Bob Considine conferred with Father Ambrose Hyland on the filming of the story based on the Church of the Good Thief, built by convicts in Dannemora Prison at Clinton. Picture will be made for MGM by John Considine, Jr.

Henry Sokal, for 18 years an independent producer in Europe, has been signed by Monogram to produce "The Face of Marble," horror story adapted for the screen by Frank B. Wisbar. Sokal specialized in horror films in Europe.

Victor Young, who wrote the music score for "For Whom the Bell Tolls," and a 57-piece orchestra are scoring "Frenchman's Creek," the most lavish picture ever produced by Paramount. The story, laid in 1668, tells of the love of a French pirate, played by Arturo de Cordova, for a high born English Lady, Joan Fontaine. Filmed in Technicolor, the picture was directed by Mitchell Leisen.

Jack Lannon, specialist fog and rain-maker, has been signed to handle the special weather effects which play an important part of the atmospheric London setting for RKO's "None But The Lonely Heart," new Cary Grant starrer.

Four real-life soldiers make their film debut in 20th Century-Fox's "In the Meantime, Darling," the Otto Preminger film which stars Jeanne Crain, Frank Latimore, Gale Robbins and Stanley Prager.

Angelus-United Artists' feature co-starring Linda Darnell and George Sanders has been changed again to "Goodbye My Love." Picture, previously tagged "The Moon Their Mistress," was retitled "Strange Confession." Based on Anton Chekov's only full-length novel, "The Shooting Party," it will be released in April.

Preparing for the start of "Here Is Your War," Lester Cowan has engaged William McGarry as production manager and Archie Stout as chief cameraman. Picture calls for several location trips to Army camps, as it is based on stories of Ernie Pyle.

Harold Clurman, well known in the American theatre, has been signed by RKO to a contract calling for his services as writer, producer and director. His first assignment will be announced shortly. He founded the famous Group Theatre and as its head produced and directed many outstanding shows.

Shooting has already started on the aircraft carrier flight deck, especially constructed on the back lot of 20th Century-Fox for "Wing and a Prayer," epic of our carrier-based Navy. Footage shot by Director Henry Hathaway aboard an aircraft carrier will be matched by scenes made in the studio.

PRC's big-budget picture, "Minstrel Man," the Benny Fields vehicle, resumed shooting after a four-week layoff, with a change in director and two members of the cast. Wallace W. Fox, stricken by flu, has relinquished the directorial reins to Joseph H. Lewis. Gladys George replaced Binnie Barnes, and Judy Clark replaced Gerra Young, the studio's coloratura soprano, who got the chicken pox.

What is said to be an all-time record for the amount of music incorporated in a feature-length motion picture was announced by Mahlon Merrick, musical director for Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1944."

"Houdini," an original screen story of the greatest of magicians, written by Dore Schary and Frank O'Connor, has been purchased by Vanguard Films, Inc. No casting has been done as yet, but production has been scheduled to start in May after completion of "Double Furlough," Schary's first for Vanguard.

Myron Brinig, well known novelist and author of "The Sisters" and "May Flavin," has been signed by Producer Felix Jackson to write the screenplay of "Strangers," the Deanna Durbin-Charles Boyer drama for Universal.

Robert Florey has checked into Warners to start his new contract. He will prepare "Henrietta the Eighth," a musical comedy which will again reunite the director with stars Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning. Robert Buckner, who produced "The Desert Song," their last joint effort, will also produce this.

Percy Kilbride joins Beulah Bondi, who has the top role in Columbia's "Soldiers in Slacks." The picture is being directed by William Castle, and has Jeff Donnell and Jess Barker in the chief supporting roles.

Franz Waxman's Gabriel Symphony, composed for the score of the Jack Benny starrer, "The Horn Blows at Midnight," will be introduced on the concert stage on the second night of the summer season of the Philharmonic orchestra of Philadelphia. Waxman is currently scoring "Mr. Skeffington" at Warners.

Bob Haymes recorded Let's Fall in Love for Columbia's "Mr. Winkle Goes to War." Used originally in a picture of the same name by Columbia ten years ago, the song received a new arrangement by Morris Stoloff.

PRC will use full natural color in one of their new pictures, "Enchanted Forest," from an original by Gilbert Wright, son of Harold Bell Wright. Film will be produced by Jack Schwarz, with a locale of the Redwoods Forest. Production, it is said, will start in midsummer and a long location trip is planned.

Greer Garson is being tested at MGM in make-up for age 84. The picture which shows her as she may appear so many years from now is "Mrs. Parkington" and encompasses six colorful periods of American history and presents Miss Garson at ages ranging from 18 to 84.

Lambert Hillyer has been signed to direct "Hangman's Law," next Monogram western to star Johnny Mack Brown with Raymond Hatton in the cast and Charles J. Bigelow supervising production.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

Frank Sinatra is making his second picture, "Manhattan Serenade," for RKO. Let's go there and see what's going on.

We enter a night club; a lovely place, all white with stage curtains and other decorative touches in light blue. There we find Sinatra, Gloria DeHaven, George Murphy and those two comics, Wally Brown and Allan Carney, seated at one of the tables.

They're all set for a scene in which Miss DeHaven, not knowing Sinatra can sing, invites him to do so in order to embarrass him. He's a small town boy who has come to the big city to see what happened to his play, and Murphy, who was handling it for him, has kept him there because he's used his money for other ventures. Miss DeHaven is Murphy's girl-friend, and she is the featured entertainer at this particular club.

She's doing a turn in an embroidered white net outfit that has little on bottom and much less on top. A pair of short trunks show through the peek-a-boo slit skirt and the bra top stays up without shoulder straps. On her head she's wearing a Homburg white sailor to match, with feathers attached to the back which cascade forward over the crown. She carries a microphone through which she sings . . . at the same time dancing around the tables.

Director Tim Whelan starts the rehearsal with her at the table next to the one where the men are seated. All around the place are hundreds of extras, most of them in formal clothes, while over to one side is the chorus. They walk through the scene wearing cute costumes made of bath towels wrapped around them like sarongs, with smaller ones draped around their heads. They look like we'd like to in the same costumes (at home).

Although the director has ordered everyone quiet, the noise is still going on over at their table. It doesn't subside for quite a while, for the comics, and Murphy and Sinatra, are indulging in a good deal of byplay of their own . . . and enjoying it, as one can see.

Finally everything settles down and the word goes around that this is a "take." Miss DeHaven starts by singing her song into the mike and whirling around the tables towards the one the boys are at. When she gets there, Murphy introduces her to Sinatra. He says something to her about her singing . . . and she, challenged, dares him to sing, which he does . . . much to the surprise of the hecklers and Miss DeHaven. (Certainly not to us, for we were hoping this would happen when we came.)

We get a chance to hear quite a few repeats before Whelan okays the "take." Then we go over to meet them all. On our way out we decide it was nice meeting them, especially Sinatra, who turned out to be a swell guy.

Until next week.

Ann Lewis

Signed to Write Screenplays

World Famous Pictures has signed Paul Castleton to write the screenplays of its "Son of Robin Hood" features which will be produced for major company release. Castleton is the author of the novel by that name. Clifford Sanforth will supervise the productions, the first of which will start within a few months.

Durbin, Paige Record Songs

Deanna Durbin and Robert Paige have recorded their Jerome Kern original songs for Universal's Technicolor production, "Can't Help Singing," which will be directed by Frank Ryan. Eight numbers were sung by Miss Durbin and Paige, individually and as duets.

Bellamy Signed for 'Guest'

After extensive negotiations, Hunt Stromberg has arranged for the release of Ralph Bellamy from the Broadway play, "Tomorrow the World," and will use him in the leading male role opposite Anne Baxter in "Guest in the House." Lewis Milestone, who will direct the picture, and Lowell Calvert, Stromberg's Eastern representative, worked out the deal from the New York end, and Stromberg and Bert Allenberg, Bellamy's representative, from Hollywood. The picture is schedule to start this week, but Bellamy will not report until March 22.

Rogell Assigns 14 Features

With the recent addition of Frank Strayer and Adrian Scott to the ranks of producers at RKO Executive Producer Sid Rogell has completed the assignment of 14 features to be produced under his supervision within the next three months. Maurice Geraghty has three; Val Lewton has four; Herman Schlom, two; John Auer, two; Adrian Scott, two; and Frank Strayer, one.

Diplomat's Daughter in Film

Si Lan Chen, who plays Philomena Wang in "The Keys of the Kingdom," 20th Century-Fox special, is the daughter of the famous diplomat, Eugene Chen, Minister from China. Apparently the Chinese actress enjoys the diplomatic status of her father, for two other Chinese roles, those of Philomena and Hosanna Wang are villainous roles, while the one she plays is more friendly and benevolent.

Janet Martin and Mary Lee, Republic starlets; H. J. Yates, Sr., Dale Evans, singing star, and Roy Rogers were among those present at a recent party held at Eaton's Rancho in Hollywood in honor of Michael O'Shea upon completion of his first picture for Republic, "Man From Frisco."

Selznick Studio Reorganizes Publicity and Advertising

Daniel T. O'Shea, president of Vanguard Films, and executive director of the Selznick Studio, has announced the expansion of Vanguard Films and the Selznick press department to meet the demands of a greatly enlarged production program.

Heading the new setup as director of publicity will be Don King, currently assistant to Whitney Bolton at Columbia and formerly with Warners and Paramount. Cameron Shipp, assistant publicity director for Warners, will join the organization as publicity director for Vanguard Films, working under King's supervision. George Thomas, Jr., moves over from Universal. John Harkins, who has been publicity director for Vanguard, goes to New York as Eastern publicity representative.

All of the present publicity staff of Vanguard Films will be retained: Hy Daab in charge of advertising, Dee Lawrence as magazine contact and fashion editor, Harry Mines as unit man, Joe Polonsky as planter.

Benny Signs Warner Contract

Screen and Radio Comedian Jack Benny has been signed by Warner Bros. to a term contract. Having recently completed "The Horn Blows at Midnight," Benny will appear in a new picture to go before the cameras in July. He is the fourth "name" personality to join the Warner ranks within the past few weeks. Others: Joan Crawford, Barbara Stanwyck, Rosalind Russell.

New Pacts for Blair, Briskin

Option of Janet Blair, who recently finished a co-starring role with Cary Grant in "Once Upon a Time," has been renewed by Columbia. In "Tonight and Every Night," she will co-star with Rita Hayworth. The studio also signed Irving Briskin, producer, to a new 3-year contract. This starts him off on a new hunt for stories and plays for film production as well as for talent.

Title for Remington Picture

"The Old West" will be the title of the picture to be made by Producers Corporation of America, whose purchase of all rights to the story of the life of Frederic Remington was announced last week. The story will involve all the action of the frontier days of 1880. Budget is set at $1,300,000.

Advance Dope (SR)

DETECTIVE KITTY O'DAY (Mono.) Mystery. Principals: Jean Parker, Peter Cookson, Tim Ryan, Veda Ann Borg, Ed Gargan, Douglas Fowley. Director, William Beaudine. Plot: Two lovers work for a man whose undercover work is handling stolen bonds and securities. When this man is found murdered, they are naturally suspected of the crime. They start a search for clues and come across two other murders before the culprit is captured.

SEVENTH CROSS (MGM) Drama. Principals: Spencer Tracy, Signe Hasso, Hume Cronyn, Steve Geray, Herbert Rudley, Kurt Katch. Director, Fred Zinnemann. Plot: This is the story of the successful escape of one of seven fugitives from a German concentration camp in the fall of 1936, when Hitler was already in power, but war had not yet begun. The concentration camps were fast filling with German citizens who rejected the Nazi creed. One by one the prisoners are captured, but this one, with the help of kind strangers, manages to escape to Holland. Before he leaves he pledges his return to pay back the people who have "healed" him.

SINCE YOU WENT AWAY (UA) Drama. Principals: Claudette Colbert, Joseph Cotten, Monty Woolley, Shirley Temple, Jennifer Jones, Robert Walker. Director, John Cromwell. Plot: Taken from the best-seller of the same name, this is the story of an American housewife living in a small midwestern town, who had to take over the reins of the household when her husband joined Uncle Sam's forces. She had a grown daughter to help with her romantic problems; a teen-aged miss who needed handling and other everyday issues. To add to all this, she had the additional problem of an old retired Colonel whom she took in as a boarder, for the financial help he contributed.

LAW MEN (Mono.) Western. Principals: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton, Jan Wiley, Kirby Grant, Robert Frazer. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Plot: Two U. S. Marshals arrive secretly in a town, to investigate various bank and stage holdups. One represents himself as a shoemaker and the other manages to join a gang of outlaws. They meet secretly and work out a plan whereby the townspeople help them make the arrests.

JUNGLE WOMAN (Univ.) Horror. Principals: Acquanetta, J. Carrol Naish, Evelyn Ankers, Milburn Stone, Lois Collier, Richard Davis. Director, Reginald LeBorg. Plot: At a coroner's inquest, a doctor tells his story about the killing of a young girl whose body was found on the grounds of his sanitarium. She had appeared suddenly, at a circus, after the disappearance of an ape. She had all animal instincts and when she attempted to kill the doctor's daughter he accidentally gave her an overdose of adrenalin, in trying to subdue her. He is acquitted.

HIDDEN VALLEY OUTLAWS (Rep.) Western. Principals: Bill Elliott, George Hayes, Anne Jeffreys, Roy Barcroft, Kenne Duncan. Director, Howard Bretherton. Plot: In the early days of the Southwest, the government issued to war veterans certain papers called Head Rights, which allowed these men to settle and claim ownership on any unoccupied land. These Head Rights were as negotiable as money, and often fell into the hands of unscrupulous men. Such a man was the lawyer of the town, his friendly manner concealing his position as secret head of a gang. Bill Elliott is called in to solve the mystery and he manages to straighten out the mess.

The Editorial Page

Unity . . . Plus

It is with great satisfaction that we note the response to the Red Cross Drive from theatremen everywhere. Whoever said that unity of any kind was impossible in this industry need only look at the united front we have presented on the various Bond Drives, the March of Dimes, and now, the Red Cross War Fund.

What amazes us is that an industry capable of working together so closely and successfully on these various war drives, cannot get together and iron out its trade disputes and controversies in the same spirit.

Imagine, if you can, how fast the smoke that beclouds intra-industry relations would disappear if exhibitors and distributors would get together to arrive at the best solution of their various problems as efficiently, as capably and successfully, as they have worked together for the current Red Cross Drive.

Pet peeves and personal quarrels were conspicuous by their absence from all discussion leading up to what we believe will be the greatest collection drive ever achieved by the motion picture theatres of this or any other land.

It just proves that if the will to work together is predicated on the right frame of mind, difficulties will fade into thin air. One exhibitor told us the other night that he sat down on a friendly basis with a certain distributor executive for the first time in twelve years and in less than five minutes they were both pulling in the same direction. By the time they had worked out the details of the Red Cross Drive in his territory, he and his former enemy (the term was his) were pals and wondering why they hadn't resolved their mutual differences the same way long before.

It is unfortunate that there must remain in our business some factions whose purposes appear to be dedicated to causing, rather than curing, friction among the various branches of the industry. And we mean you can find such on both sides of the fence.

Tribute To A Grand Guy

This week witnessed as fitting a testimonial dinner as any we have ever attended or heard about in many years. The exhibitors of the Greater New York area said goodbye to Bob Wolff, who leaves in a short time to become RKO Radio's managing director in Great Britain.

Bob Wolff has been active in local and eastern distribution for RKO for a long time and through it all has built up an eminent reputation for fair trading.

In our own dealings with him as an exhibitor some years ago we cannot recall one single instance when we found him unfair or unreasonable. Neither did we ever have to go over his head to work out a buying deal.

Apparently, almost six hundred other exhibitors feel the same way about him, judging by the turnout at his testimonial dinner and the sincere speeches made by the men on the dais. It is something Bob can take with him and treasure during his stay in England.

Observations

In a bulletin issued this week, Ed Kuykendall as spokesman for the MPTOA, discusses the old and, possibly, new consent decree from several different angles. No exhibitor should pass up the opportunity of keeping abreast of this vitally important subject. In the not-too-distant future you may be called upon for an expression of your own opinion and if, as and when, such an event takes place you should know every angle of the controversy so as to express an intelligent and constructive view.

The MPTOA proposals submitted this week to Assistant Attorney General Tom Clark appear to reach into the heart of the difficulties that have confronted exhibitors throughout the career of the deceased decree and that which has been tentatively proposed as a substitute. This subject is one on which the exhibitor should keep posted so that if, as, and when theatremen are called upon for opinion, an intelligent mass expression of their views will be forthcoming.

According to Bob O'Donnell, currently in New York on a business trip, the war activities of the Variety Club Tents throughout the country will amaze the industry when the story is finally told. Bob has been in constant close touch with most of the Tents during the past months and has particularly noted the tremendous amount of time and energy being devoted to the Barkers to local drives and war efforts. This is in addition to their regular activity along charitable lines and to which all Variety Clubs are primarily dedicated. Inasmuch as the membership of the Clubs are composed of close to ninety-five per cent industry people, the industry may well be proud of what the Clubs are doing for the country and the industry.

We cannot close this week's editorial without another word for the Red Cross Drive.

We address these words to every theatreman of our industry: YOURS IS A GREAT AND IMPORTANT RESPONSIBILITY. IT IS YOUR DUTY TO LIGHT UP YOUR AUDITORIUM ONCE DURING EVERY COMPLETE PERFORMANCE AND TO FACILITATE THE AUDIENCE COLLECTIONS.

—"CHICK" LEWIS

IN APPRECIATION

TO ALL M-G-M CUSTOMERS IN THE UNITED STATES:

Because you booked and played our America Speaks subjects, and supported us so generously with your playing time, we have issued to the AMERICAN RED CROSS checks allocated to the individual exchanges in proportion to the showings obtained by each exchange in the total amount of $75,812.18.

This sum becomes the joint contribution of you and Loew's, Inc., and represents the proceeds of these America Speaks subjects produced by us at actual cost without overhead and distributed by us without cost, and exhibited by you.

Only your complete cooperation and full support of our undertaking has made this contribution possible. We shall add to it our own donation of $80,000., or a total of $155,812.18.

Thank you for your generous support in this endeavor and for the cooperation you have so many times given us.

Do Not 'Reduce' Price To Get Even Amount

Exhibitors who have re-arranged their price schedules to conform with the new tax and at the same time avoid the use of pennies have found they can not devise combinations that will result in total charges of 15, 45 and 75 cents (see STR, March 4). To overcome this difficulty some operators and ticket printers have suggested a plan to fix the price so it will be slightly higher in total amount and then reduce the price to bring it to a multiple of five. For instance, if 45 cents is chosen as the total price, the established price is 38 cents with a tax of 8 cents. The 46 cent charge is then reduced to 45 cents.

The Treasury Department, through Commissioner Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., advises that this idea may not be permitted under the law and regulations. The reduction is not a reduction according to law because everybody would be paying 37 cents in reality. A reduction must be an exception. Also, if the patron is paying 8 cents on a 37-cent admission he is paying a greater amount of tax than is legally due.

A further question was decided by the Treasury Department this week when the ban was put on fixing established prices that involved fractions of a cent. This applied chiefly to areas having state taxes, which are sometimes reckoned in mills.

Charles P. Skouras in New York

Television in Color

Scophony Corporation of America, associated with Paramount and 20th-Fox via corporate entities, this week announced that a new development in carbon technique by National Carbon Company marks an advance toward making color television available on full size screens in motion picture theatres.

Griffith, Distribs Reply To $606,000 Trust Suit

Griffith Theatres and nine distributors filed answers this week in Oklahoma City to the anti-trust suit filed March 13 by the Odeon Theatre, Shawnee, Okla., the Mystic in Picher, and the State Theatre, Vinita, in which the plaintiffs asked damages of $606,000 on the charge that the defendants entered into a conspiracy to prevent the three theatres from obtaining satisfactory film product.

The Griffith answer stated that the plaintiff's claims were for alleged invasion of rights more than three years before complaint was filed and, therefore, were void because of the statute of limitations; also that the plaintiff theatres were not comparable with those of the defendants.

The distributor defendants—Loew's, RKO, 20th-Fox, Vitagraph, Paramount, Columbia, Universal, Republic, and Universal Film Exchanges—declared the complaint was not sufficiently definite for them to prepare a proper defense and requested separate bills.

Seven-Day Clearance Precedent Set Aside in Trylon Appeal

In a decision rendered March 17, the Appeal Board reversed the ruling of a New York Arbitrator who held that seven days clearance was fair in the complaint of the Trylon Theatre, Forest Hills, against four major companies, and reduced the clearance to one day. The Drake Theatre in Rego Park, nearby Forest Hills, was intervenor in the case.

William Gold, New York attorney, appeared for the Trylon interests in the appeal from the arbitrator's ruling and argued for a one-day clearance. In its opinion rendered with the decision, the Appeal Board distinguished between the character of competition between "de luxe houses of wider appeal and neighborhood theatres," and noting that "the arbitrator in this case doubtless was influenced by the general practice prevailing in the city," declared that "exceptional circumstances in this case make a seven-day clearance unreasonable."

Spokane Public to Pay Tax

Spokane theatregoers will pay the added federal impost when the new tax schedule goes into effect April 10. The tax will be added to the existing theatre admissions, according to Al Baker, city manager of Evergreen theatres.

In setting up the new admissions the theatres are endeavoring to keep them in even figures.

'Follow the Boys' Tradeshows

Universal announced this week that the Charles K. Feldman production of "Follow the Boys" will be tradeshown in all key cities having Universal exchanges on April 3. The only exception is New York, where the picture has been scheduled for 10:15 a.m. March 23 at the Normandie Theatre.

'Andy Hardy' Trade Show April 3

Trade showings of MGM's "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble" and "Meet the People" will be held in all key cities on April 3.

MPTOA Ask Clark To Turn Down Decree

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America executive committee this week reported to Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark that the organization was definitely against the Government signing any kind of decree with the distributors. This decision came about at a meeting of the committee held Monday, and the report was laid before Clark the next day.

After making the stand for outright overthrow of the decree, the MPTOA drew up a list of six basic conditions which it recommended should be included in a revised decree if such an agreement were insisted upon. These were:

1. A simplified and standard form of contract. This would provide for a straight 20 per cent cancellation privilege, product to cover a six-month period, and right to open a run any day the exhibitor chooses.

2. An end to all further expansion circuits.

3. A new decree to run for not more than three years, "or six months after the end of the war, whichever is earlier."

4. Arbitrators be given complete jurisdiction over clearance and run cases.

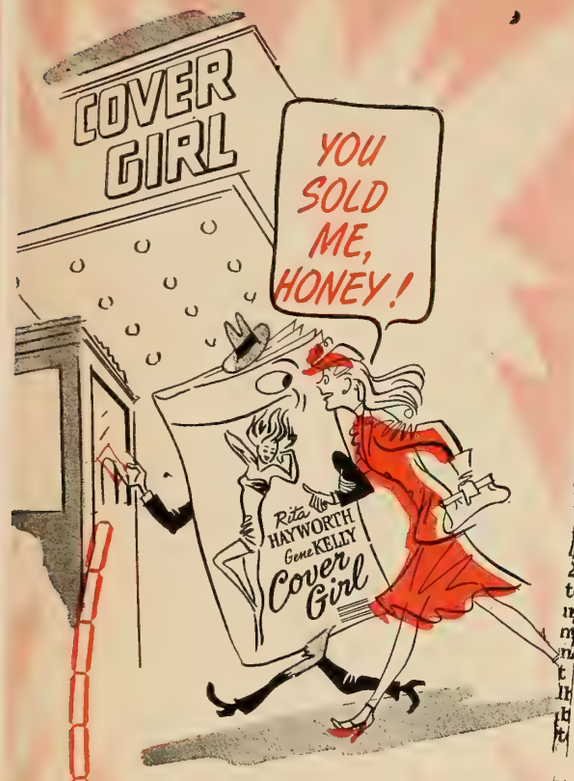
5. Attorneys be barred from arbitration cases.

6. Cost of arbitration proceedings be materially lessened to the exhibitor.

That Clark was considering the possibility that a stalemate may arise which will result in throwing the entire divorcement case on the courts was indicated by statements he made during the week in Washington. According to reports, the Department of Justice, in the event that efforts to obtain a satisfactory decree fail, will amend the complaint in the New York suit and seek dissolution of large independent circuits as well as direct affiliates of distributor companies.

Eaton, Memphis Exhibitor On Trial on Murder Charge

John W. Eaton, owner and manager of the Peabody Theatre, Memphis, will go on trial next Tuesday (28th) in Criminal Court on a charge of second degree murder as a result of an explosion at his theatre last August 17, in which Elroy R. Curry, maintenance man, was killed.



The explosion occurred, said the Fire Department, when Mr. Eaton substituted methyl chloride in the air cooling system which was designed for the use of Freon, after that product had been taken out of the market by the War Department.

Columbia Net Profit Up

For half-year period ended December 25, 1943, Columbia Pictures reports a net profit of $955,000, which tops the same period in 1942 by $205,000. Operating profit was $3,065,000, compared with $2,350,000 in 1942. Provision for taxes in 1943 came to $2,110,000, as against $1,600,000 in 1942.

Texas Tent Streamlined

Coordination of all activities of the Texas Variety Club organization in order to expedite the handling of all charity and social projects has led to the setup of a streamlined program devised and put into action this year by Chief Barker James O. Cherry.

A limited number of committeemen serve on each committee and the director to whom each committee is responsible meets with him at all times in order to familiarize the director with all reports and progress. The director, in turn, reports on the committee meetings to the Board of Directors of the Tent.

AFL Studio Unions Win 5% Wage Raise

Virtually all demands made by seven international AFL studio unions were agreed to by producers as a result of negotiations held last week at the New York offices of Pat Casey, studio labor contact man, it was revealed on Wednesday. According to the new line-up the unions (with the exception of the musicians group) will receive a flat 5 per cent wage increase, subject to the approval of the War Labor Board; paid vacations up to 12 days, based on one day for every 12 worked; and overtime for night work.

In the meanwhile negotiations have been going on between the producers and eleven IATSE local unions, with the same concessions at stake. That the negotiations are integrated is shown by the fact that the vacation clause was granted to both the internationals and the locals. At the same time the internationals won a concession to the effect that they were to be accorded the same advantages as the locals.

Paramount Holds 'Hitler Gang' To Prepare Larger Build-Up

"The Hitler Gang," originally scheduled for Paramount's fourth block, has been withdrawn from that group and will be released in the fifth block, it was announced this week. The trade showing, formerly set for Friday, March 24, has now been set back to a date in April.

Reason for the switch, according to Paramount sales executives, was that the organization decided to give the picture a bigger build-up.

500-Print Order to Guarantee Fast Coverage for 'Memphis Belle'

Five hundred prints of "The Memphis Belle." U. S. 8th Air Force documentary, are being rushed through the laboratories to be ready in time for the national release on April 14, it was announced this week by Paramount, who is the distributor. Plans for the release campaign call for as nearly simultaneous release in all theatres as possible.

Warner Officials Back in N. Y.

Warner Bros. home office executives Ben Kalmenson, Mort Blumenstock and Samuel Schneider returned to New York this week after concluding a week of conferences at the Burbank studio with Harry and Jack Warner and Charles Einfeld. Norman H. Moray remained a few extra days in Hollywood for additional conferences on the short subject program for 1944-45.

'Shrine of Victory' April Release

"Shrine of Victory," documentary of the Greek Navy, was added by 20th Century-Fox this week to its ninth block of features, to be released in April. Other pictures in the ninth block are "Buffalo Bill" and "Tampico."

Red Cross Campaign Off to Flying Start

With the best head-start in the history of Red Cross motion picture theatre collections, the industry's 1944 drive got under way Thursday in 14,764 houses throughout the nation in the greatest mobilization of theatres in history.

More than 300 theatres jumped the gun by initiating their collections as far back as March 16, and will continue through the regularly designated March 23-29 Motion Picture Week period of the WAC-Motion Picture Theatres Division. Many houses also have indicated they will continue collections beyond March 29 if necessary to achieve their quotas. Indicating that the public is fully aware of the great cause and the greater need for Red Cross funds, reports already received from many of these theatres show figures well above last year's in virtually every instance.

Loew's Corporate Contributions To Red Cross Total $155,812.18

Checks totaling the record-breaking sum of $155,812.18—the industry's largest corporate contribution so far—went out Monday from Loew's, Inc., as Red Cross donations to be allocated in all sections where Loew's has theatres and where MGM has exchanges. Loew's, Inc., increased its last year's contribution by 60 per cent, bringing it up to $80,000.

An additional $75,812.18 is being contributed by Loew's in the name of the thousands of exhibitors who played the "America Speaks" war short subjects distributed by MGM.

'Four Jills' Premiere in Miami

"Four Jills in a Jeep," 20th Century-Fox's musical, had its world premiere at three theatres, simultaneously, in Florida Thursday (23). The theatres are the Lincoln, Miami Beach and the Capitol and Miami, Miami.

K-A-O Pays Regular Dividend

The Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation this week announced that the company's Board of Directors had declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the outstanding cumulative convertible preferred stock, payable to holders of record of preferred stock at close of business March 27, 1944.

FILM TRAVEL LOG

W. C. Gehring, western sales manager for 20th Century-Fox, is back to Manhattan from the coast.

Roberto D. Socas, PRC Pictures foreign export manager, left Monday on a six-week business tour through the Caribbeans and the northern part of South America.

Joseph Moskowitz, eastern representative of 20th-Fox studios, back on the New York scene after three weeks of conferences with Messrs. Schenck and Zanuck.

Harry M. Warner, assistant general manager of Warner Theatres, this week finished up a tour around upper New York State.

Two Warner directors, Vincent Sherman (just finished "Mr. Skeffington" with Bette Davis) and Irving Rapper ("Adventures of Mark Twain"), are arriving in Manhattan from the coast this week-end.

Henry Nathanson, head of Regal Films, MGM subsidiary in Canada, is in New York from Toronto.

Tom Connors is back in the precincts of West 56th Street after four weeks in Miami.

Will Feature Films

The "Army Hour" broadcast over NBC on March 26 will feature the story of the motion picture industry's gifts of films for free shows to troops overseas. The broadcast, set for 3:30 p.m., New York time, will devote twenty minutes time to the subject of the films and the importance of the shows to troops in combat areas and Red Cross Hospitals overseas. Major John Hubbell, chief of the Overseas Motion Picture Service of the Army, will tell about the current films whose showings to the men and women in the services is made possible through donations of features and short subjects.

Double Feature Front Broken, Says Morgan

The once solid front of double features in subsequent houses has been broken by the development of elaborate two-reel musical comedies, and the only problem now remaining is to consolidate these gains with a continuous flow of other quality shorts. This was the opinion of Oscar Morgan, Paramount shorts chief, following a month's tour through the midwest and the Pacific coast areas in which he talked over the double-feature question with fifty or more circuit heads.

Theatre men on the west coast have been breaking into the double-feature programs, said Morgan this week when he had returned to his New York office, by the simple means of using a single feature and an elaborate musical short on certain bill changes. They are definitely trying to build up a number of program situations where they can substitute a quality short for the second feature, "like the Paramount two-reel musicals and other outstanding shorts."

George Kann, Veteran of Loew Circuit, Dies at L. I. Home

Funeral services were held on Wednesday (March 22) in New York for George Kann, 59, veteran Loew theatre manager who died Monday morning at his home in Oakdale, L. I., after an illness of two years.

Kann is survived by three brothers, Maurice (Red) Kann, vice president of Quigley Publications; Benjamin and Selly, and his widow, Estelle.

C. B. De Mille to Be Guest at Netherlands Embassy Dinner

Cecil B. De Mille will be guest of honor at a reception and dinner at the Netherlands Embassy on Saturday, April 1, preceding the Washington preview of his Technicolor production, "The Story of Dr. Wassell," to be held in Constitution Hall that evening.

De Mille thus will be the first motion picture producer to be honored by a function at any embassy in the history of the Capital.

Gift Films Doing Great Job

Back from a three-month Victory Committee —USO Camp Shows tour of Pacific bases and battle lines from Brisbane, Australia, to the front on New Britain, John Wayne reported at a press conference in New York that the Army is now doing a great job of getting the Industry's gift of new movies to the troops in forward areas.

The Box Office Slant

Up In Mabel's Room

United Artists Farce-Comedy 76 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Any audience will hysterically yell for more. There's no substitute for corn when it is very, very good as in this case.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Get an opening and the customers will laugh their praise all over town. Good for non-rationed grosses.

Cast: Marjorie Reynolds, Dennis O'Keefe, Gail Patrick, Mischa Auer, Charlotte Greenwood, Lee Bowman, John Hubbard, Binnie Barnes, Janet Lambert, Fred Kohler, Jr., Harry Hayden. Credits: Produced by Edward Small. Directed by Allan Dwan. Based on stage play by Otto Harbach and Wilson Collison. Additional dialogue by Isobel Dawn. Photographic direction by Charles Lawton, Jr.

Plot: A shy groom tries to retrieve and conceal an embroidered unmentionable which he gave to an old flame and friend of his wife in a weak moment several years before. His unwillingness to reveal the truth to his wife leads through a series of misunderstandings which culminate in the truth finding the light with a happy ending for all concerned.

Comment: Edward Small and Director Allan Dwan have turned out a smashing piece of riotous screen entertainment from a stage play which seems as old as the hills. The telling is brought right up to the minute and the timing is accurate to the split second. We witnessed this picture in the presence of a packed theatre and it is pleasing to report that the audience literally rolled in the aisles. It is a play of situations, door slamming, narrow escapes and spicy dialogue which allows little margin for the imagination though there is never visible evidence of anything off-color having happened. The play has been mounted with a highly capable comedy cast whose members romp through it exuberantly. The title should be box-office magic in these days when people are shopping for a good laughtime. Exploiting the film should be a showman's field day as the picture lends itself naturally to all sorts of gag and novelty advertising. You will be charged with getting an opening when you book it and from then on word-of-mouth should see you through nicely.

The Laramie Trail

Republic Western 56 mins.

(Prod. No. 355—Nat'l Release, Apr. 3rd)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Standard western suitable for the followers of outdoor action pictures.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Okay for the Saturday Matinee Crowds.

Cast: Bob Livingston, Smiley Burnette, Linda Brent, Martin Garralaga, Emmett Lynn, George Lewis, Leander De Cordova, Charles "Slim" Whitaker, Bud Osborne, John Whitney, Bud Geary, Kenne Duncan, Marshall Read. Credits: Directed by Jack English. Screenplay by J. Benton Cheney. Director of photography, Bud Thackery. Associate Producer, Lou Gray.

Plot: A Virginian and his pal traveling on the desert, rescue a young man from death. They learn that the wanderer is wanted for murder of a man whose body was burned beyond recognition. On his plea of innocence, they hide him and then proceed to find out the facts. Thoroughly investigating all leads, they finally clear up the case.

Comment: A standard western for the Saturday matinee crowds and the other outdoor fans. It has the action and other ingredients, plus a mystery, that has created such a following for this formula type picture. Bob Livingston and Smiley Burnette take care of their chores exceptionally well and it is because of Livingston's fist and guns and Smiley's comedy that the picture carries through. Supporting cast, with Linda Brent in the feminine spot and Emmett Lynn as a lawyer, do okay with their roles. The direction is by Jack English and the production chores were taken care of by Lou Gray. Sell as most westerns, giving this one the additional plug of a mystery.

(Prod. No. 366—Nat'l Release, Apr. 4)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fulfills the action fans' demand for gunplay, hard riding, etc.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable for week-end action booking.

Cast: Don Barry, Tom London, Wally Vernon, Bud Geary, Helen Talbot, Twinkle Watts, Roy Barcroft, LeRoy Mason, Kenne Duncan, Nolan Leary, Walter Soderling, Edmund Cobb, Jack Kirk, Frank McCarroll, Bob Kortman, Ernie Adams, Emmett Lynn, Pierce Lyden, Forrest Taylor, William Yrigoyen. Credits: Directed by Howard Bretherton. Director of photography, J. McBurnie. Associate Producer, Eddy White.

Plot: When a young man learns, upon the death of a hard-shrewd killer, that he was not his son but the son of a peace officer killed in line of duty, he decides to go straight and return the money stolen from a bank. In this town, he becomes a marshal and risks his neck trying to get the man responsible for all the crookedness there and also responsible for his father's death.

Comment: Outdoor action fans will enjoy this latest "Don Barry" western because it has the customary rootin' tootin' and shootin' that keeps bringing them back constantly, seeking more of the same stuff. In this instance, the old theme about the outlaw who turned good to clean up the town, is made more acceptable by some new twists and some good comedy by Wally Vernon. Don Barry turns in his usual capable performance as the outlaw and Twinkle Watts, a youngster, helps considerably in the general proceedings. Helen Talbot is the feminine lead and Roy Barcroft, LeRoy Mason and Walter Soderling are all okay in the supporting cast. Direction by Howard Bretherton and production by Eddy White are satisfactory. Regular western stunts should be used, in this case arranging a tieup with newspaper for the capture of the outlaw turned good man.

It Happened Tomorrow

United Artists Comedy-Drama 84 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A unique motion picture imbued with comedy, drama, mystery, suspense and excitement to make its strange story the object of much discussion. Should score well with any audience, yet should be seen from the beginning to escape the otherwise unfair complaint of being too confusing.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Properly handled, with the public's interest aroused via the unusual "tomorrow" theme, it should establish itself securely at the ticket window.

Plot: During a party in the morgue of the Evening News, Dick Powell, who is celebrating his promotion from obituary writer to full-fledged reporter, is told by John Philliber, aged pensioner on the paper, that time is but an illusion—that tomorrow's news is no greater mystery than today's. Later that night, after meeting and falling in love with Linda Darnell, Powell is returning home when he encounters Philliber in the fog. The old man gives him a copy of a newspaper. Not until the next morning does he notice that it's that day's Evening News, and that events it describes are yet to happen. Thus Powell is on the scene before a robbery is committed, finds himself in a jam with the police who won't believe his story, preferring instead to believe that he is linked with the crime. Other complications follow, with a story of Powell's death during a gun battle revealed to the frightened reporter a day before it is scheduled to happen. There is much suspense and excitement from this moment on, but the story ends logically and happily.

Comment: Here is a unique motion picture. True, one must be alert to the proceedings at all times lest he miss some important circumstance that has a direct bearing on the outcome; but thanks to Rene Clair's deft and swift-paced direction, it is virtually impossible for one to lose interest. Most vital to one's perfect enjoyment of this film is seeing it from the beginning; to enter at any other time during its unreeling will place the spectator in the position of being absorbed in the strange developments but mentally in a fog as to what the story is all about. There is no let-up in interest; the picture is entertaining, being imbued with comedy, drama, mystery, suspense and excitement from beginning to end. And because it is so utterly different from the average cinema offering, it is certain to be the object of much discussion. Those "touches" which have made a number of continental films splendid examples of screen artistry are, in several instances, apparent in the screenplay, on which Clair collaborated with Dudley Nichols, and also in Arnold Pressburger's production. Surely a picture that can truthfully boast an out-of-the-ordinary plot; that can entertain so thoroughly; that is peopled with a good, if not outstanding, box-office cast, should have a better-than-average

Lady In The Death House

PRC Drama 56 mins.

(Prod. No. 414, Nat'l Release, Mar. 15th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Program picture that delivers its quota of entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Support for a light comedy or musical feature, and the names of Jean Parker and Lionel Atwill will help at the payoff.

Cast: Jean Parker, Lionel Atwill, Douglas Fowley, Marcia Mae Jones, Cy Kendall, John Maxwell, Robert Middlemass, George Irving, Forrest Taylor. Credits: Directed by Steve Sekely. Screenplay by Harry O. Hoyt. Original story by Frederick C. Davis. Director of photography, Gus Peterson. Produced by Jack Schwarz. Associate Producer, Harry D. Edwards.

Plot: A young scientist takes a job as an executioner because he believes life can be restored after death. In this position he is able to help his fiance when she is sentenced to die for the killing of a man found dead in her apartment. By locking himself in the room with the panel board of switches he stops her execution until a friend brings in the real killer.

Comment: Satisfactory program fare for the market at which the picture is aimed that will deliver its quota of entertainment. Being a heavy drama, picture needs the support of a light or musical feature. Sparked by the names of Jean Parker, Lionel Atwill, it will help build up the payoff. The picture uses a flash-back formula, telling the story in piecemeal and giving that effect. An attempt is made to get away from the formula for such murder-mystery pictures, by dressing the executioner with the mantle of scientific research. The theme, that the executioner who is also a doctor, and the death house girl's sweetheart, will bring her back to life after execution, is suggested through much of the picture, but the story cheats the development by beating the execution in the usual last minute manner. Jean Parker and Lionel Atwill deliver their regular competent performances, supported by outstanding portrayals by Douglas Fowley and Marcia Mae Jones, both of whom put intensity and feeling into their roles.

The Memphis Belle

Paramount-WAC Documentary 41 mins.

(Technicolor)

(Nat'l Release, April 14)

Credits: Presented by the War Department. Photographed by U. S. 8th Air Force photographers and combat crew members. Produced by the 8th Air Force Photographic Section in cooperation with Army Air Forces First Motion Picture Unit stationed at the Hal Roach Studios, Hollywood. Distributed by Paramount for the Office of War Information through War Activities Committee-Motion Picture Industry. Personal credits: Supervisor, Lt. Col. William Wyler. 8th Air Force cameramen, Maj. William C. Clothier and Lt. Harold Tannenbaum. Commentary by T/S Lester Koenig, narrated by Edward Kern. Edited by Staff Sgt. Lynn Harrison and Cpl. Pierre Wilson.

Comment: The Memphis Belle is a B-17 bomber (Flying Fortress), which has completed 25 missions over Germany, and is now back in this country from its base in England. The picture shows the combat life of the plane and its crew of ten, both in relation to its part in the squadron and its individual experience in the last raid made by the squadron over Wilhemshaven. Lt. Col. Wyler swings the camera through preparatory footage showing the base, the work of the ground crew, and the take-off. From then on the scenes are made in actual combat. The actual raid on the Wilhemshaven submarine pens brings the spectator in direct contact with a murderous screen of flak, shows the bombardier crouched over the bombsight oblivious of everything but the exact moment when the target is in direct line. Then comes an attack by enemy fighters. Here the film offers perhaps the most exciting air scenes ever made, with the Nazis circling, diving, half-turning to get into position to knock out the Memphis Belle. Close-ups reveal the top turret and waist gunners firing at the foe, and the moment when one of them is hit. Scenes of other fortresses in trouble, with crews bailing out, indicate the extreme danger undergone and add a soul-stirring tragic element. Then the bombs drop on the targets and the explosions are seen. With the mission completed the Belle starts for home under severe pounding from flak and enemy planes. The locale shifts to the base with the ground crews "sweating it out" until they can spot their planes coming back. In flights usually of three they come in. Thirty-six went over. Twenty-six are accounted for. Then there are thirty-nine. Finally the Belle arrives, and since it is her last mission before returning to America, the pilot runs low over the base before landing. It is a happy crew. One leaps out to kiss the ground, and "the Chief," Capt. Robert K. Morgan, climbs up to kiss the painted image of the Belle and pat her lightly on the usual place. It is a happy ending to an exciting picture.

Ladies Courageous

Universal Drama 87 mins.

(Prod. No. 8065—Nat'l Release, Mar. 17th)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An informative, as well as an entertaining film that tells the story of the WASPS and their struggle for recognition. Particularly good for the women.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With the pull of the Loretta Young name and the exploitation possibilities, this should do very well at the box-office.

Cast: Loretta Young, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Diana Barrymore, Anne Gwynne, Evelyn Ankers, Phillip Terry, David Bruce, Lois Collier, June Vincent, Samuel S. Hinds, Richard Fraser, Frank Jenks, Janet Shaw, Kane Richmond. Credits: Directed by John Rawlins. Story and screenplay by Norman Reilly Raine and Dorris Gilbert. Suggested by the book, "Looking for Trouble," by Virginia Spencer Cowles. Director of photography, Hal Mohr. Special photography by John P. Fulton. Produced by Walter Wanger.

Plot: The story of the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron, now known as the Wasps. It tells about the individual young women who handle the planes and also about the efforts of a superior officer, who worked to have them militarized as part of the U. S. Army.

Comment: To the general public who have read about the Wasps but who know little about their battle for recognition and their splendid work in relieving Army Pilots for combat duty overseas, this will be informative as well as entertaining. It tells the story of a small group of twenty-five brave women who formed the original Wafs; women from all walks of life who saw their duty to their country and tried to fulfill it. Their humaneness and thoroughly feminine personalities are effectively drawn and their personal problems convincingly and understandingly shown. It's a most suitable film for all members of the family, for there are exceptionally fine performances and the entertainment it carries should appeal to oldsters and youngsters alike. The women particularly should be proud of it, for it is their picture and should settle any discussion regarding women's ability to pitch in. Loretta Young, as the leader of the group of flyers, turns in a performance that is sincere and splendidly balanced in her handling of such an assortment of women. As her less amenable sister, Geraldine Fitzgerald gives the part the necessary conviction, while Anne Gwynne, Evelyn Ankers and Diana Barrymore score with their portrayals. Lois Collier handles a small part well and June Vincent does okay as the youngster in the group. Suspense is well sustained by the fine direction of John Rawlins in this top-grade Walter Wanger production.

Follow the Boys

Universal Musical Revue 122 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) There's plenty of entertainment for everybody—from old-timers to jitterbugs. And it's BIG entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Names and more names calls for a try at top money. Give it plenty and you'll get plenty.

Cast: George Raft, Vera Zorina, Grace McDonald, Charley Grapewin, Charles Butterworth, Ramsay Ames, Elizabeth Patterson, Regis Toomey, Walter McCready, Frank Jenks, Addison Richards, Theodore Von Eltz, Maxie Rosenbloom, Martha O'Driscoll. Guest stars: Jeanette MacDonald, Orson Welles' Mercury Wonder Show, Marlene Dietrich, Dinah Shore, Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan, W. C. Fields, the Andrews Sisters, Artur Rubinstein, Carmen Amaya, Sophie Tucker, Delta Rhythm Boys, Leonard Gautier's Bricklayers, Ted Lewis and band, Freddie Slack and band, Charlie Spivak and band, Louis Jordon and band. Credits: Original screenplay by Lou Breslow and Gertrude Purcell. Producer, Charles K. Feldman. Director, Eddie Sutherland. Photography, David Abel.

Plot: George Raft, brought up in vaudeville, makes good in pictures and marries the star, Zorina. Rejected by the Army, he helps form the Hollywood Victory Committee and soon is busier than ever before. He's so busy with USO camp shows that Zorina doesn't get a chance to tell him they are to have a baby—and soon she refuses to tell him, for fear he'd come back only because of the child. It is too late to unravel, for he dies when a USO ship is torpedoed.

Comment: There's so much talent in this show that it fairly bulges into the auditorium, and as a result any audience is going to be vastly pleased. Besides, the picture is linked closely with the Hollywood Victory Committee and describes the growth of the whole USO camp show idea. The public is curious about this fine service and will be glad to see the background of the shows; it will make them feel better about their own sons and relatives. The picture itself is really a big variety show with a slender, but serviceable, story to carry it along. At times the acts follow one another so fast that they tend to eclipse one another, but on the whole this mass of entertainment in its component parts and as a whole registers with a solid sock. There are highlights, of course, and among these are Sophie Tucker's singing of The Bigger the Army and Navy (the better the lovin' will be); two songs by Jeanette MacDonald, whose voice is in the pink; Orson Welles' magic show, in which Marlene Dietrich is sawed in half; two Dinah Shore numbers; and W. C. Fields' classic billiard table sketch, with a few modern touches. George Raft and Vera Zorina do a good job in the leads, and Grapewin and Butterworth look right at home on that Palace Theatre set. As a matter of fact, the old spirit of vaudeville runs through the whole film, because what the USO gives the troops in the camp shows is nothing else but. Therefore, when you get together enough good acts you are going to have a mighty solid sender. That's "Follow the Boys."

THE FILM INDUSTRY

ON THE PATRIOTIC FRONT

Expect Million from 8 Majors in Drive

Eight major film company offices in New York alone are expected to contribute at least $1,000,000, or 10 per cent of the film industry's quota, in the 1944 Red Cross drive, it was announced Tuesday by Herman Robbins, chairman of the Corporate Gifts Committee for the Motion Pictures Division of the campaign, of which Joseph Bernhard is national chairman.

With $300,000 already reported in the donations of two companies, Loew's and Paramount, Robbins said that the amounts indicated from Warner Bros., RKO, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Columbia should easily put the major company total well over the million-dollar mark.

Two new appointments to the Corporate Gifts Committee also were announced by Robbins. Ralph Poucher of Consolidated Film Industries was named chairman of the Laboratories Division, while "Chick" Lewis, publisher of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, was appointed chairman of the Trade Papers Division.

F&M Houses Jump Gun in Drive, Collect $15,000 in Four Days

Among the first theatres to jump the gun in making collections for the 1944 Red Cross drive, 33 Fanchon & Marco houses in St. Louis, under the general management of Harry Arthur, took in more than $15,000 in the four days starting Thursday, March 16, compared with $34,000 turned in by 109 theatres of that community for the entire campaign last year.

The Roxy Theatre in New York, another of the houses that are doubling their collection time, already has topped the total take of last year's collections in the first six days of the present drive. Starting its collections March 15, the Roxy took in $8536 in its fist five days, and up to March 20 had exceeded $9000, compared with $8706 taken in for the seven full days in last year's Red Cross campaign.

Sam Rosen Named Chairman of Accessories Committee in RC Drive

Sam Rosen of Fabian Theatres has been made chairman of a new accessories committee comprising purchasing agents as part of the industry's Corporate Gifts Committee for the industry's 1944 Red Cross campaign.

The committee includes: Paul Sherman and Al Naroff, Brandt Theatres; M. J. Fessler, Warner Bros. Theatres; Larry Morrie, of B. F. Moss; Frank Fowler, Wilmer & Vincent; Fred Lakeman, RKO Theatres; Irwin Breuer, Rugoff & Becker; Max Seligman, Columbia; Max Wolf, Loew's, and P. F. Harling of Fabian, who will act as secretary to the committee.

'Hargrove' Prints Sent Overseas

Word comes from the Army Pictorial Service that sixty-five 16 mm. prints of MGM's "See Here, Private Hargrove" are now on their way overseas by plane and boat.

Bernhard's Appeal

"With 14,560 theatres pledged to the Red Cross Drive," said Joseph Bernhard, National Chairman, as the Industry's Red Cross Week got under way Thursday, "we will launch this important home front effort with the greatest mobilization of theatres in the history of the industry.

"In order not to dissipate this remarkable demonstration of the will to do an indispensable job, I now appeal to everybody concerned in this achievement to carry through to an all-time record for collections.

"The request to collect at every performance, which has become the campaign slogan, is urged upon each participating theatre so that we can turn over to the Red Cross every dollar a generous public is willing to contribute.

"I cannot refrain from expressing my admiration for the spontaneous and zealous effort on the part of hundreds of people in the industry which has made it possible for us to look forward to the opening of the drive with confidence in a record-breaking finish."

Preliminary Judging Begins in Contest For Honored Hundred

With the arrival in New York of Robert W. Selig, assistant campaign director for the Fourth War Loan and in charge of the "Honored Hundred" contest, preliminary judging of nominees to the top industry honor has begun.

Six state exhibitor chairmen, who, with state war finance chairmen, determine their state winners and aspirants from the population classification brackets in the competition, already have sent their certified choices to Selig, who turned them over to Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery, certified public accountants, for audit.

State exhibitor chairmen have until April 1 to report their state selections, Selig said. Announcement of the final one hundred theatre managers selected from over the country, Alaska and Hawaii will be made as soon after April 1 as possible, Selig stated, probably before April 15.

When the "Honored Hundred" will be brought to Washington for consultation with Treasury officials on the Fifth War Loan has not been decided by Theodore R. Gamble, national director of the Treasury's War Finance Division.

In addition to the trip to the nation's capital the "Honored Hundred" will receive illuminated scrolls, medallions, personal letters from Secretary Morgenthau, special recognition buttons for their theatre staffs, acclaim in their states from governors, mayors and other public officials, and trade press recognition.

Following the Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery audit of results sent in by state exhibitor chairmen, the official contest judges will select the finalists. At the request of Gamble, Walter D. Fuller, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post; Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Portland Oregonian; and Dr. P. H. Odegard, professor of political science and government at Amherst College have agreed to serve as official judges. Their decision will be final.

Stars to Aid Canada War Loan

Participation of Hollywood stars in Canada's Sixth Victory Loan campaign has been approved by the Hollywood Victory Committee, with plans scheduled for at least five top personalities to go to Canada for radio appearances and tentative plans calling for personal appearance tours. Highlighting the campaign will be five Wednesday broadcasts, the first two from Toronto, the next two from Montreal and the last from Toronto. The opening broadcast is scheduled for April 12.

Loew Bond Sales: $12,410,380

Close to 200,000 E bonds were sold and written and issued by Loew theatres during the Fourth War Loan, it has been announced. The money value of bonds sold was $12,410,380—with additional purchases by employes and executives bringing the Loew grand total to $25,214,605.

CHARLOTTE

Ruth Hardin, formerly bookkeeper for the National Theatre Supply Co., who resigned recently to be trained in Washington, D. C., at the national Red Cross headquarters as a field director, has been assigned to Fort Benning, Ga., as assistant field director. Miss Hardin is a sister of Mrs. Pauline Griffith, secretary and treasurer of the Theatre Owners, Inc., of North and South Carolina.

Effective April 1, the theatres of Charlotte will add the amount of the new Federal theatre tax to popular admission prices, it has been decided. Elsewhere in the state each manager will decide for himself whether the tax will be borne by the theatre or passed on to the patron in the form of a higher admission price.

One educator who thoroughly believes in the educational value of motion pictures is Hoyt R. Galvin, director of the Charlotte Public Library, where 55 sound films and a number of silent films, ranging in time from five minutes to an hour, are available to the public through churches, schools, clubs, and individuals. In some cases an operator is supplied by the library, and where a film is not possessed by the library it is obtained for the group requesting it at a minimum fee. Nearly 17,000 people used these films in February.

Lustgarden, John Dromey, Henry Stickelmier, Jack Kirsch, and Jack Rose were among the guests at the luncheon last Saturday for W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president.

"Thousands Cheer" went into 33 general release houses this week, with MGM taking extra newspaper space to put over the run. This is an unusual idea for film distributors in the Chicago territory.

A delinquency conference has been called for this city by Governor Dwight Green for May 11, 12, 13. Judge Harlington Wood and Samuel Ryerson, superintendent of the State Delinquency Bureau, will preside. Theatre men and various women's organizations are expected to participate.

Chicago theatres will run the National Screen Trailer, "Report from the Front," during the Red Cross drive and have the help of Volunteer Women Workers to aid in taking up collections at each performance. The theatres have signed up 100 per cent.

Pete Shayne, former Operators Union prexy, is again seriously ill at St. Elizabeth's Hospital with a heart complaint.

Al Blaska, manager of the Symphony Theatre, reports the birth of a second son, named Robert F. Blaska. Both mother and son are doing well.

Lou Abramson, former secretary to Jack Kirsch, Allied prexy, who is now in the Seabees, expected to start for the South Pacific area this week.

Film salesmen will be so adversely affected by the cutting of the gasoline quota to two gallons weekly that they will have to work out other plans for covering their territories.

The Film Industry Amusement and Recreation Committee, headed by John Balaban, will be tendered a civic dinner for work done during the past year in sponsoring shows for service men's centers.

S. J. Gregory, Alliance theatre executive, has announced the addition of the Dayton Theatre, Dayton, Wash., to the Washington State circuit. Harlan Croy, Alliance city manager at Frankfort, Ind., has joined the Army and is being succeeded by Joe Goldberg, formerly of the Indiana Theatre, Indianapolis.

A Pioneers' Nite dinner, designed as a tribute to Chicago and Illinois showmen, will be given at the Blackstone Hotel on Friday, March 31, by the Variety Club of Illinois. Reservations are heavy, and there's no doubt a big time is ahead.

CINCINNATI

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures, visited the local exchange Wednesday and Thursday on a tour of the Monogram branch offices.

Lenore Schmidt, for many years with Warners, has resigned and is going with Jack Goldman, chain operator in the city.

Ed Connolly, manager of the Avenue Theatre, Fifth Street, died suddenly at his home in Newport, Kentucky, last week.

Columbia's surprise preview of "Cover Girl" at the Lyric Theatre last week was followed by a cocktail party and midnight snack at the Netherland Plaza for exhibitors and the press.

Frank Sheppard, Paramount booker, was inducted into the Navy last week.

Paramount's personnel gave a party for departing Mary Hess, who is leaving to work for the Government.

Ruth Cooper of MGM's New York office is temporarily located at the local exchange in order to be near her husband, who is at present at the University of Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Hamilton, North Tazewell, Virginia, were visitors at the Row, as were Harold Snyder, Lancaster, Ohio; H. Knight, The Alhambra, Columbus, Ohio; and Mrs. Roy Edgington, Augusta, Kentucky.

P. C. Richrath and M. L. Simons of the MGM home office returned from the Chicago convention with E. M. Booth, local exchange manager, and visited here for several days. M. L. Simons is editor of the MGM house organ.

Columbia's National Play Date Drive is attracting keen competition at the local office. Prizes range from war bonds to graduated prizes of from one to four weeks' salary.

Charles Palmer, Columbia sales representative covering for some time the West Virginia territory, has been transferred to Columbus territory, which will keep him closer to home.

Manny Naegel, of the RKO sales staff, and Mrs. Naegel left for Cleveland to attend the funeral of Mr. Naegel's sister-in-law.

Fire destroyed the Bypro Theatre, Bypro, Kentucky. The building was completely demolished. The house was operated by E. C. Sanders.

RKO's Irene Meek is at her home in Cynthiana, Kentucky, suffering with streptococcic throat.

Claire LeMon, Warners, is back at her desk after an absence because of illness.

DETROIT

Detroit theatre circles last week mourned the passing of Benjamin Cohen, operator of theatres in the city for 35 years. Mr. Cohen, who was 55 years old, died in Miami March 12. With his brother, Louis, he operated Detroit Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. The Cohen theatres include the Mayfair, Hollywood, Paradise, Roxy, Capitol and Rio. Ben Cohen was also interested in numerous real estate ventures and was part owner of the Seville Hotel, where he made his home. He opened his first motion picture house in 1909. The Cohen brothers have earned a wide reputation for their movie promotion stunts. One of their remembered projects was the giving away of 350 Ford cars during the depression period of 1930-31 as part of the plan of building up patronage at their Hollywood Theatre.

David Idzal, manager of the Fox Theatre, invited all the Sullivans in town to be his guests at the theatre St. Patrick's Day to see "The Sullivans." Detroit's Sullivans just had to produce identification and the Federal tax to see the show.

A City Commission hearing at Mt. Clemens, Mich., March 17 heard a delegation of seven, including three teachers and a public school nurse, advocate the adoption of a strict motion picture censorship and curfew ordinances for the city. Commission approval was indicated for such action. The proposed censorship ordinance provides for the appointment of a city officer who would advise theatre managers on selection of films, lobby displays and advertising. The suggested curfew would be set for 10 p.m., and would apply to all children under 14 years old.

Carl Shalit, Columbia Pictures division chief, has gone South to recuperate for a few weeks. His trouble, as reported by the local scribes, is nothing really serious. It seems that Shalit has a branch manager named Joe Gins and a public relations man named Sid Zins. The story goes that after a few weeks of trying to keep messages from and about Zins and Gins straight, Shalit decided that perhaps Florida would do him some good.

The Fox Theatres sponsored a Cover Girl Contest in the Hotel Book-Cadillac Thursday in conjunction with the national contest by Columbia Pictures in its promotion of "Cover Girl." Another big push for the picture was the appearance of Harry Conover, big model man from Manhattan whose models inspired the picture, at the Detroit Town Hall in the Fisher Theatre. Anita Colby, and other famous cover girls, appeared to help Conover illustrate how any attractive girl, with proper training, could become a cover girl.

Father Flanagan, famous founder of Boys' Town, was guest of honor at a meeting of the Detroit Variety Club Monday.

INDIANAPOLIS

Aggressive Campaign For Brooklyn Date On 'Whom Bell Tolls'

An aggressive selling campaign on "For Whom the Bell Tolls" by the Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., resulted in a four-week run and the shattering of every Brooklyn record for advanced-price pictures. This was the first New York metropolitan engagement following the six months' run on Broadway.

William J. McLoughlin, managing director, and Theodore Trust, advertising and publicity director, went to town with a campaign notable for its all-around effectiveness. All ads used plugged continuous performances and the fact that the picture was "Direct From Broadway."

For three weeks in advance and during the engagement the picture was cross-plugged at the associate Paramount and Fox theatres, with special trailers, 40x60 displays and easels at both houses, and during the Monday night amateur hour at the Fox Theatre spot announcements were made which were heard by thousands during the weekly broadcasts of the show over Station WMCA. In addition, the side wall of the Paramount, facing a busy thoroughfare, was well posted during the engagement with one six-sheet and a three-sheet with three-sheet date.

The campaign three weeks in advance of playdate also included: 27-foot valance displayed in Strand lobby; production trailer shown at all performances with playdate; outside lobby featured six 34x46 colored enlargements in frames with playdate, which were a good flash and easily seen by passers-by; and special ads five days before opening in all New York metropolitan and Brooklyn dailies.

Nine-State Premiere Set on 'Buffalo Bill'

Starting April 10, 143 theatres in Utah, Nevada, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska and New Mexico covering the inter-mountain territory from Reno to North Platte and south of the Canadian border, will participate in the world premiere of "Buffalo Bill," it has been announced by W. J. Kupper, general sales manager of 20th Century-Fox.

The managements of the Fox West Coast Theatres; the Denver, Aladdin and Esquire Theatres; the Interstate Theatres; Atlas Theatres; J. J. Parker Theatres; Milas Hurley Theatres; E. J. Corder Theatres; Gibraltar Circuit; Cooper Theatres; and leading independent theatres operators, have joined forces with 20th-Fox to back the nine-state world premiere with an advertising campaign taking in newspapers, billboards, radio and tieups that will probably run into the thousands.

Cooperative advertising and publicity, in which the 143 theatres will participate, commences this week and continues until the premiere. Rodney Bush, the company's exploitation manager, under Hal Horne, has assigned his entire exploitation organization west of Chicago to pitch in and work with the theatres. Lou Goldberg, of Bush's home office staff, is now in Denver, working with key circuits and publicity managers there.

Midnight Preview For 'Follow the Boys'

The halcyon days of vaudeville at the Palace Theatre on Broadway will be re-created by Universal next Monday night when "Follow the Boys" will be previewed before an audience comprising most of the stars who headlined at the Palace and many of whom are prominent in other fields of entertainment today.

A stage show with Joe Laurie, Jr., as master of ceremonies will precede the picture. In the pit will be Benny Roberts' band just as it was when vaudeville was the attraction at the Palace.

The proceedings will be broadcast over WEAF and a national hookup from 12:05 to 12:30 a.m. Sophie Tucker will sing Some of These Days, just as she does in the picture. Ted Lewis will sing Just Around the Corner, and George Raft, star of "Follow the Boys," will dance the Charleston as he did on the Palace stage many years ago. Many ex-vaudevillians will be introduced to the audience.

Managers' Prize Contest Is Set By Tri-States on 'Lady in Dark'

In preparation for the Des Moines three-theatre premiere of "Lady in the Dark," which takes place on April 6 at Tri-States' Des Moines, Roosevelt and Paramount theatres, and also for the engagements following throughout the circuit, Ralph Branton, general manager, has held meetings with district managers and house managers of all situations, announcing a managers' prize contest on the picture.

An aggressive and elaborate campaign is planned for the Des Moines engagement, following through with local campaigns in each situation. Recommending "Lady in the Dark" to the managers, Branton hailed it as "the biggest box-office picture up to this time I have ever seen."

Setting 'Cover Girl' Fashion Tieups in Nation's Key Cities

Already one of the most publicized pictures in the industry's history, "Cover Girl" will be strikingly brought to the attention of the public in the key cities in which the musical is to be pre-released, through a series of tie-ups effected by the Columbia's home office and field exploitation staffs and leading department stores.

Based on an idea in the pressbook, and patterned after last week's highly successful Saks Fifth Avenue "Cover Girl" fashion show, similar tieups have been arranged with leading shops in seventeen of the nation's most important metropolitan areas.

Window Displays in Shops

The stores will place full pages of paid advertising in the newspapers, calling attention to the picture and its opening playdate in their cities. There will be full window displays in all of the tieup shops, with mention of the film; complete credit to "Cover Girl" in all promotional material distributed, and an exclusive luncheon-fashion show, displaying "Cover Girl" creations which were inspired by the Technicolor production. In some of the cities where the show was deemed impracticable, the stores tieing in with the picture will concentrate on promotional material, newspaper advertising and window displays.

The shops which have thus far arranged for the "Cover Girl" fashion tieup are: Saks, Los Angeles; Saks, Detroit; Younker's, Des Moines; Davidson-Paxton, Atlanta (where fifteen windows will be devoted to "Cover Girl" fashions); LaSalle and Koch, Toledo; The Outlet Co., Providence; R. H. White, Boston; The Holmes Store, New Orleans; Harzfeld's, Kansas City; Brandeis, Omaha; Kaufman-Straus, Louisville; Howland's Department Store, Bridgeport; Gamble-Desmond, New Haven; Harvey's Store, Nashville; Edwards and Doy, Syracuse; and Hecht's, Washington.

Another Newspaper Lined Up

Meanwhile, Columbia exploiteers have lined up another newspaper to participate in the national search for the "Cinderella Cover Girl of 1944." This latest sponsor is the Minneapolis, Minn., Star-Journal. Eligible to the contest are all cities playing "Cover Girl."

From among all the local choices for "Cinderella Cover Girl of 1944," who will be celebrated and rewarded by their home cities, Columbia will select the national winner and bring her on to New York for a screen test, a Bradshaw Crandall portrait on a cover of Cosmopolitan and a contract as a model with the Harry Conover agency.

Timed to coincide with local pre-release dates of "Cover Girl," the contest is grabbing plenty of space. In addition to the Star Journal in Minneapolis, newspapers so far sponsoring the contest are the Washington, D. C., Times-Herald; the Portland, Me., Herald-Express; and the Hartford, Conn., Times. Cooperating in their cities but not sponsoring the contest are the Baltimore, Md., News-Post and the New Haven, Conn., Register.

Program Exchange

Program for Opening of the New Princess, Aurora, Mo.; House Organ of Yesteryear

We wish we could says as much for the weather this week as we said last week. We'll probably say as much, perhaps even more, but it won't be as complimentary. It seems that the warm, spring-like weather was only a feint for colder weather on the way. All was well until Sunday night, then it started to rain and continued to rain all night. Next morning we heard the drops pittering and pattering against our window. We donned our wet-weather regalia, pushed forth into the outdoors to brave the elements. By mid-afternoon the rain had ceased, but the temperature had dropped. Right now, it's a bright, clear day, but the breeze wafting from our half-open window is not as gentle as we'd like it to be. In fact, if a certain platinum-thatched Texan were here right now, the steam radiator would be going full blast and electric heaters would be placed in strategic positions around the shivering figure. Instead, however, because we have learned to withstand the rigors of frigid temperatures, we feel quite comfortable. And so, while the none-too-gentle breeze ruffles our locks, we shall prepare this edition of the Program Exchange.

First thing on the agenda is a program from J. Glenn Caldwell, marking the opening of his new Princess Theatre in Aurora, Mo. The old Princess, Caldwell tells us, was gutted by fire over a year ago, and authority was granted to rebuild. Writes he: "I don't know how we did it, but anyway it seems to have been rebuilt." And if the colored post-card picture of the Princess is any indication of that fact, the job has been done—and done well.

The four-page program itself is a neat job, and if Caldwell intends to put out programs regularly, he has gotten off to a good start with this one. Entire front contains the picture of the Princess, evidently an architect's drawing. What a handsome theatre! Or perhaps we should use the adjective "charming," inasmuch as the name "Princess" places the showplace in the feminine gender.

On the second page of the program is the dedication: "The New Princess Theatre is dedicated to your sons and daughters who are in the Armed Forces." Beneath the dedication is this message from Caldwell's mother, Mrs. Blanche Caldwell, and "her little boy" Glenn:

"It has been pretty much of a job to rebuild your Princess, but it was worth all the headaches. We sincerely hope it will bring as much happiness to you and yours as the old Princess.

"Everything that was humanly possible was done to build you a theatre that would be modern in every way. And one that you would be proud to have in Aurora. We believe we have done that.

"For the past twenty-one years the Caldwells have furnished your movie entertainment in Aurora— it has always been our aim to provide the best that was available, and to maintain a theatre in which the entire family could spend an evening of relaxation together.

"We want to thank everyone for the privilege of serving you all these years and sincerely hope that we will be at the same old stand for another twenty-one years."

The third page listed the opening week's attractions, while on the fourth and last Caldwell passed out orchids to everyone who had helped make the new Princess a reality.

Our only regret is that the Aurora theatreman was a little tardy in sending us the program, for a close check of the opening date on the third page shows that it was December 16, 1943. That seems ages ago. Nevertheless, we're glad that Caldwell finally did get around to us, and we hope to hear from him more frequently in the future.

Received a program from the Squire Theatre, located on Eighth Avenue in New York. At the time these lines were written, the Squire was doing quite all right with a revival program of Rudolph Valentino in "The Eagle" and Charles Boyer in "Algiers." Wisely enough, the management provoked interest in the unusual double feature by bringing forth the question as to the status of Valentino and Boyer as ideal screen lovers. Catchline announcing the program: "Valentino or Boyer? See why the past generation went wild over Valentino . . . compare the violent love-making with the suave romancing of Charles Boyer."

Getting away from "shop" for just a moment: We dropped around to the Squire to see "The Eagle" and "Algiers," and we were amazed how well "The Eagle" has stood up these 19 years (it was originally released in 1925). We won't join in any arguments as to who was, or is, the screen's perfect lover, but this viewing of "The Eagle" served to confirm our belief that Valentino was in a class all by himself, that there never was a romantic screen idol like him before he appeared on the movie horizon, and that since his death in 1926 no one has appeared that proved a worthy challenge. Times have changed, we'll grant, and perhaps his tempestuous love-making would be somewhat out of tune with today's jitterbug generation; but nevertheless, there are many young men and women of the present day who, seeing a Valentino revival, find in it a type of screen romance they wish they might have ben privileged to enjoy. They can readily understand why Valentino was the romantic idol of his day. And as far as most women are concerned (at least the majority of those with whom we have discussed the subject), Charles Boyer is presently their favorite romantic actor. Where theatres can book revivals of "The Eagle" and "Algiers," a written debate on the question just discussed would stimulate a lot of interest in the engagement.

And now, let's look at one or two of the old programs we mentioned last week. On this page we are reproducing the center spread of a September, 1933, program for the Riverhead Theatre, Riverhead, L. I., whose manager at that time was William A. Levee. Note how half-tone scene cuts have been used to dress up the layout. Levee evidently had these cuts made from stills obtained from the exchanges, and while this must have added to the cost of the program, the improvement in appearance was well worth the extra expense. Some theatremen, however, may feel they cannot afford to have engravings made, while still others may not have the facilities for this kind of work in their communities. In that case, the press book scene mats will generally serve the purpose. An important factor to remember, however, is that press book scene mat screens are designed especially for newsprint, while if you use a high quality "slick" paper for your program, a finer screen would be best. Thus, a coarse-screened cut on "slick" paper would look extremely "dotty," while a fine-screened cut on newsprint would lose its degree of shading because of ink spreading and filling in the tiny spaces between the close-spaced dots.

Next week we'll look over another "program of yesterday." Right now we can see our allotted space dwindling rapidly, so we will bring this current discourse to its conclusion. See you seven days from now.

Negro Press, Radio Used to Sell 'Stormy Weather' in Washington

Cooperative campaign by 20th Century-Fox and Lichtman's Lincoln Theatre for the first-run showing of "Stormy Weather" in Washington used not only approximately 6000 lines in the Negro press, but also accentuated radio.

George Gomperts, 20th-Fox exploitation representative, and Bill Hoyle, Lichtman publicity head, arranged a radio campaign consisting of some 60 spot announcements to use with recordings by Lena Horne, Cab Calloway and Fats Waller, stars of the film. These spots were concentrated in three-day intervals for both the first and second weeks, running approximately ten spots per day.

'Dr. Wassell' to Get Washington Preview

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Story of Dr. Wassell" will have a unique official Washington, D. C., preview in Constitution Hall, one of the largest auditoriums in the Capital, under plans completed last week by the Navy Department, the Navy League of America, and Paramount. The premiere will be staged on Saturday, April 1 and later, around April 20, the premiere of the Technicolor picture, which has been in production two years, will be held in Little Rock, Ark., home town of Dr. Wassell, former country doctor who became the hero of the evacuation from Java of wounded sailors off the cruisers Marblehead and Houston just ahead of the Japanese invasion in February, 1942. Attending the Washington preview from Hollywood will be Mr. and Mrs. DeMille, Commander and Mrs. Corydon M. Wassell, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cooper, Signe Hasso, and Sidney Biddell, Gladys Rosson and Ken Whitmore of the DeMille staff.

Newspaper and magazine writers will be brought to Washington from New York by Robert Gillham, director of publicity and advertising for Paramount, who is now in the National Capital working on the preview. All proceeds from the event, which is under auspices of the Navy League, will go to the League's Red Cross fund for 1944. Virtually all of official Washington will attend the showing.

Guests at Special Screening

Newspapermen and local educational officials were guests at a special screening of "Madame Curie" arranged by Boyd Fry of Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga.

Star's Visit to Chicago Boosts 'Lady and Monster' Premiere

The elaborate advertising and publicity campaign for the world premiere last week of "The Lady and the Monster" at the Woods Theatre in Chicago, Ill., was given impetus by the visit to that city of Vera Hruba Ralston, who co-stars in the film with Richard Arlen and Erich Von Stroheim.

Miss Ralston was the honored guest of the Chicago Daily Times Ice Carnival Bond Show at the Chicago Stadium on Saturday evening. Miss Ralston presented flowers to the queen of the show and the two runners-up, and was enthusiastically received by the crowd of more than 20,000 who contributed the biggest bond gate in Chicago's Fourth War Loan activities.

On Sunday (12) Miss Ralston was honored guest of the Ninetieth Anniversary Jubilee of the Czechoslovakian Society of America, at which delegates from all over the United States were present. The principal speakers were Dr. John Papanek, personal representative of Eduard Benes, President of the Czechoslovak Republic, and Professor J. J. Zmrhal, formerly superintendent of the Chicago public schools. Miss Ralston was feted with these and other notables, including Vojta Benes, brother of the Czechoslovak President. Her presence at the meeting was given publicity in the metropolitan press, as well as in the Czech and Slovak dailies.

Newspaper advertising, billboard posting, and radio spot announcements heralded the world premiere. Fifteen hundred line advertisements were employed in every English-language newspaper in Chicago—the Herald American, Sun, Tribune, News, and Times; and quarter, half, and full-pages were used in the Czech and Slovak newspapers.

Through the cooperation of various Czech and Slovak organizations, the more than 350,000 people of Czech and Slovak origin in Chicago were apprised of the world premiere at the Woods.

Meanwhile, Republic announced this week that advertisements in the May and June issues of fan and general magazines with a total circulation of more than 49,000,000 will attract audience attention to "The Lady and the Monster." The company is backing the production by a top appropriation.

Life, Look, and Liberty head the list of magazines, which includes Cosmopolitan, Redbook, Charm, Movie Story, Motion Picture, Modern Screen, Screen Romances, Movies, Movie Life, Movie Stars Parade, Movieland, Photoplay, Movie-Mirror, Pic, Screen Guide, Stardom, Click, See, Screenland, Silver Screen, Movie Show Pathfinder, Hit Parader, Screen Stars, True Detective, Master Detective, Latest Song Hits, Song Hits, Official Detective, True Story, and Police Gazette; as well as Child Life, Calling All Girls, True Comics, True Aviation, Junior Scholastic, Senior Scholastic, World Week, Parent's, American Girl, Boy's Life, Open Road for Boys, Young America, and Young Catholic Messenger.

In addition, advertisements will be carried in such newspaper supplements as Parade, This Week, and American Weekly, syndicated to a total of 56 newspapers throughout the country.

Money Dates for April

By the time the first eight days of this month have passed, Lent will have ended. But then, even so, the balmy spring weather will make itself keenly felt, unless you get busy and put over some stunts that will keep people coming to your theatre. Arrange a "Spring Festival of Hits," and be sure to pick outstanding attractions for the occasion. Send a calendar of attractions to your mailing list. Make every effort to make Easter a big day, and the days thereafter important ones at the box-office. Here are some ideas to enable you to make special promotions and put over exploitation stunts to make April profitable!

National Observance Periods

APRIL 1: APRIL FOOL'S DAY. There really isn't any strict observance of this day, but most people have a lot of fun making fools of others, provided the others are off guard. In keeping with the spirit of the occasion, you could stage an April Fool Matinee or an April Fool Midnight Show designed for laughing purposes only. All sorts of funny tricks could be pulled: ushers turn over their duties to patrons, subjects are at first projected upside down, custodians attempt to do their cleaning job while the house is full of patrons. There are any number of other clean, wholesome, fun-packed gags. Be sure that your entire program is humorous in content, and also be sure to let your patrons know well in advance that a lot of foolish things will occur in the spirit of fun.

APRIL 6: ARMY DAY—U. S. ENTERED WORLD WAR I, 1917. To honor your local heroes on this day, arrange special promotion stunts for the sale of war bonds and stamps on the premise that "the best way to give the Army the tanks, guns, airplanes and ammunition it needs is to buy war bonds and stamps." Hold patriotic exercises, with World War I veterans as your guests. Exhibit a Victory film or two connected with phases of U. S. Army activities.

APRIL 2: PALM SUNDAY. Easter is just one week away. Your activities should be pretty well lined up by now.

APRIL 9: EASTER. This is your cue for a flock of springtime activities. Depending on the weather, you could hold an Easter Egg Hunt at the local park sponsored by the newspaper and merchants. This will depend, too, on how plentiful eggs are in your community. Have kiddies gather at a specific spot, then send them on their lively scramble. Baskets of candy Easter eggs would make good prizes, but if these are not available, perhaps you can promote little toy rabbits or other Eastertide novelties. Hold a Flower Matinee a few days preceding Easter, and send the flowers thus collected to the Old Folks' Home, the orphanage, and other institutions. If your Easter attraction features a feminine star, run a contest in the paper for the best drawings of a bonnet for the star. A hat furnished by a millinery shop could be given to the person submitting the best entry, and if it happened to be a man, you could give him an order for a man's hat at a cooperative men's store. Get a department store's cooperation in a stunt whereby a search is conducted for the funniest, old-fashioned, out-moded Easter bonnet. Hats are to be brought to a store booth, where contestants register them. Then a committee chooses the dozen or so funniest, and girls model these on your stage. Owner of the funniest hat would receive a prize. Store could display the hats in its window. Easter week is an ideal time for a Flower Show, when prizes could be offered for the best home-grown plants or flowers cultivated by amateurs. Flowers should be attractively arranged in the lobby, with code-number tags attached to each. A committee of judges (local florists) select the winners. Comparison of code numbers with names of entrants will determine identities of the winners. An enterprising florist should be willing to tie-in with you for a special lobby floral display. Several days in advance of Easter, tie up with a dry cleaning establishment to insert "spruce up" messages in its deliveries and in newspaper ads. Use stills of the stars and featured players of your Easter week attractions in window displays that point up the fact that "if you dress as smartly as (name of star), you'll be the stand-out attraction in the Easter Parade." And since gasoline rationing seriously curtails motoring, not to mention the fact that walking helps to wear out rationed shoes, you might tie-in with transportation companies to urge people to "ride downtown and see the Easter Parade in comfort, then see the grand Easter show at the Blank Theatre." Win goodwill by donating your theatre for a community church service. Let patrons check their purchases in your lobby during the fortnight preceding Easter. For the backgrounds of your lobby displays, use the customary Easter symbols. Your cutouts, shadow boxes and still boards might be built in the form of bunnies and Easter eggs. These ideas are just a few of the many that you can utilize, and there are many more, including a Spring Style show, that you will think of before you have finally completed your plans.

Special Tie-Up Opportunities

APRIL 1-8: NATIONAL BASEBALL WEEK. Tie in with a sporting goods store for a display of baseball equipment in your lobby. If you have a local baseball team, invite the members to be your guests at an evening performance. This week would be a good time for a return engagement of "Pride of the Yankees." A matinee might be held for youngsters, with baseballs and bats being given away as attendance prizes.

APRIL 23-29: BE KIND TO ANIMALS ANNIVERSARY, HUMANE SOCIETY. Stage a pet parade for the kiddies, and offer prizes for the best-looking cats and dogs, the best trick-performing animals, the most amusing, etc. The nightly appearance of an S.P.C.A. official on your stage to urge humane treatment of animals might be arranged. Announcement might be made that during the week an official will carefully observe people and their treatment of animals, and that those who treat theirs most humanely will receive guest tickets to your theatre. Be sure to point out that only those people actually observed by your special observer will receive passes. Tie up with stores handling foods and merchandise for pet animals.

APRIL 24: FIRST NEWSPAPER, BOSTON NEWS LETTER, PUBLISHED 1704. Tie up with your newspaper for a lobby display showing how news is received over the teletype, how it is edited, set up in type and finally printed. The display would feature teletype machines, sample slugs of type, and examples of stories from the original copy to the printed form.

APRIL 27: AUDUBON, NATURALIST, BORN 1780. Tie up with schools for best drawings of wild animals and birds to be displayed at your theatre. Offer prizes for the best essays on Audubon.

APRIL 29-MAY 6: NATIONAL FISHERMEN'S WEEK. Tie in with sporting goods stores, arrange displays of anglers' equipment. run short reels on fishing.

APRIL 30-MAY 6: NATIONAL BABY WEEK. Get newspapers and merchants to cooperate with you in offering prizes to the first baby born at the outset of this week. Twins would also get special recognition. Your own prize could be a life-time pass, if you deem such an award appropriate.

Fine Campaign for 'Bernadette' in Tulsa

The Tulsa, Oklahoma, campaign on "The Song of Bernadette" running the gamut in advertising, publicity, exploitation, radio, along with the personal appearance of the star, Jennifer Jones, resulted in smash box-office business at the Ritz and Orpheum theatres in the recent twin-theatre Southwestern premiere.

Twelve hundred inches of news-space were garnered in Tulsa papers, despite a 75 per cent reduction in display space put into effect by local newspaper publishers. This was in addition to the advertising campaign launched eleven days before the opening.

The Tulsa World put out a special edition in connection with the arrival of Jennifer Jones, with three-column art spread on front page story giving credits to the star, picture and premiere; one thousand special cards reading "Welcome Home, Jennifer Jones—Star of 'The Song of Bernadette'" distributed throughout the city's department stores, hotels and shops. The "Little Times Square" district of Tulsa, where half of the city's population passes daily was bedecked with 60-foot banners reading "Welcome Jennifer Jones" strung across the streets, and at the same intersection, above the First National Bank's electric news flasher sign, two huge Bernadette upright 24-sheets attracted attention of crowds. A total of 32 windows in this area featured art from the picture.

The radio campaign consisted of continuous plugs over all leading stations starting one week before the premiere. Spot-announcements as well as longer programs were given over to the picture. The campaign's climax came with Jennifer Jones broadcasting from the stage of the Orpheum Theatre.

Ralph Talbot, operator of the two Tulsa theatres, supervised the campaign, on which the following cooperated: J. C. Hunter, Talbot's general manager; Tom Herrick, advertising manager of the theatres; Mrs. Eunice McDaniel, office manager, and Richard Owen, 20th-Fox special field exploitation representative.

Lobby Artist Stunt Is Used for 'The Bridge'

In putting over the opening of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" at Loew's Century, Baltimore, Manager William Saxton and Publicist Gertrude Bunchez arranged several tieups, attractive window displays, and a lobby stunt which got the picture complete local coverage.

Starting several days in advance, feature stories and art on the stars appeared in all local newspapers. Betty McCall, commentator on WCAO, devoted her fifteen-minute program to a comparison between the book and the screenplay of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." Six additional spot announcements were obtained over the same station and other breaks were landed over Stations WITH and WFBR.

In the lobby of the theatre an artist was kept busy working in charcoal and pencil on blow-up sketches of Lynn Bari. At peak hours during the day the artists attracted huge crowds and each sketch was given to the purchaser of a war bond.

Four Read Drug store windows contained special 22x28 colored blowups on a book display. The Remington Putnam store also featured scene stills from the picture and arranged a window with blowups of Bari and Francis Lederer plugging both the picture and costume jewelry, and about thirty other merchant windows contained cards and enlargements announcing the opening of the picture.

Special announcements were placed on the bulletin boards of all defense plants, and during lunch hours special plugs were given "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

Short Subject Reviews

South American Front—1944 (Clarifying)

20th Century-Fox—March of Time No. 8 17½ mins.

What is the inside of the South American situation in its relation to United States diplomacy? "South American Front—1944" won't illustrate exactly what the answer is, but it does make you see what's going on a little more clearly than you did before—and this is something of a feat. The picture concerns itself with Argentina first, showing the ruling military clique and linking it with the moneyed class. The mass of people are deprived of their votes. Then the editors turn to Brazil—also a dictatorship, but of a benevolent nature. The audience gets a glimpse of the famous Rio mardi gras, and then an impression is given of the modern cities, the fight against enemy propaganda activities, and finally the great wealth of mineral resources. The Vargas government has cooperated with the United States by expanding its industrial strength, and the film ends with the intimation that Brazil will be a tremendous market for U. S. goods after the war. This is a timely subject which will catch the interest of any of your patrons who follow the news these days.

Hullaba Lulu (Excellent)

Paramount (D3-2) Little Lulu 9 mins.

Second of the Little Lulu series, this shows a general improvement over the initial offering. Lulu on the screen is acquiring the personality that made her famous in the Saturday Evening Post. Here she bluffs her way in the circus and proceeds to expose various fakes. She gives the fire-eater the hotfoot, sprinkles peanut shells for the Indian fakir to walk on, and ends up by taming the lion with her famous green lollypop. (Incidentally, the green lollypop shows up well in Technicolor.) Lulu is exasperating and still lovable—that's where the charm lies—and now that this is beginning to shine through on the screen it behooves the wise showman to pick up the series while it's yet young. Looks like solid stuff for a long time to come.

How to Be a Sailor (Excellent)

RKO (34,113) Disney Cartoon 7 mins.

With the Goofy as demonstrator, the amusing and clever Technicolor cartoon shows the various phases of navigation from the dawn of history to the present day. It is replete with laugh-provoking gags, and emerges as one of the best in the Disney output.

Mallard Flight (Good)

RKO (44,307) Sportscope 9 mins.

Elting F. Warner, publisher of Field and Stream, and Gene Howe, newspaper publisher, take your audience with them via this Sportscope on a hunt for mallards on the Texas panhandle. Preparation of the decoys, building of the blind to effect perfect camouflage, the shooting of the ducks as they fly overhead in response to Elting's duck whistle, and the retrieving by Squire, their dog, make up the reel's footage. One doesn't have to be an ardent sports lover to enjoy this subject produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr.

Say Uncle (Fair)

RKO (43,704) Leon Errol 18 mins.

Next morning after a big party, Leon Errol finds himself confronted with two unwelcome guests, and has difficulty in explaining their presence when his wife unexpectedly returns from her vacation. One can guess the developments when he tries to pass them off as his uncle and uncle's daughter from Alaska. It all adds up to fair entertainment, with a few chuckles here and there. Produced by Bert Gilroy, the subject was directed by Ben Holmes.

Radio Bugs (Good)

MGM—Our Gang 9 mins.

The gang decides that there is big money to be had on the radio if you have a sponsor. Their quest of a sponsor takes them to a book store for material and then a dentist's office where they audition for the waiting customers. Their Joe Miller corn drives the dentist's patients into impatient spasms—of pain—and they feel the wrath of the dentist. Next they try an undertaking establishment with a mess o' Shakespeare, which also flops and the kids learn that radio is a wonderful thing IF you can get a sponsor. There is a right tasty batch of juvenile fun in this film. Sure-fire for the children.

Winged Targets (Good)

Columbia (5805) Sport Reel 8½ mins.

For anyone who loves the great outdoors and a hunter's paradise, this is a very well reported visit to the California-Oregon border. Here against the backdrop of marsh grass and lakes the millions of ducks and geese which migrate to Southern California are shot by the camera and a few are brought down by the guns of the hunters. A fine dog is seen retrieving the birds both on land and from the water. An okay short for almost any program. Produced by Max Cohen and directed by Harry Foster.

Doctor Feel My Pulse (Fair)

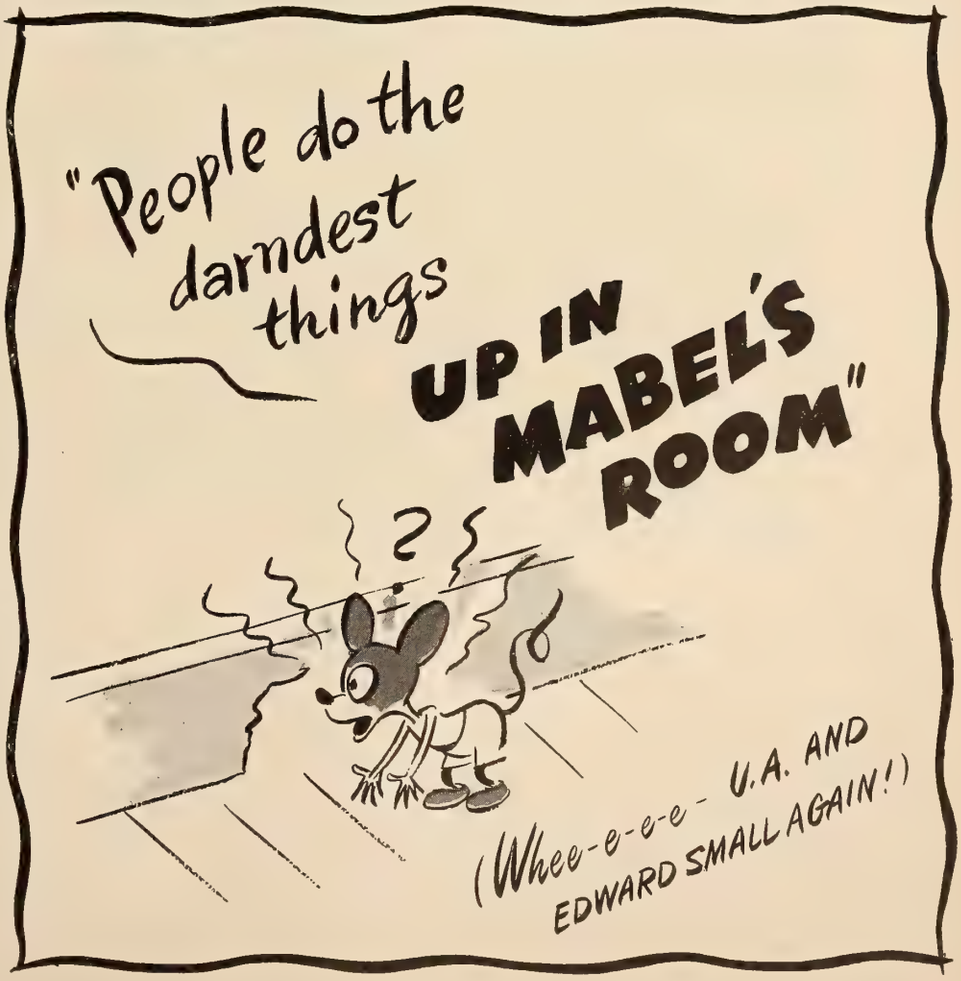
Columbia (5432) All Star Comedy 18 mins.



Vera Vague has a mania for medicine, imagining all sorts of dire ailments and causing poor hubby and her friends no end of worry. A screwball, fresh from an asylum, who believes himself a doctor takes her in hand for a workout that cures all her "symptoms" for a happy ending. While the comedy is forced and stilted we cannot help seeing some fun in this short for many ladies who suffer a much milder form of the imagination malady. The cast includes Jack Norton, George Lewis and Christine McIntyre with production and direction by Jules White from a story and screenplay by Felix Adler.

Trombone Trouble (Very Good)

RKO (34,114) Disney Cartoon 7 mins.

High up in the heavens, Vulcan and Jupiter are greatly disturbed at the sour tromboning of Pete. Neighbor Donald Duck is also annoyed. His first efforts to silence the noisemaker ends in Donald being blown back into his bedroom by a strong blast on the instrument. Jupiter and Vulcan decide to help Donald: they charge him with electricity, make him a "superman." From then on, the duck outwits the noisemaker, finally gets rid of him; then, finding the trombone, enjoys a hot swing tune himself. This is too much for Jupiter and Vulcan. In the Disney tradition, this is a very good Technicolor cartoon which the entire family will enjoy.

Henpecked Rooster (Very Good)

Paramount (P3-2) Noveltoons 8 mins.

Poor Henry Rooster is frightfully henpecked and must do all the housework. But Mrs. Henry encounters a mouse and calls hubby for help. He is about to drown the rodent when the latter suggests he can make hubby master of his house. Then Henry tells his spouse what to do because the mouse always appears with him. The Mrs. tries to do away with the mouse, and does so. Henry then tries disguising himself as a mouse, and the comedy ends with a cat chasing both of them. In Technicolor, this little cartoon has movement and some good laughs. Example: when the Mrs. needs a pen to write a letter, she pulls out one of her own tail-feathers. "Henpecked Rooster" will brighten any bill.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT & MAINTENANCE

Published Every Fourth Week As A Special Feature of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

HOW MANY MORE and WHY?

THE coincidence of discussion of film print shrinkage at a recent meeting of the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and some three or four letters in a sack of mail to the editors bring up a subject that will continue to be a marvel of the otherwise very progressive theatre industry. The subject is the age of projectors which continue to keep running.

At this time, of course, there is every reason to use equipment, no matter how old. But that has nothing to do with the remarkable fact that there are projectors as old as thirty years still functioning. Taking that age and deducting the three and a half years since the time when there was a shutdown on equipment availability, still leaves you with the fact that there were projectors over twenty-five years old functioning in the pre-war motion picture houses where such kind of operation was in effect.

How many of these twenty-years-and-over projectors there are still in service, nobody seems to know, but the general impression is that there are several such machines still in use. Why, for heaven's sake?

The men operating motion picture theatres have, all around them, the example of dynamic progress. It's in the very blood-stream of this business — right from the studio through the advertising, distribution and exhibition branches. How in the world theatremen can, in the midst of such example, remain immune to the urge for doing the progressive thing and so getting for himself modern tools for such important work as presenting the modern pictures, is something that is hard to understand.

It so happens that the tieup between the two circumstances which prompted these remarks both have to do with prints and the shrinkage thereof. The projectionists writing in to the editor mention that recently they received new prints and found that with one of them there was excessive noise in the projectors—the writers adding that the machines were pretty old (one of them thirty years old). Of course, these are small theatres—perhaps normally receive prints that also are old and in which the shrinkage may be up to as much as one and one half per cent. Possibly the worn machinery has worked itself down to the point where that amount of shrinkage just about suits the ground away, hooked teeth and shaky machinery, so that there is, possibly, less noise—but noise nevertheless—when older prints are used. That very fact, however, gives you an idea of how theatres using such old equipment can contribute to the deterioration of print life, as well as being responsible for the low-grade kind of show the theatres using them offer to the paying customers.

Landmark Theatres

Minneapolis Showplace Lives to See a New 'Golden Age'

Former Minnesota, Vintage of '28, Now Radio City Theatre

It took Paramount's "Lady in the Dark" (in Technicolor) to bring back the lights which flickered out five years ago in one of America's most massive and elaborate monuments to what is known as the "golden age" of the motion picture theatre. This latest event at one of the country's "Landmark Theatres" took place this month of March with fitting ceremonies whereat there were in attendance some of the leading executives of the Paramount Theatres organization as well as civic officials of the state of Minnesota and the city of Minneapolis, where the former Minnesota Theatre now flourishes again under the name of the Radio City Theatre.

It is coincidence more than design, but nevertheless worthy of remark that the 4,050-seat showplace came back to life after a hiatus of five years, in the same month in which it was first thrown open to an amazed public on March 24, 1928.

Like many another large-capacity picture theatre, the former Minnesota and now Radio City arrived at completion just at the time when a revolutionary change in the whole scheme of motion picture production practically outmoded such places for screen presentations—outmoded them because "talkies" had become established as a success (were at the time "here to stay"). If talkies had a revolutionary effect on the scheme of Hollywood practice and procedure, their effect on the exhibition setup was volcanic. Hollywood producers then were saying that the change had increased production costs by twenty-five to thirty per cent (those same figures were used to measure the costs of production increase at the time the foreign markets were blown away by war and again later for the added costs "due to war conditions" after Pearl Harbor). The exhibitors might have cried out that the changeover to sound increased exhibition costs by fifty per cent—which would have been conservative—and they probably did say so. But nobody paid any attention. Picture business is like that.

At any rate the enormous theatres that were ducky for the silent pictures presented equally enormous problems when sound came along, and there was a veritable holiday for the sound engineers and the experts on acoustics as they experimented—proceeded on a sort of "cut and try" program—in attempts to to make it possible for all of the people some of the time in the great big auditoriums to hear what the hell went on as the actors spoke their lines in the new-fangled drama in which the cinema was wedded with speech.

But if troubles of the past bore heavily upon the former Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis, the shining opportunities of the flush present are making up for it. For the big house lives brightly again, with its lights turned on and those who operate the enterprise thanking good fortune for having erected this handsome edifice and preserving it through the years when it stood sadly idle and grimly dark.

AUSPICIOUS LAUNCHING. The Radio City Theatre in Minneapolis had its opening with the premiere in that city of Paramount's "Lady in the Dark." A record-breaking crowd extending full four blocks was on hand for the opening, and the 4050-seat theatre was filled to capacity for the premiere showing.

The Radio City Theatre of Minneapolis takes its name not so much from its predecessor of that title in New York as from the fact that a fusion of radio and motion picture interests made it possible to put the big playhouse back into circulation, so to say.

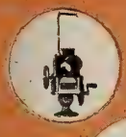
The original house was jointly controlled by Publix and Finkelstein and Rubin. It is now operated by the Minnesota Amusement Co., a Paramount Theatres affiliate headed by John Freidl, with Radio Station KSTP jointly interested to the extent that the latter's broadcasting studio occupies space in the big building. The southern mezzanine of the theatre is given over to a handsome lobby for the radio station.

So far as the theatre patron is concerned, the Radio City has an auditorium and lobby that are familiar to those who knew the house under its former name as the Minnesota—a place of rich ornamentation and sumptuous appointment.

The huge lobby, with its grand staircase, its towering marble collonades and high, arched ceiling, is just about the same as it was in the beginning of its career, except that two of the four hanging crystal chandeliers have come down and their mass of 14 feet in height and weight of a ton and a half apiece now rests in crates. This retirement of the two chandeliers means a saving of some 1000 watts of juice—for each of the fixtures, lamped as originally designed, burns some 5000 watts of electricity when turned on full.

There has been refurbishment and slicking up of the entire premises, of course, with new materials as required, and available, to put the Radio City Theatre right into the limelight as one of the most luxurious now in operation. But in all important details of its design and construction it is still the big house with the auditorium that markedly resembles the Paramount in New York and many other houses, particularly those built for Publix.

The theatre was designed by Graven and Maygar, architects of Chicago. The huge auditorium provides for some 40 rows of seats on the main or orchestra floor. There are 28 rows in the balcony, and some 450 seats in the horseshoe-like mezzanine which hugs the rear and side walls of the auditorium enclosure, with its ornate ceiling, proscenium arch and its pendant chandeliers. The ceiling which spans this enclosure—the distance from projection room to the proscenium is 180 feet—is a series of domes, the largest of which is 75 feet in diameter, and which are trimmed in gold and silver. At the time of the theatre's original opening there figured among the statistics emphasized by the press agents the fact that "1,000,000 sheets of gold and silver foil were used in the decoration of these domes."



The Radio City has a stage large enough to

Blood Lines Tell

Since 1896, here at Motiograph, has been witnessed the production of a series of models of projectors which bear witness that blood lines tell.

Sired by the first practical motion picture projector, each succeeding model has outdone the preceding examples of sound design, brilliant engineering, and exacting craftsmanship.

Year after year the Motiograph thoroughbreds have been the favorites with those who lay their money smartly. Each entry has won—way out in front.

Motiographs always lead the field—always finish strong after the most gruelling runs. Dependability and endurance have paid off consistently.

Trace the lineage of the many Motiographs still running after years of carefree operation and you'll find that the finest projectors and the latest developments are always first with this famous name.

When sound came in Motiograph had it. Today Mirrophonic Sound, like Motiograph Projectors, is a favorite. Prior to Pearl Harbor, plans were being made for a brand-new projector and sound system.

This new Motiograph Projector and Motiograph-Mirrophonic Sound System had to be even better than the famous Model K Projector and associated sound systems. Here was a challenge.

But new records are about to be set. As soon as the war efforts are finished, a youngster which promises to put all its forebears in pasture will be out there at starting time.

Help to Pass the Ammunition by Proper Projection Procedure

Burn Carbons for Efficiency and Salvage Those Copper Drippings

Those screaming shells that carry destruction to the enemy under the fire of the United Nations' artillery can mean something quite personal to managers and the projectionists in booths at theatres over here. It may seem a remote connection—but you can believe Government authorities when they say that everybody can help by turning in every bit of possible copper for salvage. There is copper on the carbons consumed in the projectors in motion picture theatres—and ninety per cent of it can find its way into artillery shells if there is strict attention to the appeal to save the drippings in projector lamps and also the foil that is left around the stubs of burned carbons.

Readers of this journal will find a reflection of a demand by the military for a large increase in production of artillery ammunition in the National Carbon Company advertisement appearing in this department. News commentators have speculated on the exact meaning of the known demand for an increase in the quantity of artillery ammunition. It could mean that these shells are soon to pave the way and protect the advance of American troops in a new invasion of "fortress Europe." Whatever the specific uses for which this ammunition is designed, the fact remains that it has caused a very sharp rise in the demand for copper.

From the time when copper became scarce—which was before Pearl Harbor—National Carbon Company has carried on an unselfish campaign to cooperate with the Government in reducing the quantities of copper necessary for the manufacture of projector and other carbons. In the motion picture field there has been a well-sustained campaign of education to awaken theatre owners and projectionists to a realization of the great need for economy in carbon consumption as well as to promote the widespread practice of salvaging carbon strippings and drippings.

In the manufacture of the carbons, there has been unremitting research to reduce to the absolute minimum the amount of copper used to produce carbons which will give efficient light on the screens of America's theatres. Thus, early in the war, National Carbon Company introduced the present "Victory Carbon," in which a thinner coating of copper is used.

There is now need for a renewal of the most meticulous care on the part of everybody in the theatre who has or might have a part in helping to get back to the stockpile every last ounce of copper drippings and strippings that can be salvaged.

It is a fact that ninety per cent of the copper used in projector carbons can be salvaged. Getting the drippings and strippings back to the supply dealer is the important thing.

Under the circumstances, it should be a distinct pleasure for every projectionist to use the greatest of care in brushing up the ash from the floor of the projector lamp every morning, and depositing this ash—which is practically all copper—into a container for return through the nearest theatre equipment dealer. (It is, in general, most important to send the salvage to a theatre equipment dealer, because these men and organizations are acquainted with the method for sending the copper along to the proper channels for reconversion into usable metal). The carbon stubs should be stripped of the foil (use a sharp knife to slit the foil from top to bottom and start or loosen it at one end so that the coating may be peeled off in a continuous spiral strip, or a full sheet) and this foil also should be put into the container which is to be turned in for salvage.

Another factor of great importance is the proper burning of carbons for the utmost efficiency. The "Victory Carbons" have been in use over a considerable period of time and their characteristics and the proper method of using them should be rather generally in practice at the projection booths. Nevertheless, the matter of copper conservation is so important that the conscientious projectionist will take the pains to check himself on this point by referring to the bulletin issued by National Carbon Company which deals with current ratings, burning ratios, etc. Copies of the bulletin, if not on hand, should be obtained from National Carbon Company, which has them available and will supply requests for copies.

The factors which make it necessary to follow the recommended practice in order to acquire the best results on the screen as well as conservation of current and carbons are indicated in the following quotation from the National Carbon Bulletin.

" . . . reduction in thickness of copper coating lowers the upper limit of arc current at which these carbons can be operated with satisfactory results. Because of this, theatres which have been operating their lamps at the maximum allowable current for the carbons of normal copper coat thickness previously available may experience some reduction in screen illumination. However, there should still be sufficient screen light for acceptable projection. The change in copper coating may also result in slightly less steady light and in a little longer spindle. On the other hand, these carbons will give as much light and essentially as long carbon life as that obtained at corresponding arc current from the carbons formerly supplied. In fact, those theatres which had not been supplied with the improved 8 mm. 'Suprex' positive carbons will find that, at corresponding values of arc current, the 8 mm. thin coated 'Suprex' positive, which is of the improved type, will give approximately 20 per cent more screen light and slightly longer life than the old standard 8 mm. 'Suprex' positives they have been using.

"Operation of projection lamps at reduced arc current may also, in some instances, require adjustment of the feed ratio of the projection lamps in order to maintain correct position of the carbons with a minimum of manual adjustment. On some lamps it will be necessary to use a larger negative carbon to adapt the burning ratio of the carbons at reduced arc current to the fixed feed ratio of the lamp.

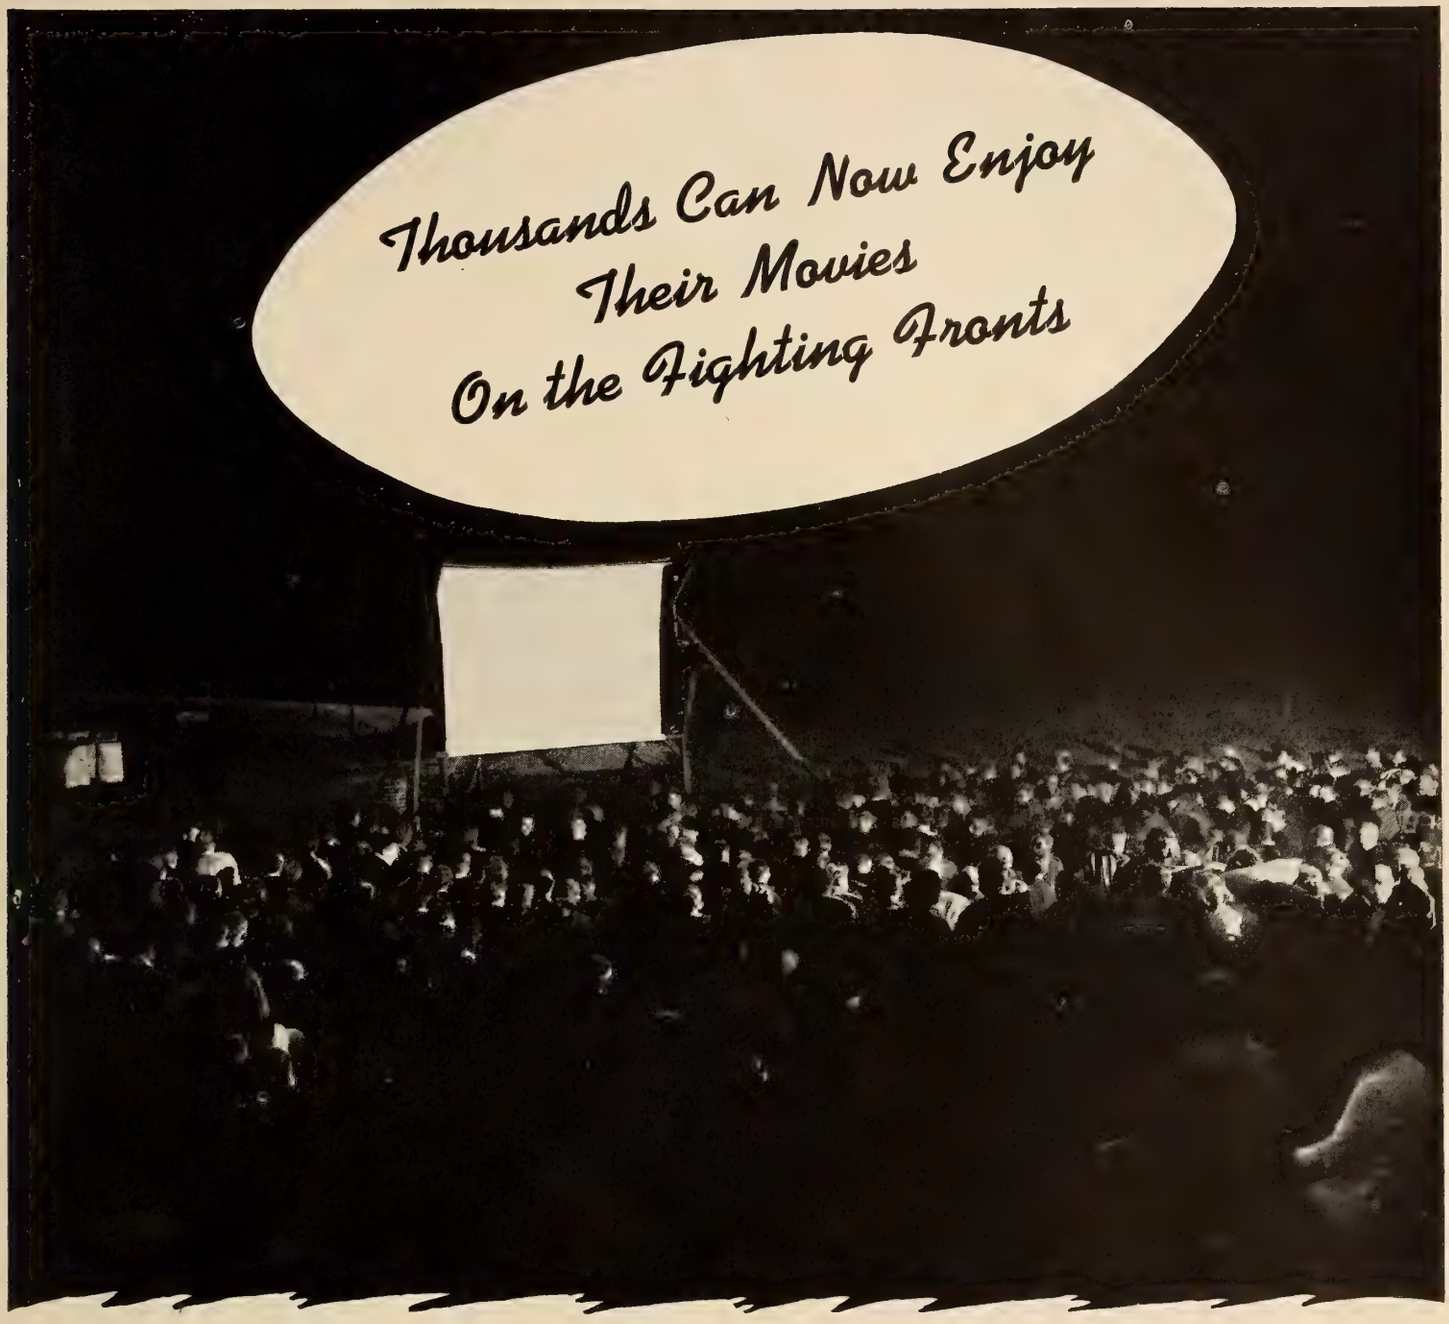
"Some projection lamps are adjusted to obtain maximum efficiency in screen light production by focusing the crater image close to the dimensions of the film aperture when the lamp is operated at maximum allowable arc current. With such adjustment, reduction of arc current to the limit of the thin coated carbon may result in dark or discolored corners on the screen. If this condition is encountered, the lamp manufacturer should be consulted for instructions covering the mirror adjustment needed to correct this condition."

OPERATION

Saving Current

Make sure all bulbs are screwed into sockets very firmly.

Do not overload poster frame circuits, marquee ceiling, or other circuits. Average circuit is capable of carrying 15 mps.



When neon tubing burns out, see that section is shorted to eliminate possibility of transformers being burned out.

Do not fasten banners to bulbs. Fasten them strong enough to prohibit their blowing and causing damage to neon tubing.

All marquee letters should be properly stored in racks. Also the proper carrying case supplied to transport letters to and from the canopy.

When possible, work-lights with reflectors should be installed on top of marquee to avoid burning marquee lights for letter changing.

When washing canopy ceiling, never unscrew bulbs for this purpose, as when they are replaced, 25 per cent will be useless.

Up-To-Date Management Calls for Up-To-Minute Economies

Everything, from Brooms to Manpower, Must Go Further These Days

The managerial field today is made up, preponderantly, of the older groups of veteran experience, and the very newcomers to the fraternity of "skippers" of the ships that ride—or flounder, as the case may be—on the waves of popular enthusiasm and patronage of motion picture entertainment.

Under present operating conditions, the veterans find that things are not greatly different than ever they were. Of course, there is considerable cramping of their showmanship style among the old-timers in those more expansive moments when they want to make things more elaborate by using more of everything for some exploitation stunt or special event. However, it was ever necessary to apply the rules of strict economy (which in wartime goes under the name of conservation). Thus, many a theatreman of many years experience will tell you that nowadays things are not much different—just a little "more so" than usual.

The younger members of the managerial ranks, however, under present conditions, are learning their way around showbusiness the hard way. They cannot be allowed that wider margin or error which was permitted the tyro breaking into the responsible job of theatre management during peace times. Now it's a case of "must" get along with what you have.

One of the most important duties today is one that, ordinarily, is a very tough one to put up to the manager who has not had long and mellowing experience in developing personnel. Never, perhaps, was there a time when there was such a large turnover of help. We have it from many managers that they have to go around the theatre introducing themselves to the help when they pass out the pay envelopes—and that just when they learn the name and are getting on a firm ground of acquaintance, there's a guy or a gal with a different look on the job.

That condition, of course, puts particular stress on the necessity for careful handling of the help in order to develop and preserve an esprit de corps and the efficiency necessary for good operation and courteous service. All told, this business of developing efficient help from raw recruits is a big job—requires the human approach, an understanding of people and a means of getting the confidence of them and thus making "leadership" and example produce the full effects necessary to cultivate maximum results.

Even so, these wartime problems often assume such importance, due to the widespread discussion thereof, that there are times when it seems that the same old fundamentals of good theatre management are likely to be forgotten in the dither of curtailments in supplies of material and personnel. On the other hand, there is no surer way to make sure that present wartime operation is all that it should be than to practice the first principles of good theatre direction as discovered in the earliest days of motion picture theatre operation and refined through the years of its development to its very high standards just prior to the outbreak of the present war.

There are certain highlights of this code of good management—they have not changed with war conditions. Some of these necessities of good management, it is true, have been thrown into sharper relief and given greater importance. Among those of the latter character, according to a group of top-drawer managers of long experience, are the following:

Fire Prevention

The best insurance and the least expensive against fire hazards is cleanliness. Most fires in theatres start from either of three causes: 1. cigarettes carelessly disposed of; 2. trash and accumulated filth in unused rooms and basements; 3. faulty wiring. The best solution to the first cause is ample receptacles filled with sand at the convenience of the patrons, plus caution signs for both patrons and employes. The second category is simply a matter of good housekeeping. The cleaners who fail to dispose of ALL waste paper, boxes, paint, rags, etc., need a bounce. The third angle involves regular checkups on existing wiring and the employment of competent electricians when any changes are contemplated. Don't let the boys haywire a trailer or sweeper cord or anything temporary without personally inspecting the insulation. Good supervision on these three points can save you plenty.

Safety for the Public

Let the people know about the planning and steps you have taken for their safety should an emergency develop while they are in your theatre. Tell them how safe they are while relaxing in a theatre easy chair under the trained care of your staff. But be certain that steps have been taken and that your staff is familiar and able to cope with any situation which might arise.

Property Maintenance

Neglect is one of the most destructive forces of human nature. That "I'll do it tomorrow habit" can result in the necessity of expensive replacements where an ounce of prevention would have turned the trick. When the paint starts to chip off . . . call the painter. When a pipe starts to leak . . . call the plumber. When fuses start to blow . . . call the electrician. Don't pinch pennies when dollars are at stake. That building must last for the duration and then if you want to burn it down, and the insurance company raises no objection, you can go ahead and have a swell fire . . . but . . . for the present keep it in shape.

Carpet Conversion

With carpets taking a harder beating these days and with replacement questionable, make sure that the first sign of a tear, hole or raveled edge gets prompt attention with needle or tack hammer. When people trip and hurt themselves theatres get sued and court costs are more expensive than tacks or thread. Wherever possible shift sections of carpet around for longer life. Like recapping tread-worn tires, don't wait till the carcass is shot, for then it's too late. Move the rugs around before they show symptoms of excessive wear.

Handle Film With Care

Stress the importance of care in handling film these days each time you talk to the operators. Fewer prints of sheer necessity are doing double and triple duty. Prints must last longer and travel farther. Lead bands are as scarce as the prints so don't allow the boys in the booth to punch them full of personal markings for cues. If every projection crew handling a print did this you would get a short instead of a feature by the time the film reached its thirtieth engagement (if you were lucky enough to be only thirtieth). Insist on good film cement for careful patches and you may save a lot of footage somewhere along the line.

Care of Lobby Posters

There are many complaints floating around about the condition of posters received from rental agencies—and who is to blame that they're shabby? The fellow who has a careless bill-poster, doorman, usher or stooge is to blame. This phase of operation is often neglected as it is an activity that usually occurs while you are checking out the cashier and the employe who is eager to get home just throws the posters around any old way regardless of what the weather may be. The resulting messy displays are just bad news to the next fellow who has to take them and not like it. Due to the restrictions on pulp production for paper and wood conservation, not to mention manpower, the poster-makers are forced to curtail the quantities they produce and make posters do double duty like film prints. As a result you get a bunch of dirty posters and start bellowing without realizing that they may be twice as dirty when your crew gets through with them. Just do your share by keeping an eye on the poster room and the person who changes your front and if we all do that there will be enough nice gleaming displays to go around.

Good Management Calls for Economies

Keep the Dough Safe

It is nice to see the coins and folding money roll in at the box-office but it's a heartbreaker to have someone grab it when you're not looking. There is the ever-present danger of a stick-up which may place your or an employe's life in jeopardy.

These tense days of jangled nerves lead the weaker minds into the channels of crime. Vandalism is on the increase among the neglected younger element. In view of these circumstances it is most important to exercise great care in handling box-office receipts.

One of the most important steps is to remove money from the box-office frequently during the business day. Leave a receipt with the cashier each time you do so in order that confusion will be avoided at check-out time. Have the assistant, doorman or manager accompany the cashier from the box-office to carry the money. There is safety in numbers! Be sure to keep the safe locked at all times and seek police escort to a night depository whenever such facilities are available. Remove money from vending machines frequently. A policy of leaving little in the theatre as an incentive for robbery will reduce the hazard tremendously. Don't count too heavily on insurance coverage for under many conditions such insurance is of no effect.

Rubber Mat Care

Preserve the life of those rubber mats by having them taken outdoors to be aired and scrubbed. You can restore the lustre of the color designs with matching enamel followed by an overall coat of clear shellac. Lots of showmen are doing it.

Manpower Development

With the heavy turnover of employes due to the more lucrative employment available in defense industry, a sound policy of manpower development is essential to successful operation. The draft has dipped heavily into theatre manpower as is evidenced by the stars on service flags and honor rolls. The diminishing army of experienced workers that are needed to keep our theatres open presents a most serious problem and further inroads will be made into an already critical supply of personnel. Women are replacing men in many posts of theatre operation but when it comes to the boys in the booth we must be prepared.

Assistants will be getting more scarce and the inexperienced will have to be schooled in the complex duties they will be called upon to perform if the theatres are to maintain a high standard of efficiency and the respect of the community.

People today are tolerant in their acceptance of minor inconveniences but will not stand for mistreatment or lack of consideration for their safety or welfare. The showman and his staff are engaged in the highest type of public relations work and patronage will suffer if courtesy or consideration is not shown toward the patrons. It will be a case of education with the showman in the role of teacher.

Handling U. S. Funds

Government funds and the records pertaining thereto are mighty important. Guard them well, but above all be prompt in making your reports and mailing them , because Uncle Sam has a mighty expensive way of spanking little fellows who don't. Penalties and interest and penalties, you know.

. . . And, Most Important of All

(Here's some advice from Charles H. Ryan, Warner Bros. Theatres, Chicago, and famous in the field for his inspirational as well as his competent leadership in matters of theatre management. It is reprinted with permission from a bulletin issued to managers under his jurisdiction.)

There is now a ready made box-office awaiting anything on celluloid. These lush days in show business will not last forever. With the necessitated roll back to business after the war, everything will become normal again.

Now is the time for business courtesy. When business men commit the unpardonable sin of abusing customers, they are on the road to ruin. The first law of show business is that the customer is the boss and must be pleased at all costs.

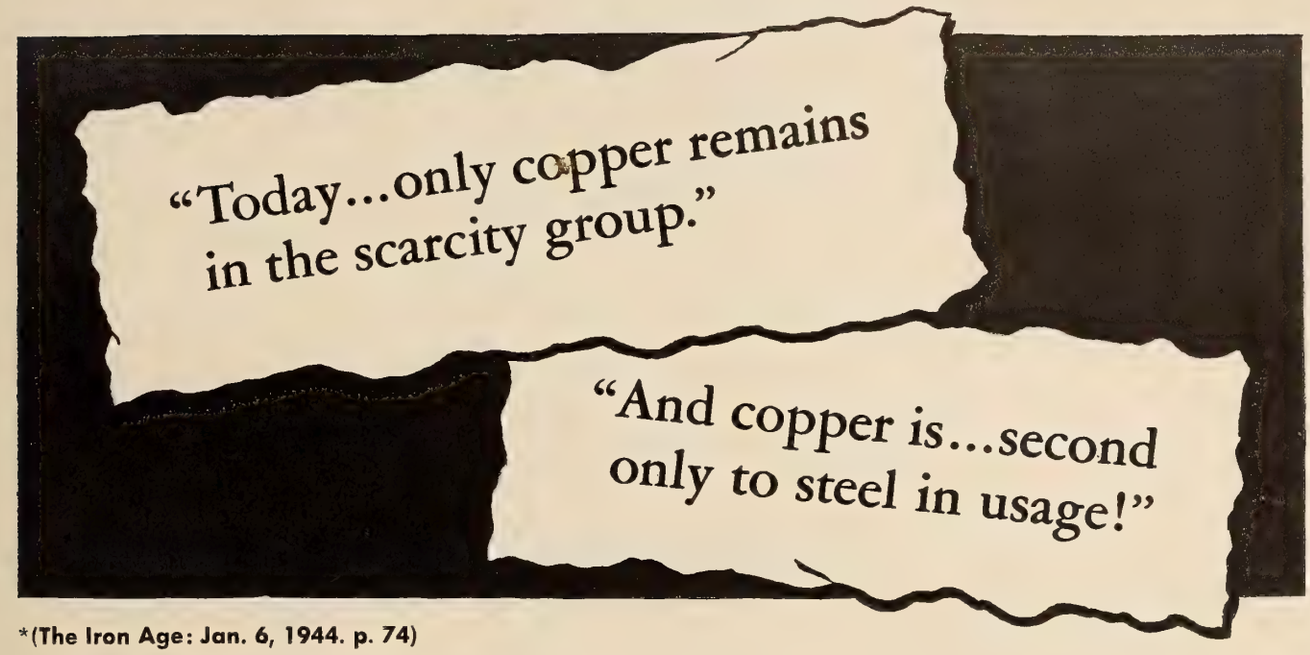
In war time, when in many instances demand exceeds available supply, the customer may not have an immediate opportunity to register his dissatisfaction.

Those who harass customers will be punished by loss of patronage, when after the war, conditions of supply and demand become more normal. Courtesy and good service now, when manpower is scarce and facilities are overcrowded, stand out more than ever. Patrons will long remember the good service of theatres who cater to them in war time.

Some theatres can, by less intelligent personnel, accumulate customer dissatisfaction and ill will, which foreshadows a loss in patronage as soon as abnormal shortages are over.

Most every patron of a theatre realizes that some sort of an effort is being made by the management to make the public comfortable and to cater to their every want, and to so build up the reputation of the theatre, that it will be first in the choice of those who seek entertainment.

The average patron will go along with you; they will sympathize with your work, with your effort to please. They come to your theatre to have a good time; they are in good humor when they meet you. It is your job to keep them that way. A cheerful, kind and courteous answer to the meanest grouch and you are mighty sure to get a kind answer in return. A grouchy person cannot stand up against courtesy and kindness.



"World's Largest Mural" Roxy Display

A mural measuring 100 feet in length and 40 in height, and called by the press agents "The World's Largest Mural," features the display at the Roxy Theatre, New York, for the current showing there of Darryl Zanuck's 20th Century-Fox production, "The Purple Heart." The huge painting shows the eight American flyers who, after bombing Tokyo, were tried in civil court and treated as common murderers by the Japanese.

The display was inspired by Hal Horne, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for 20th Century-Fox. It is composed of 45 individual sections, each section measuring 42 by 16 feet, and has an overall measurement of 4000 square feet. It was painted on a masonite background and required the services of ten individual painters. The face of the Japanese General Matsubi measures 35 feet in height, while the faces of the eight American flyers are ten feet high.

TWO QUOTES* TO REMEMBER!

*(The Iron Age: Jan. 6, 1944. p. 74)

TODAY, "usage" refers primarily to war usage, and "scarcity" is a word of challenge to every American!

That's why we remind you again to save the copper that drops from your Victory and "Orotip" Carbons to the bottom of your lamp housings . . . and to strip off the copper that is left on the stubs you remove from their holders.

Then turn it all in to your distributor, or to your local salvage headquarters, so that it can be put back into war-essential products.

For additional economy of copper, and carbons too, a bulletin describing completely the operation of the Victory High Intensity Carbons . . . "National," "Suprex," and "Orotip,". . . has been in general distribution. If you have not received your copy, write today. National Carbon Company, Inc., Cleveland 1, Ohio, Dept. 12C.

WPB Equipment OK Won't Speed Order

Eligibility of an exhibitor to purchase sound and projection equipment after an okay by the WPB through Limitation Order L-325 does not guarantee that the equipment can immediately be made available to him, it was pointed out recently by Homer B. Snook, manager of theatre equipment sales of the Radio Corporation of America. Manufacturers cannot always supply equipment because they, too, are restricted by the WPB on the amount of such equipment they may make for civilian uses.

"It appears that many exhibitors may have the impression," Mr. Snook said, "that they have only to meet the conditions of eligibility set forth in the order to be assured of delivery." On the contrary, he explained, the availability of equipment is restricted also by WPB limitations.

Procedure under the order, Mr. Snook explained, calls for submission to WPB of pertinent information concerning each order or application placed with the company or its dealers. The order may be entered and delivery made only after approval is received from Washington, and then only if the equipment covered falls within the company's civilian quota.

Blaze Damages Repaired

Repairs of all damages to the Savannah Theatre, Savannah, Ga., were completed this month and the house which had been closed as a result of fire is now operating on regular schedule.

'Then & Now' Comes In Handy

That handsome book titled "Then and Now," published by The Strong Electric Corp., and dedicated by Harry H. Strong, president of the company which manufactures projection lamps, to the campaign for continuous War Bond purchases by all citizens, will come in handy for exhibitors in connection with campaigning for the Fiftieth Anniversary of Motion Pictures, which will occur on April 14, 1944.

The book traces the history of the motion picture, both from the artistic and the technical standpoints and contains material, both pictorial and text, which will serve a valuable purpose for the theatreman who wishes to mark the fiftieth anniversary by some special publicity activity in his community.

"Then and Now," which was published early this year, has been widely distributed by The Strong Electric Corp. to exhibitors throughout the country and comes into new prominence due to the emphasis at this time on the history of motion pictures.

Show Lights Out in Neon—Ky.

The town of Neon, Ky., lost its only movie house in a fire this month, when a blaze of unknown origin destroyed two buildings, including the combination hotel and theatre structure located in the heart of the community of 2000 population. The town has no fire department of its own, and before fire-fighters could reach the scene of the blaze, the two buildings were burned out and one man had lost his life. Virginia Amusement Co., of Hazard, operated the 300-seat theatre.

Clark Theatre Destroyed

The Clark Theatre, Barry, Ill., was one of the casualties from fire during the current month. The theatre, a unit in the Armentrout circuit, was completely burned out. The fire originated in the theatre and town officials estimated that the blaze had been burning for two hours before it was discovered after the closing of the house at 10 p.m.

RADIO CITY THEATRE

serve adequately the demands for the most pretentious stage productions. There is an 85-foot fly gallery with a capacity of 50 lines, or drops. Backstage dressing rooms have a capacity of more than 75 persons, a large lounge room, chorus rooms and shower baths. The stage lighting equipment provided facilities for the lighting of ten acts at one time through a switchboard that cost $12,000 to build and install. All of which details give an idea of how lavish was the hand that fed the patrons of movies in those days of the blue-sky 'twenties.

Under its new guise and name, the theatre undoubtedly merits being called, as did the Minneapolis Star Journal in an editorial a couple of weeks ago, "one of the finest in the country."

The showmanship that will keep the theatre in the public eye has what appears to be a most advantageous foundation in that the theatre people and the radio organization operating KSTP will work in close harmony, with each giving ballyhoo to the other in an arrangement of great mutual value.

The reopening had all the advantages of a good build-up in the city of Minneapolis and its environs. There was a newspaper advertising campaign and the radio, of course, figured importantly in awakening the public to the event that ushered in this new and most sumptuous resort for witnessing the motion picture shows at first-run in the territory.

Forgotten in the surging life of crowds that milled about the big theatre on its reopening day was the five-year period of inertia that marked the gulf between this time and the day when the handsome Minnesota theatre, after knowing glory and great opulence, went dark. Things are brighter there now, as people flock in great numbers to the Radio City Theatre to see and be amazed by the rich spectacle of "Lady in the Dark" in an amusement resort of such spaciousness and rich embellishment as characterized the "golden age" of the movie palace.

Instant-Starting Fluorescent Lamps Soon to Be on Market

An instant-starting 40-watt fluorescent lamp will soon be put into production by the Westinghouse Lamp Division at Bloomfied, N. J., it was announced last week. Limited quantities of the new lamp are expected to be available to exhibitors after May 1.

The lamp will eliminate the need for starters and will operate on a special type of instant-starting ballast. The new instant-starting type has the same rated life as the standard fluorescent lamp using conventional ballasts and starters. Further details concerning the lamps will be announced in the near future.

MAINTENANCE

Ticket Machines

Replenish the thick oil (grease) in motor oil cups once a month.

Check carbon motor brushes monthly and install new brushes if necessary.

Clean out fluff from machine interior once a week. Ticket stock gives off a fluff which if not removed will get into mechanism and jam it.

Place drop or two of thin oil on cutting edges of knives and knife hinges once a week. Be sure to remove surplus oil.

Ticket flaps often stick due to deposits of metal polish, which if permitted to remain will corrode hinges, thus flaps should be cleaned once a week using kerosene, which will act as lubricant as well as solvent for removal of metal polish deposit. Wipe away surplus kerosene after such cleaning.

Motiograph Appoints Cifre, Inc. N.E. Dealer

The appointment of Joe Cifre, Inc., Boston theatre equipment and supply house, as exclusive dealer in the New England film territory has just been announced by Motiograph, Chicago, manufacturers of Motiograph Projectors and Mirrophonic Sound Systems.

Joe Cifre, president and treasurer of the firm bearing his name, has been identified with show business in the New England territory since the days of "The Great Train Robbery," when he worked in the booth of his father's and other theatres in Boston.

L. H. Walters to Manage National's Drive-in Dept.

As the first move of a projected post-war development, W. E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply, has announced that L. H. Walters, now manager of the company's Cleveland office, will head the newly-formed Drive-In-Theatre Department.

L. H. Walters

Lou, as he is familiarly known to the trade, is a veteran in the theatre equipment business, having entered the field 34 years ago. Since joining National in 1926 he has acted as sales representative in the southern Illinois and Kentucky.

Mr. Walters, who is a specialist in projection, was among the pioneers in the development of the Drive-In-Theatre idea and has personally supervised the installation of equipment in many of the country's leading outdoor theatres from coast to coast. He will act as consultant to exhibitors planning post-war Drive-In-Theatres.

Film Conservation Calls For Full Cooperation

SMPE Committee Chairman Cites Need of Exhibitor-Distributor Alertness and Supervision

The rationing of raw film stock has posed a very serious problem which allows for but one solution—conservation. In discussing this all important subject, J. S. McLeod, chairman of the Exchange Practice Committee of the SMPE and manager of Exchange Maintenance Department of Loew's, Inc., brings to light some illuminating facts on the "know how" of print conservation practices.

The wartime need for efficiency in film handling places equal responsibility upon the producer and exhibitor from the first turn of the camera to the return of the film to the exchange by each theatre after showing the picture. The more carefully film is handled, the longer its life. The longer the life of each print, the more reserve raw stock which can be applied against either the production of more pictures or more prints of scheduled pictures thus reducing the number of times a print must be shown and the alleviation of booking bottlenecks.

Supervision Key to Problem

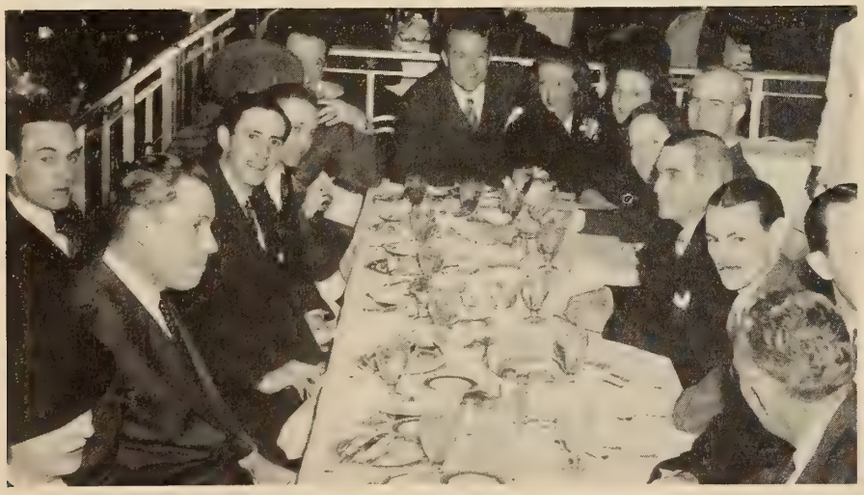
The key to this entire problem is the constant, careful and intelligent supervision and training of manpower. Both branches of the industry, production and exhibition, are suffering under manpower problems. The exchanges have of necessity been training hundreds of film inspectors utilizing the experienced personnel as instructors and supervisors. The same training process is common practice in the projection departments of the theatres. Experienced inspectors are working thousands of hours overtime in an unrelenting effort to keep prints flowing to theatres in top quality condition despite certain handicaps, pointed out Mr. MacLeod.

Patrons are certainly entitled to witness an equally perfect presentation in the neighborhood theatre as they would find in the key city first-runs but to accomplish this quality the exhibitors have an even greater share of the responsibility. This responsibility has two components, one mechanical, the other the human element.

Theatremen have heard so much talk about priorities and the impossibility of replacing equipment, MacLeod points out, that they have either turned a deaf ear to projectionists' request for parts to replace worn units, or the projectionist has refrained from asking due to the "make it last for the duration" complex. More film is damaged annually by bad sprockets, dirty aperture gates and frozen rollers in the film safety valves than from careless handling.

Worn out parts, faulty sprockets, etc., can all be replaced today despite equipment shortages and miles of film can be saved from damage annually if projection equipment is kept under repair and worn parts replaced. MacLeod expressed enthusiasm for the splendid job which most exhibitors and managers as well as projectionists are doing under trying circumstances to cooperate in conserving print quality. Carelessness is the exception rather than the rule, he says.

In recognizing the sensitivity of film which expands and contracts in varying degrees longitudinally and latitudinally under the heat of the arc lights, it is nothing short of amazing what a beating these reels of celluloid are able to withstand in their travels through projectors and from reel to reel on the rewind machines. Film, which is composed of two laminated sheets of delicate material in two different thicknesses (the emulsion and the backing), is easily scratched and easily broken. This is where the human element enters the picture.



SPRING SUPPLIES. As part of the 1944 selling campaign the National Theatre Supply Co., during March and April will feature lobby and box-office supplies in the 28 branches of the company. The window display above is typical of the emphasis that will be put on necessities for brightening up the theatres for spring and summer.

Human Element Involved

Two of the most noticeable weaknesses in the human element is carelessness in rewinding the film before returning it to the exchange and in failure to clean the emulsion from the aperture gates after running each reel. In the former instance the projectionist, in quite understandable haste to get rid of the show on the final run, does not see to it that the edges of the film go onto the reel evenly. The result is that the edges protude from the solid mass every here and there. When the reels are slammed into the cans and the cans are piled high in a delivery truck and slammed off and onto the truck, it often happens that these edges get crushed or bent over, resulting in broken sprocket areas which either necessitates clipping out or replacing a section of the film. In both cases needless splicing is involved.

On the subject of cleaning the aperture gate after each reel is removed. MacLeod points out that if deposits of emulsion are not removed regularly this residue will build up into a solid, diamond-hard mass which will irreparably scratch the entire length of every print that passes through the machine. Another item which falls under the human element heading is cue marks. These are made on all pictures, however, some projectionists prefer to employ their own signals and as a result many prints come back to the exchange with punch holes, crosses, scratch marks and all sorts of unnecessary scars and blemishes which eventually mean that that area of the print must be removed.

Neither producers nor exhibitors are anxious to see undue diminishing of the number of productions or prints and the one certain way to avoid curtailment beyond the confines of raw stock limitations is that of alert conservation by everyone concerned.

Tells Air Audience People Are Safer in Theatre Than at Home

Henry Anderson, manager of the insurance department of Paramount, told radio listeners to the Adelaide Hawley broadcast on WEAF this week that people are safer in theatres than in the home.

Anderson pointed out that ushers employed in a modern motion picture theatre are trained to handle emergencies, and in speaking of studio practice, he declared that Hollywood would never tolerate the unsafe conditions that exist in the home. "A studio mechanic does not open tin cans with carving knives," said Anderson, "and we would not let Mary Martin climb up on a pile of boxes to hang a picture."

Academy of Arts and Sciences Awards Reveal 1943 Progress

Two groups of Hollywood technicians won Class II awards and three units received honorable mention for their achievement during 1943 at the sixteenth annual Awards Presentation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The Class II awards are given, according to the Academy by-laws, "for those achievements which have a definite influence upon the industry," while the Honorable Mention is "in recognition of accomplishments which are important to the progress of the industry."

The awards were determined by the Research Council, with the approval of the Academy Board of Governors, and were presented by Y. Frank Freeman, chairman of the Research Council.

The citations follow:

AWARD IN CLASS II (Plaque)

To: Farciot Edouart, Earl Morgan, Barton Thompson and the Paramount engineering and transparency departments for the development and practical application to motion picture production of a method of duplicating and enlarging natural color photographs, transferring the image emulsions to glass plates and projecting these slides by an especially designed stereopticon equipment.

This whole process from the utilization of the original color photograph to the projection of its corrected duplicate on a translucent screen has provided a successful, accurate and quick method of obtaining a relatively inexpensive natural color background which matches the foreground set. This results in natural color backgrounds projected with sufficient illumination for motion picture color photography, the use of which increases the scope of stereopticon backgrounds, reduces production costs and gives a more natural and improved quality on the screen.

To: Photo Products Department, E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., Inc., for the development of fine grain motion picture films.

The development of fine grain motion picture films has made possible a significant improvement in the quality of sound and picture as heard and seen in the theatre. The physical characteristics of these films are such that the previously inherent film noise has been substantially reduced. This has made possible a more pleasing and faithful reproduction of the original sound and an enhancement of the quality and entertainment value of the finished picture.

AWARD IN CLASS III (Honorable Mention in the Report of the Research Council)

To: Daniel J. Bloomberg and the Republic sound department for the design and development of an inexpensive method of converting Moviolas to class B push pull reproduction.

This method of conversion is noteworthy because of the ingenuity shown in the design and development of a method of converting Moviolas to class B push pull reproduction which is extremely simple and inexpensive.

To: Charles Galloway Clarke and the 20th Century-Fox camera department for the development and practical application of a device for composing artificial clouds into motion picture scenes during production photography.

This device provides a simple and inexpensive method of incorporating artificial clouds into an outdoor scene. The simplicity of the device and the fact that it allows action to take place above the horizon permits a greater freedom of action than is possible by the use of other methods intended for the same purpose. The result is an achievement of artistic and photographic excellence which might not otherwise be obtained.

To: Farciot Edouart and the Paramount transparency department for the automatic electric transparency cueing timer.

This cueing timer, being interlocked into the camera projector system necessary for photographing transparency process shots, can be pre-set to permit exact cueing and automatic electric operation of special effects for matching to the split frame of foreground action to projected background action. Its use results in economies in production by eliminating entirely the human element and removing the possibility of retakes and rebuilding of sets and adds to the quality of the finished picture by matching exactly foreground and background actions.

To: Willard H. Turner and the RKO Radio Pictures sound department for the design and construction of the phono-cue starter.

The phono-cue starter, used in conjunction with a phonograph or acetate playback machine, provides a rapid and precise replacement of the reproducing head to any cue position within the record. The phono-cue starter saves considerable production time and its use greatly increases the life of acetate records.

Where's The Popcorn? It's Down on the Farm

Theatre men wanting to know why there is a popcorn shortage can find the answer at Odebolt, Iowa, known as "The popcorn capital of the world."

Farmers in Sac and Ida counties, leading popcorn producing areas, are holding millions of pounds of the grain from market because of a ceiling price of $3.68 a hundred pounds for corn-on-the-cob.

The $3.68 ceiling price was established by OPA on Dec. 24 after farmers had been getting as much as $7.75 a hundred for the 1942 crop.

The processors claim that popcorn purchased at higher than ceiling prices is handled at a loss. One processor said that the only purchasers who could "make out" on unshelled corn bought at $7.75 were those who obtained it for their own popping machines. Among these, is reported to be a large theatre corporation, claimed to have made a 70 per cent net profit on its sales of popped corn last year.

It was estimated recently that close to 30 million pounds of the corn remains stored in cribs and elevators at Odebolt and at Schaller.

Popcorn production has mounted steadily in recent years, partly because of increased sales in theatres. The 1943 production in Iowa has been estimated at 81 million pounds compared with 67 million in 1942 and an average production of 30 million from 1935 to 1941.

Strand, Palmer, Mass., Dark Ten Years Comes Back to Life

The Strand Theatre, Palmer, Mass., which had been closed for the past ten years, is doing business again, following complete renovation and redecoration.

The theatre is operated by the Ralph Snider interests, which run a string of about 20 theatres in New England.

Among the changes made was the replacement of the old-fashioned square marquee, modernization of the foyer and ticket booth, new seats and a larger screen.

The Mrs. Carries On

Axel Sorenson, owner and operator of the Vogue Theatre in Beresford, S. D., and the Barrymore in nearby Alcester, disposed of his interest in the latter property before being called to the Colors. He has operated the house since 1936. The Vogue in Beresford will be operated by his wife during Sorenson's service with the armed forces.

Marchesi Bros., operating the State Theatre in Freeport, Ill., have acquired a site adjacent to their present house for construction of a new theatre after the war.

New Theatre for Sodus

It is expected that the town of Sodus, N. Y., will have a new theatre in operation by early Summer. The former Opera House there, one of the landmarks of the early legitimate road shows was destroyed by fire this Winter. Samuel Slotnick of Syracuse, is building a new house to carry on his operation in the upstate town.

Report Chains Plan Television For Their Postwar Theatres

Television was seen as a boon to the post-war box-office in a recent survey by the Wall Street Journal. According to the financial publication, theatre television—that is, television shown in theatres with an admission price—will be as important an adjunct to the industry as the home market. Hollywood leaders will embrace television, says the Journal, as a new lift for the box-office. On its part, television will need the film industry because of the acting talent and creative writers controlled by Hollywood.

Film companies who have made a study of television's post-war possibilities have reached the following conclusions, the Journal says:

1. Television need not constitute a threat to the movie business. Instead, if used properly, it can be a boon to theatre attendance.

2. The majority of movie houses after the war will install television equipment.

The question of what kind of television programs would be shown in regular theatres and whether the sight-and-sound shows would entirely supersede films was covered in the survey with the statement that special events—like prizefights—would be televised into the theatre in addition to the regular film show, and prices would be raised accordingly.

"What kind of television programs will be seen in theatres?" the Journal article asks rhetorically. "Movie men say special events such as football games, the World Series, Kentucky Derby, prizefights, track meets, and hockey matches are ideally suited for theatre television.

"Here is how it would work: Assume that the ordinary admission fee of these theatres is 50 cents. But on the day, or night, of a special telecast the price would be, say $1.50. For this the customer would see both the regular movie feature and the special televised event as it was happening. Since there are nearly 18,000 movie houses in the country with some 11.5 million seats the television-movie 'double feature' could easily become a major source of revenue for the film industry."

The prospect of theatre television indicates some sort of control in broadcasting over a large area—that is, control of outlets. This would account for recent steps taken by various radio companies to set up television networks.

This network would form a gigantic web to tie-in the East and West coasts. Plans for the network were outlined recently in an exchange of correspondence between Niles Trammell, president of NBC, and Keith S. McHugh, vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The most significant angle, from the theatreman's viewpoint, is that the basis of the network would be a system of coaxial cables, which gives the broadcaster complete control over the outlets in his community.

Mr. McHugh describes the system as follows: "It is hoped that within the next five years coaxial cables, capable of carrying millions of electrons daubed for television images, will be laid down over diverse routes, snaking through the Eastern seaboard, down the Atlantic coastline, swinging Southward, thence Westward to the Pacific Coast. Television stations in 42 key cities could be tied-in on this first web, thus providing entertainment for literally millions of Americans."

During the past few weeks the Federal Communications Commission has received 14 new applications for television stations, 10 of which are for commercial transmitters. If these are granted it would bring the total of television licenses—commercial, experimental, and relay—to 49 throughout the United States.

Tele In 1950--Maybe

In the face of continued conjecture over the speed with which television will be developed after the war, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., whose research and development work in television reaches back many years into the earliest experimentation with the medium, this week released information to the MPPDA and the industry generally that indicated a national network of television will be technically possible within five years following the end of the war. However, that such network can be built by that time depends, says AT & T, on these factors: if demand justifies the outlay and if manufactured equipment can be supplied.

The Bell System is planning to meet expected demands for long distance telephone service by laying a large amount of coaxial cable. Such equipment is suitable for television transmission. However, says the AT & T statement, "the extent of this construction, where and when it will be undertaken, will depend upon the requirements of the Armed Forces, general business conditions, volume and distribution of long distance messages and other factors.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Humberstone to Direct New Kaye Film; Selznick Editing, Cutting 'Since You Went Away'; Barton Back On Job

Arthur Freed is preparing a Mexican musical at MGM for an outstanding production. The title will be "Holiday in Mexico" and a big all-star cast of singers and dancers will be signed for the film.

Because all stages at the home studio will be in use, Monogram has leased space at the Gordon Street studio for the filming of the "Call of the Jungle," Krasna-Burkett production starring Anne Corio.

With Sidney Lanfield directing, the Golden Gate Quartet sang their own novel arrangement of The Preacher and the Bear as a part of "Bring on the Girls," which stars Veronica Lake, Eddie Bracken, Sonny Tufts and Marjorie Reynolds. The Technicolor picture also features Spike Jones and his City Slickers.

Henry Hull, Broadway stage veteran, completes the cast for Republic's "Good Night, Sweetheart." Robert Livingstone and Ruth Terry have the romantic leads, and with Hull in principal supporting roles are Robert Armstrong, Lloyd Corrigan and Maude Eburne. Joseph Santley handles the direction, with Eddy White watching over the production.

Samuel Goldwyn has borrowed Bruce "Lucky" Humberstone from 20th Century-Fox to direct "The Wonder Boy," next starring vehicle for Danny Kaye, who made his bow in "Up in Arms." Story will present Kaye as a grown-up Quiz Kid who knows everything but the facts of life.

"Take It or Leave It," the Phil Baker special which 20th Century-Fox will produce, is approaching the day of starting, and as supporting players Phil has thus far been given Marjorie Massow, Eddie Ryan and Stanley Prager.

David O. Selznick is personally cutting and editing "Since You Went Away," story of the American home front with an all-star cast including Claudette Colbert, Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten, Shirley Temple, Monty Woolley, Lionel Barrymore and Robert Walker, which Director John Cromwell completed recently. Film has a running time of approximately three and one-quarter hours.

Universal Producer John Grant has begun preparation of his next picture, "Bowery to Broadway," formerly called "Hip, Hip, Hooray," which is scheduled to get under way about April 18. Grant has been helping MGM out with some dialogue and routines for Abbott and Costello's "Lost in a Harem."

Warners have bought Rita Weiman's Cosmopolitan magazine novelette, "One Man's Secret" and assigned it to Jerry Wald for immediate production. Studio also assigned production of the Vicki Baum novel, "Hotel Berlin—1943," this one to Hal B. Wallis, who will make it this Spring with Herman Shumlin directing.

Next starring vehicle for Ann Miller at Columbia will be a musical entitled "Eadie Was a Lady," story about a girl who works her way through college by dancing in burlesque at night. The picture will be first produced at Columbia by Michael Kraike, who just left Paramount.

Jack Schwarz's next production for PRC will be "In Mexico It's Different," a comedy which he will start work on March 28. He will announce cast and director within a few days.

Nat Shilkret has been assigned to score MGM's "Three Men in White," with Lionel Barrymore, Van Johnson, and Marilyn Maxwell. Willis Goldbeck is directing.

Production crew for the Monogram film, "The Girl Next Door" as set by Producer Scott R. Dunlap, includes Charles J. Bigelow, production manager; William Beaudine, director; and William Strohbach, assistant director.

Betty Hutton will record an album of popular favorites for Capital Records. She has already disced the old-time tunes from Paramount's "Incendiary Blonde" in which she is co-starred with Arturo de Cordova.

Cinematographer John Alton has gone to Lake Placid, N. Y., with a camera crew to film Winter sports backgrounds for the forthcoming Republic picture, "Lake Placid." Film bore the temporary title of "Gay Blades."

Producer Ben Hersh is seeking a new title for the Lum and Abner vehicle now called "Country Boys" and meanwhile plans are being rushed toward a starting date of April 10th. Charles "Chuck" Roberts is working on the original story.

Producer William Le Baron's production of "Sweet and Low Down" at 20th Century-Fox is moving fast, with Archie Mayo handling direction. Picture has a cast featuring Benny Goodman and band, Jack Oakie, Lynn Bari, Linda Darnell, James Cardwell, Allyn Joslyn, John Campbell and Roy Benson.

Lester Cowan has engaged Ira Uhr as casting director for "Here Is Your War" now being made from Ernie Pyle's best seller and battle-front dispatches, and "Tomorrow the World" from the New York stage hit, both United Artists releases.

Edward Ward has been assigned as musical director of Olson and Johnson's current comedy, "The Ghost Catchers," by Don George, head of Universal's music department. Pre-scoring is already under way.

First reprint edition of 25,000 copies of "The Adventures of Mark Twain" has been completely sold out. Book, tied in with Warners' picture of the same name, produced by Jesse Lasky, starring Fredric March and Alexis Smith, goes into reprint second edition.

Charles Barton has been placed on the active list at Columbia after a siege of illness and his next assignment will be the direction of "Louisiana Hayride," musical starring Judy Canova, which is slated to begin latter part of March.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

We're going to visit the set of the Technicolor picture, "The Climax," over at Universal, for there we'll meet Susanna Foster and Turhan Bey.

Story is about a noted physician who killed a famous opera diva years before because she scorned him and now he's trying to ruin Susanna's career because her voice reminds him of the dead woman.

The scene we enter is her dressing room, with its ornate French furnishings. In the centre is a chaise lounge and over to one side a large gold piano.

Producer-Director George Waggner, who also wrote the lyrics for the music used, has just finished giving Susanna and Turhan Bey their next instructions. Both players then walk off the set and wait in a doorway for their cue.

With Waggner's call for "camera—action," Susanna comes through the doorway, walking slowly into the room, tears running down her cheeks. As she sits down on the lounge, Turhan Bey comes rushing in demanding to know what's happened to her voice. She says she cannot sing anymore, so he, to prove how wrong she is, rushes over to the piano and starts to play. Encouraged, she joins him, singing in good voice until she happens to glance at the door . . . then she stops abruptly, for she's supposed to see Boris Karloff there.

At this point Waggner interrupts for some extra instructions, so the scene is gone over again, thus giving us a chance to hear Susanna's glorious voice a second time. When the director says "cut," that's the signal that the scene is finished and satisfactory.

While he talks to the players, we give Susanna the once-over to see what she's wearing. It's a nineteenth century dress with its full, floor-sweeping skirt; fitted bodice which gives her an hour glass figure and leg-of-mutton sleeves. But the style changes when it comes to her hair and hat, for like most of us today, the hair is worn in a pompadour and the hat is set right on top . . . even as you and I.

We wander around the stage peeking into corners and discover the set which is used as Karloff's home. Most of the furnishings there were bought from an old estate and are all beautifully carved walnut.

Then we meander back to the set, meet and talk to stars and director. When the announcement comes that it's lunchtime, we go to the commissary with the rest of the cast.

Until next week.

Paramount Plans a Sequel to 'Our Hearts Were Young and Gay'

Paramount has closed a deal with Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough to film a sequel to "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," recently completed by Paramount with Gail Russell and Diana Lynn playing the two young heroines. The sequel, titled "Our Hearts Were Growing Up," will present Miss Russell and Miss Lynn and their romantic interests of the preceding picture, James Brown and Bill Edwards.

Dwight Mitchell Wiley and Frank Waldman are at work on an original screen story carrying on the amusing adventures of Misses Skinner and Kimbrough after their return from Europe. The period of the new picture will be around 1925.

Paramount Signs Joan Caulfield

Joan Caulfield, seen on Broadway for two years in the George Abbott production, "Kiss and Tell," has been signed by Paramount and will report to the studio June 1.

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO ROUND-UP

"Ringside" (PRC) now THE CONTENDER.

Completes Screen Treatment

Moss Hart, eminent dramatist, has gone back to New York after completing the screen treatment of "Winged Victory" the Air Forces show currently running on Broadway. Twentieth Century-Fox paid $1,000,000 for "Winged Victory," and will turn over all profits to Army charity. The GI cast will be featured in the screenplay just as they were in the stage original.

Ginger Rogers in 'Furlough'

Ginger Rogers has taken over the lead role in "Double Furlough" in place of Joan Fontaine, originally announced. Produced by Dore Schary at Vanguard, the picture will start under the direction of William Dieterle on or about March 29. The Selznick-Vanguard picture is from a radio sketch by Charles Martin, with screenplay by Marion Parsonnet.

Helen Walker Gets Role

Anna Lee, announced for the feminine lead opposite William Bendix and Dennis O'Keefe in "Abroad With Two Yanks," has withdrawn and her part filled by Helen Walker, under loan from Paramount. Edward Small will produce and Allan Dwan direct.

To Again Film 'Virginian'

Paramount will film Owen Wister's western classic, "The Virginian," as a spectacular Technicolor production, with James Brown starring in the title role and Gail Russell playing the feminine stellar role.

Ballerina Toumanova and noted composer-conductor Daniele Amfitheatrof found much of mutual interest to discuss when they met during the recording of the musical score for "Days of Glory," Casey Robinson's RKO Radio feature in which she makes her screen debut as co-star with Gregory Peck. Amfitheatrof wrote score.

Six Musical Features on Way From Warners; One Completed

In addition to "Shine On, Harvest Moon," now having its world premiere showing at the New York Strand and scheduled for general release April 8, Warner Bros. has six musical features on the way for the escapist entertainment of the nation.

Next to be released will be the George Gershwin biographical film, "Rhapsody in Blue," which has just been completed with Robert Alda as Gershwin and Joan Leslie playing opposite him.

Five other musicals, now being prepared for shooting, are "Sometimes I'm Happy," the story and music of Vincent Youmans, to be produced by Arthur Schwartz as his first assignment at Warners; "Henrietta the Eighth," starring Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning; "The Life of Cole Porter," which will include the composer's leading song hits of the past as well as new numbers written especially for this production; "Silver Lining," tentative title for the story of Marilyn Miller, Ziegfeld Follies star, and "Mr. Broadway," the Sime Silverman (Variety) biography which will be a cavalcade of show business.

Wm. Howard Signed to Direct 'When Lights Come On Again'

William K. Howard has been signed by Leon Fromkess, PRC roduction chief, to direct "When the Lights Come On Again," inspired by the song of the same name. More than half a million dollars will be placed at Director Howard's disposal in filming the screenplay by Milton Lazarus from Frank Craven's original story.

Howard will start production around April 15. He intends going after top-flight stars for his first PRC picture, the story of which is being kept a guarded secret.

Woolfenden Going to Columbia

John Woolfenden will go to Columbia as assistant publicity director, Whitney Bolton, publicity director, has announced. Position was vacated by Don King when he left to take over Selznick publicity department. Woolfenden comes from Paramount, where he was an ace unit man, and before that he worked for a number of years at MGM.

IN HOLLYWOOD IT'S NEWS...

Says Ed Raiden

That . . . Leonard Levinson, well-known radio and screen writer, has gone "Abroad With Two Yanks" . . . King Bros. and Monogram made the March 18 issue of Saturday Evening Post, with the Kings of the juke-box vignetted . . . Mort Stein, formerly Warner press agent, is out on his own, publicity free-lancing . . . Goldwyn has spotted Virginia Mayo opposite Bob Hope in "Sylvester the Great" . . . Viola Petit of the Royal Asiatic Society of England will serve as technical adviser on "Dorian Gray"—what's the Asiatic Society got to do with Dorian Gray? . . . Warners' brochure, "Up and Coming," seems to be exactly that, with Zellerback Paper Company saying it is the best of its kind they've ever seen . . . Eleanor Powell wears $22.50 pre-war price nylon hose in "Sensations of 1944" and that's sensational hose . . . John Wayne will return to Republic in April after three months entertaining the boys in the South Pacific . . . James M. Cain, author of "Double Indemnity," a story about a wife who murders her husband, advised Barbara Stanwyck, who played the part, "Your Phyllis was exactly as I had originally visualized the character"—should she be flattered? . . . Jack Skirball is back after opening his play, "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," in association with the Theatre Guild . . . Paul Small, who produced the Ed Wynn show, "Laughtime," has bought "Halls of Montezuma" . . . Bill Goodwin will be in "A Medal for Benny" . . . From now on, "Wally Walrus," the Walt Lantz Cartune character, will have a Swedish accent, for Lantz has signed Victor Borge to do the voice . . . Trem Carr, executive director of Monogram, says the studio will do "Are These Your Parents?" and "Should a Daughter Tell?"—looks like the studios are going to take a crack at all the members of the family, one at a time . . . Bill Pine and Bill Thomas have selected "Dragnet" as a new starrer for Chester Morris . . . Mona Maris gets the first sympathetic role of her career in "The Falcon in Mexico" . . . Frank Latimore, who worked in the stage shows, "Janie" and "Dark Eyes," is now in "In the Meantime, Darling" . . . Roy William Neill will make Conan Doyle's "Five Orange Pits" into "The Murder Club"—which sounds like a mysterious way of doing things . . . Jane Frazee goes west for Columbia in "Under Western Skies" . . . J. Carroll Naish and John Carradine will menace the "Waterfront" for PRC . . . Fred Astaire does his own dance number, If Swing Goes, I Go Too, a solo in "Ziegfeld Follies" . . . William Marshall has been borrowed by International for "Belle of the Yukon"—he is the husband of Michele Morgan . . . Richard Loo, who played the Japanese General in "Purple Heart," reforms in "Keys of the Kingdom."

To Film Life of Youmans

Warner Bros. have purchased rights to produce a picture based on the life of Vincent Youmans, famous composer. The film will be titled "Sometimes I'm Happy," and will be a cavalcade of Youman's tunes including Tea for Two and songs from such operettas as "No, No, Nanette" and "Hit the Deck." Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan will be reunited in the leading roles.

'Kenny' to Start by Nov. 1

"Elizabeth Kenny" will be made at RKO not later than November 1st, with Rosalind Russell starring in the role of the famous Australian nurse. This announcement followed a conference between Miss Kenny, Miss Russell and Charles Koerner, executive vice-president in charge of production.

Jennifer Jones as 'Laura'

Jennifer Jones, winner of the motion picture Academy Award for her performance in "The Song of Bernadette," has been chosen by 20th Century-Fox to play the title role in the forthcoming production of "Laura," based on the novel by Vera Caspary. Rouben Mamoulian will direct.

Advance Dope (SIB)

TUCSON RAIDERS (Rep.) Western. Principals: Bill Elliott, George Hayes, Bobby Blake, Alice Fleming, LeRoy Mason. Director, Spencer Bennet. Plot: When the citizens of Painted Valley are unable to rid themselves of the tyranny of their territorial Governor and his unidentified henchmen, they send for a Federal Commissioner to come and help. Everything from stagecoach robbery to murder is committed by the crooks to prevent the arrival of the man, but they're eventually caught, thrown in jail, and the town becomes a peaceful place again.

CASANOVA BROWN (RKO) Comedy. Principals: Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, Frank Morgan, Patricia Collinge, Isabel Elsom. Director, Sam Wood. Plot: A shy, young small-towner returns from a trip to New York with his love affairs terribly involved. While there he had met and married, within three days, the daughter of a very social family. Her parents made it so miserable for them, that he was forced to leave and so went back home. The girl back home, knowing nothing of this, expects to marry him; his wife has a baby and he steals it and then when it looks as though the authorities are about to nab him for kidnapping, he proposes to a chambermaid in the hotel at which he's stopping.

SOUTH OF DIXIE (Univ.) Comedy. Principals: David Bruce, Jerome Cowan, Anne Gwynne, Marie Harmon, George Cleveland. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Plot: To prevent their music publishing business from folding, one of the partners dreams up a colorful story of the other man's life and sells it to a motion picture company. He then takes the man through the South, as a publicity stunt. There, as a member of an old Southern family, he runs into trouble because of a feud and a southern gal who falls for him. To his surprise when he finally confesses the hoax, the motion picture company still want his story and his girl welcomes him back with open arms.

MARRIAGE IS A PRIVATE AFFAIR (MGM) Drama. Principals: Lana Turner, John Hodiak, James Craig, Frances Gifford, Natalie Shafer, Morris Ankrum. Director, Robert Z. Leonard. Plot: The gay, irresponsible daughter of a socially prominent family marries a young Army Air Corps Lieutenant. Her flighty notions of marriage mars their bliss because he, given an Army discharge on account of a vitally important secret job he must do, has to buck down to hard work. When she meets another man and he confesses his love, she decides to get a divorce. She realizes before it's too late, that it is her husband she really loves, so she puts through a long distance call to him in Australia, where he is fighting with his old Air Corps Squadron.

TROCADERO (Rep.) Drama. Principals: Rosemary Lane, Johnny Downs, Ralph Morgan, Dick Purcell, Ida James, Marjorie Manners. Director, William Nigh. Plot: The owner of a speakeasy, in prohibition days, loses his business when the law is repealed. This breaks his health, but he rejoices in the fact that he had the foresight to provide for the future of his step-children. After his death, the boy goes to college and the girl and an old friend take over the place. Then, when the boy is finished with his education, he comes back to help turn the place into a swanky nightclub; while the girl marries the orchestra leader.

The Opera, Havana, Cuba

the show must go on, because the march to Victory must go forward!

On this isle of democracy, solidly aligned with her sister republics of Pan America in the common fight for freedom, some 400 motion picture theatres are contributing, through their screens, visually and valuably to the ultimate triumph.

From Guadiana Bay to the Windward Channel, citizens and travelers alike will find Simplex Equipment operating smoothly and efficiently wherever the starred emblem of Cuba flies.
